Proposed Amendment — 125(1)(b)(ii)

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 117(1), will amend subpara. 125(1)(b)(ii) to substitute "three times" for " $\frac{1}{4}$ of", applicable to 2003 et seq.

Technical Notes: Under subsection 125(1), a CCPC's small business deduction for a taxation year is calculated as 16% of the least of three amounts. One of these, set out in paragraph 125(1)(b), is the amount by which the corporation's taxable income for the year exceeds income that has supported a foreign tax credit (FTC) or that is statutorily exempt from tax. The amount of income that has supported an FTC is determined by multiplying the corporation's FTCs for the year (subject to certain adjustments) by a factor that reflects an assumed rate of tax. For FTCs in respect of foreign non-business income, the factor is currently $\frac{1}{3}$, reflecting an assumed tax rate of 30%. For business-income FTCs, the factor is currently $\frac{1}{4}$, which reflects an assumed tax rate of 40%.

Subparagraph 125(1)(b)(ii) is amended to adjust the factor for foreign business income, as part of a series of amendments reflecting recent and planned reductions in income tax rates. The factor for business-income FTCs will become 3. This implies an assumed tax rate of 33.3%.

(iii) the amount, if any, of the corporation's taxable income for the year that is not, because of an Act of Parliament, subject to tax under this Part, and

(c) the corporation's business limit for the year.

(5.1) Business limit reduction — Notwithstanding subsections (2) to (5), a Canadian-controlled private corporation’s business limit for a particular taxation year ending in a calendar year is the amount, if any, by which its business limit otherwise determined for the particular year exceeds the amount determined by the formula

$$A \times \frac{B}{$11,250}$$

where

A is the amount that would, but for this subsection, be the corporation’s business limit for the particular year; and

B is

(a) where the corporation is not associated with any other corporation in the particular year, the amount that would, but for subsections 181.1(2) and (4), be the corporation’s tax payable under Part I.3 for its preceding taxation year, and

(b) where the corporation is associated with one or more other corporations in the particular year, the total of all amounts each of which would, but for subsections 181.1(2) and (4), be the tax payable under Part I.3 by the corporation or any such other corporation for its last taxation year ending in the preceding calendar year.

Proposed Amendment — 125(5.1)B

B is the amount determined by the formula

$$0.225\% \times (D - $10 \text{ million})$$

D is

(a) if, in both the particular taxation year and the preceding taxation year, the corporation is not associated with any corporation, the taxable capital employed in Canada (within the meaning assigned by subsection 181.2(1) or 181.3(1) or section 181.4, as the case may be) of the corporation for the preceding taxation year,

(b) if, in the particular taxation year, the corporation is not associated with any corporation but was associated with one or more corporations in the preceding taxation year, the taxable capital employed in Canada (within the meaning assigned by subsection 181.2(1) or 181.3(1) or section 181.4, as the case may be) of the corporation for the particular taxation year, or

(c) if, in the particular taxation year, the corporation is associated with one or more particular corporations, the total of all amounts each of which is the taxable capital employed in Canada (within the meaning assigned by subsection 181.2(1) or 181.3(1) or section 181.4, as the case may be) of the corporation or of any of the particular corporations for its last taxation year that ended in the preceding calendar year.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 117(2), will amend the description of B in subsec. 125(5.1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after December 20, 2002, except that, in its application to a corporation described in subsec. 181.1(3) for taxation years of the corporation that began before former Bill C-10 is assented to, the description of B shall be read as follows:

(a) if, in both the particular taxation year and the preceding taxation year, the corporation is not associated with any corporation, the amount that would, but for subsections 181.1(2) and (4), be the corporation's tax payable under Part I.3 for the preceding taxation year,

(b) if, in the particular taxation year, the corporation is not associated with any corporation but was associated with one or more corporations in the preceding taxation year, the amount that would, but for subsections 181.1(2) and (4), be the corporation's tax payable under Part I.3 for the particular taxation year, and

(c) if, in the particular taxation year, the corporation is associated with one or more particular corporations, the amount determined by the formula

where

D is the total of all amounts each of which is the taxable capital employed in Canada (within the meaning assigned by subsection 181.2(1) or 181.3(1) or section 181.4, as the case may be) of the corporation or of any of the particular corporations for its last taxation year that ended in the preceding calendar year, and

E is $10 million.

Technical Notes: A corporation's entitlement to the small business deduction for a particular taxation year is determined by reference to, among other things, the "business limit" of the corporation for the particular year. In broad terms, subsection 125(5.1) reduces the business limit of a corporation if tax under Part I.3 of the Act was payable by the corporation for its preceding taxation year. If the corporation is associated with one or more other corporations in the particular year, the provision takes into account the Part I.3 tax payable by it and those other corporations, in each case for their last taxation years that ended in the preceding calendar year.

Subsection 125(5.1) is amended to respond better to cases in which a corporation is associated with more, fewer or different corporations in one taxation year than in the past. Specifically, the description of B in the formula in the subsection — a description that in effect refers to an amount of tax under Part I.3 — will take one of three forms, depending on the corporation's associations in the current and, in some cases, the preceding taxation year:

- if the corporation is not associated with any other corporation in the current year, and was not associated with any other corporation in the preceding taxation year, the description of B is based on the corporation's Part I.3 tax for the preceding taxation year;
- if the corporation is not associated with any other corporation in the current year, but was so associated in the preceding taxation year, the description of B is based on the corporation's Part I.3 tax for the current year; and
- if the corporation is associated with one or more corporations in the current year, the description of B is the product of a formula that looks to the total taxable capital employed in Canada of the corporation itself and all the corporations with which it is associated in the current year, in each case for its last taxation year that ended in the preceding calendar year.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 118(1), will amend subpara. 125.1(1)(b)(ii) to replace “ $\frac{1}{4}$ of” with “3 times”, applicable to 2003 et seq.

Technical Notes: Subsection 125.1(1) provides the basic rules for the calculation of a corporation's manufacturing and processing profits deduction. The deduction for a given taxation year is the lesser of two amounts, one of which is the corporation's taxable income less certain other amounts. One of these other amounts, described in subparagraph 125.1(1)(b)(ii), is the grossed up amount of the corporation's foreign tax credits (FTCs) for the year in respect of foreign businesses. Currently, the corporation's FTCs are grossed up by a factor of $\frac{1}{4}$, which assumes this income was subject to tax at a rate of 40%.

Subparagraph 125.1(1)(b)(ii) is amended to adjust this factor to reflect recent reductions to income tax rates. The new factor will be 3, which implies an assumed tax rate of 33.3% on foreign source business income.

(iii) where the corporation was a Canadian-controlled private corporation throughout the year, its aggregate investment income for the year (within the meaning assigned by subsection 129(4)).

History: S. 125.11 repealed by 2003, c. 28, subsec. 13(2), applicable to taxation years that begin after 2006. S. 125.11 formerly read:

125.11 (1) Definitions — The following definitions apply in section 123.4 and this section.

“resource rate reduction percentage”, of a corporation for a taxation year, is the total of Proposed Amendment — 125.11(1) “taxable resource income”

“taxable resource income”, of a taxpayer for a taxation year, is the lesser of

- the amount, if any, by which the taxpayer’s taxable income for the taxation year exceeds 100/16 of the amount deducted under subsection 125(1) from the taxpayer’s tax otherwise payable under this Part for the year, and
- the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is deducted by the taxpayer under paragraph 20(1)(v.1) in computing the taxpayer’s income for the taxation year,

B is the percentage that is the total of

- that proportion of 100% that the number of days in the taxation year that are before 2003 is of the number of days in the taxation year,
- that proportion of 90% that the number of days in the taxation year that are in 2003 is of the number of days in the taxation year,
- that proportion of 75% that the number of days in the taxation year that are in 2004 is of the number of days in the taxation year,
- that proportion of 65% that the number of days in the taxation year that are in 2005 is of the number of days in the taxation year, and
- that proportion of 35% that the number of days in the taxation year that are in 2006 is of the number of days in the taxation year,

C is total of all amounts included in computing the taxpayer’s income for the taxation year under paragraph 59(3.2)(b) or (c),

D is the total of all amounts deducted by the taxpayer under any of sections 65 to 66.7, other than subsections 66(4), 66.21(4) and 66.7(2) and (2.3), of this Act, and subsections 17(2) and (6) and section 29 of the Income Tax Application Rules, in computing the taxpayer’s income for the taxation year, and

E is 100/16 of the amount deducted under subsection 125(1) from the taxpayer’s tax otherwise payable under this Part for the year.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), s. 119, will amend the definition “taxable resource income” in subsec. 125.11(1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after February 27, 2004 and before 2007.

Technical Notes: Section 125.11 has the effect of reducing the federal corporate income tax rate for income earned from resource activities from 28% to 21% by 2007. This is accomplished for the years 2003-2006 by providing a deduction against the 28% rate for income that falls within the definition of “taxable resource income”. After 2006 resource income will be included in full-rate taxable income and be subject to the general rate reduction rules.

Currently, a taxpayer’s “taxable resource income” is the lesser of the taxpayer’s taxable income for the taxation year and the amount calculated by the following formula: $3(A/B) + C - D$. A represents the deduction taken as a resource allowance under paragraph 20(1)(v.1). B is a reduction of the resource allowance, which is being phased out between 2003 and 2006, prorated for non-calendar year-ends. C represents additions to the taxpayer’s income resulting from negative resource pools. Lastly, D is any amounts deducted from income on account of resource pools.

The definition “taxable resource income” is being amended to ensure that resource income that was earned by a Canadian-controlled private corporation (CCPC) and received a small business deduction under section 125(1) is not also eligible for this rate reduction. The result is that a taxpayer’s “taxable resource income” will now be the lesser of two amounts. The first amount is the taxpayer’s taxable income for the year less 100/16 of the amount the taxpayer deducted from tax payable pursuant to section 125(1). The second amount is calculated by the formula $3(A/B) + C - D - E$. Elements A to D are unchanged from the previous formula contained in this definition, and remain as described above. New element E is 100/16 of the amount deducted from tax otherwise payable pursuant to subsection 125(1). This amendment ensures that resource income earned by a CCPC can only benefit from one rate reduction.

(2) Resource deduction — There may be deducted from a corporation’s tax otherwise payable under this Part for a taxation year [2003-06 only — ed.] the product obtained by multiplying the corporation’s resource rate reduction percentage for the taxation year by the corporation's taxable resource income for the taxation year.

S. 125.11 added by 2003, c. 28, subsec. 13(1), applicable to 2003 et seq. except that, for those taxation years that begin before June 9, 2003, the value of C in the formula in the definition "taxable resource income" in subsec. 125.11(1) is deemed to be nil.

125.2 (1) Deduction of [pre-1992] Part VI tax — There may be deducted in computing the tax payable under this Part for a taxation year by a corporation that was throughout the year a financial institution (within the meaning assigned by section 190) an amount equal to such part as the corporation claims of its unused Part VI tax credits for any of its 7 immediately preceding taxation years ending before 1992, to the extent that that amount does not exceed the amount, if any, by which

(a) its tax payable under this Part (determined without reference to this section) for the year

exceeds the total of

(b) the amount that would, but for subsection 190.1(3), be its tax payable under Part VI for the year, and

(c) the lesser of its Canadian surtax payable (within the meaning assigned by subsection 125.3(4)) for the year and the amount that would, but for subsection 181.1(4), be its tax payable under Part I.3 for the year.

Related Provisions: 181.1(4)–(7) — Credit of surtax against Part VI tax after 1991. See also at end of 125.2.

Special Application: 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), s. 102 provides that in its application to corporations described in para. (d) or (e) of the definition "financial institution" in subsec. 190(1), for taxation years beginning before February 21, 1990, subsec. 125.2(1) shall be read as follows:

Canadian Film or Video Production Tax Credit

125.4 (1) Definitions — The definitions in this subsection apply in this section.

“assistance” means an amount, other than a prescribed amount or an amount deemed under subsection (3) to have been paid, that would be included under paragraph 12(1)(x) in computing a taxpayer's income for any taxation year if that paragraph were read without reference to subparagraphs (v) to (vii).

Proposed Amendment — 125.4(1) “assistance”

“assistance” means an amount, other than a prescribed amount or an amount deemed under subsection (3) to have been paid, that would be included under paragraph 12(1)(x) in computing a taxpayer's income for any taxation year if that paragraph were read without reference to

(a) subparagraphs 12(1)(x)(v) to (viii), if the amount were received

(i) from a person or partnership described in subparagraph 12(1)(x)(ii), or

(ii) in circumstances where clause 12(1)(x)(i)(C) applies; and

(b) subparagraphs 12(1)(x)(v) to (vii), in any other case.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 120(2), will amend the definition “assistance” in subsec. 125.4(1) to read as above, applicable

(a) to film or video productions for which the production commencement time of the corporation (or, if there is more than one qualified corporation in respect of the production, of all such corporations) is after November 13, 2003, and

(b) to a corporation in respect of a film or video production for which the production commencement time of any corporation is before November 14, 2003

(i) if the earliest labour expenditure of the corporation (or, if there is more than one qualified corporation in respect of the production, of all such corporations) in respect of the production is made after 2003, or

(ii) if the corporation elects (or, if there is more than one qualified corporation in respect of the production, all such corporations jointly elect), in writing, and the election is filed with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the earliest filing-due date of any qualified corporation in respect of the production for that corporation's taxation year that includes the day on which the amending legislation is assented to, and the earliest labour expenditure of all such qualified corporations in respect of the production is made

(A) after the last taxation year of any such corporation that ended before November 14, 2003, or

(B) if the first taxation year of all such corporations includes November 14, 2003, in that taxation year.

The earliest labour expenditure referred to above is to be determined under the provisions of subsec. 125.4(1) or (2) that would apply if the amendments to 125.4 “assistance”, “labour expenditure”, “production commencement time”, “qualified labour expenditure”, “salary or wages” and “script material”, and to subsec. 125.4(2) were not enacted.

Technical Notes: Section 125.4 sets out the rules that apply for the purpose of computing the Canadian film or video production tax credit (“CFVPTC”). Generally, this tax credit is available at a rate of 25% of qualified labour expenditures incurred by a qualified corporation for a production certified by the Minister of Canadian Heritage to be a Canadian film or video production.

Except as noted below, the amendments to subsection 125.4 generally apply in respect of productions for which development commences on or after November 14, 2003 or the first labour expenditures (as determined under subsections 125.4(1) and (2) as they applied before that date — the “old rules”) of the production corporation are incurred after 2003. As well, if development commenced before November 14, 2003 and the first labour expenditures (as defined under the old rules) were incurred by the corporation in its taxation year that includes November 14, 2003, the corporation may elect to have the new rules apply. Subject to this election, corporations must continue to claim the CFVPTC under the old rules for productions that qualified under those rules. Where, in the case of a co-production, more than one qualified corporation is eligible to claim a CFVPTC in respect of the production, the election to have the new rules apply must be made jointly. A production cannot qualify under both schemes.

In computing the CFVPTC, qualified labour expenditures in respect of a film or video production are limited to 48% of the amount by which the cost of the production exceeds any “assistance” in respect of that cost that has not been repaid.

The definition “assistance” is amended to provide that the equity share of a production of a government or other public authority is treated in the same manner as government assistance. This could include, for example, a loan from a government agency where repayment of the loan is dependent on profit from the production.

History: The definition “assistance” in subsec. 125.4(1) amended by 1999, c. 22, s. 46, applicable to amounts received after February 23, 1998. It formerly read:

“assistance” means an amount, other than an amount deemed under subsection (3) to have been paid, that would be included under paragraph 12(1)(x) in computing the income of a taxpayer for any taxation year if that paragraph were read without reference to subparagraphs (v) to (vii).

“Canadian film or video production certificate” means a certificate issued in respect of a production by the Minister of Canadian Heritage

- (a) certifying that the production is a Canadian film or video production, and
- (b) estimating amounts relevant for the purpose of determining the amount deemed under subsection (3) to have been paid in respect of the production.

Proposed Amendment — 125.4(1) “Canadian film or video production certificate”

“Canadian film or video production certificate” means a certificate issued in respect of a production by the Minister of Canadian Heritage certifying that the production is a Canadian film or video production in respect of which that Minister is satisfied that

- (a) except where the production is a treaty co-production (as defined by regulation), an acceptable share of revenues from the exploitation of the production in non-Canadian markets is, under the terms of any agreement, retained by
 - (i) a qualified corporation that owns or owned an interest in, or for civil law a right in, the production,
 - (ii) a prescribed taxable Canadian corporation related to the qualified corporation, or
 - (iii) any combination of corporations described in subparagraph (i) or (ii); and
- (b) public financial support of the production would not be contrary to public policy.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 120(3), will amend the definition “Canadian film or video production certificate” in subsec. 125.4(1) to read as above, applicable in respect of film or video productions in respect of which certificates are issued by the Minister of Canadian Heritage after December 20, 2002, except that in respect of those film or video productions in respect of which certificates are issued by the Minister of Canadian Heritage before 2004, the definition “Canadian film or video production certificate” is to be read as follows (identical to the November 14, 2003 and December 20, 2002 draft legislation):

“Canadian film or video production certificate” means a certificate issued in respect of a production by the Minister of Canadian Heritage

- (a) certifying that the production is a Canadian film or video production in respect of which that Minister is satisfied that
 - (i) except where the production is a treaty co-production (as defined by regulation), an acceptable share of revenues from the exploitation of the production in non-Canadian markets is, under the terms of any agreement, retained by
 - (A) a qualified corporation that owns or owned an interest in, or for civil law a right in, the production,
 - (B) a prescribed taxable Canadian corporation related to the qualified corporation, or
 - (C) any combination of corporations described in clause (A) or (B), and
 - (ii) public financial support of the production would not be contrary to public policy, and
- (b) estimating amounts relevant for the purpose of determining the amount deemed under subsection (3) to have been paid in respect of the production.

Technical Notes: A qualified corporation must file a Canadian film or video production certificate with its tax return for a taxation year in which it claims a Canadian film or video production tax credit in respect of the production. A “Canadian film or video production certificate”, as defined in subsection 125.4(1), is issued by the Minister of Canadian Heritage. The definition is amended to provide that that Minister will also certify that the public funding of the production would not be contrary to public policy and that, generally, a qualified corporation or a related taxable Canadian corporation will retain an acceptable share of revenues from the exploitation of the production in non-Canadian markets. The Minister of Canadian Heritage will issue guidelines as to how these criteria can be met.

The definition is also amended to remove the requirement for the Minister of Canadian Heritage to provide estimates relevant to the calculation of the CFVPTC, in respect of certificates issued after 2003.

The True North Strong and Free, Conservative Party election platform (conservative.ca), Oct. 7, 2008: Promoting Canada's Arts and Culture [...]

A re-elected Conservative Government will not reintroduce the Bill C-10 proposals to change film and video tax credit eligibility. Although these proposals were approved unanimously by the House of Commons, we will take into account the serious concerns that have been expressed by film creators and investors.

Related Provisions: 125.4(3) — Tax credit where certificate issued; 125.4(6) — Revocation of certificate; 125.4(7) — Guidelines from Minister of Canadian Heritage; 241(3.3) — Disclosure to public of information on certificate.

“investor” means a person, other than a prescribed person, who is not actively engaged on a regular, continuous and substantial basis in a business carried on through a permanent establishment (as defined by regulation) in Canada that is a Canadian film or video production business.

Proposed Repeal — 125.4(1) “investor”

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 120(1), will repeal the definition “investor” in subsec. 125.4(1), applicable

- (a) to taxation years that end after November 14, 2003; and
- (b) in respect of a film or video production in respect of which a corporation has, in a return of income filed before November 14, 2003, claimed an amount under subsec. 125.4(3) in respect of a labour expenditure incurred after 1997.

Technical Notes: The definition “investor” describes a person who is not actively engaged on a regular, continuous, and substantial basis in a Canadian film or video production business carried on through a permanent establishment in Canada. A CFVPTC may not be claimed in respect of a Canadian film or video production where an investor, or a partnership in which an investor has an interest, may deduct an amount in respect of the production.

The definition of investor is repealed, applicable to taxation years that end after November 14, 2003, as well as to productions in respect of which a qualifying production corporation has, in a return of income filed before November 14, 2003, claimed an amount under subsection 125.4(3) in respect of a labour expenditure incurred after 1997 in respect of the production.

Related Provisions: 125.4(4) — No credit where investor can deduct any amount.

Regulations: 1106(10) (prescribed person); 8201 (permanent establishment).

“labour expenditure” of a corporation for a taxation year in respect of a property of the corporation that is a Canadian film or video production means, in the case of a corporation that is not a qualified corporation for the year, nil, and in the case of a corporation that is a qualified corporation for the year, subject to subsection (2), the total of the following amounts to the extent that they are reasonable in the circumstances and included in the cost or, in the case of depreciable property, the capital cost to the corporation of the property:

- (a) the salary or wages directly attributable to the production that are incurred after 1994 and in the year, or the preceding taxation year, by the corporation for the stages of production of the property, from the final script stage to the end of the post-production stage, and paid by it in the year or within 60 days after the end of the year (other than amounts incurred in that preceding year that were paid within 60 days after the end of that preceding year),
- (b) that portion of the remuneration (other than salary or wages and other than remuneration that relates to services rendered in the preceding taxation year and that was paid within 60 days after the end of that preceding year) that is directly attributable to the production of property, that relates to services rendered after 1994 and in the year, or that preceding year, to the corporation for the stages of production, from the final script stage to the end of the post-production stage, and that is paid by it in the year or within 60 days after the end of the year to

Proposed Amendment — 125.4(1) “labour expenditure” before (b)(i)

“labour expenditure”, of a corporation for a taxation year in respect of a Canadian film or video production, means, in the case of a corporation that is not a qualified corporation for the taxation year, nil, and in the case of a corporation that is a qualified corporation for the taxation year, subject to subsection (2), the total of the following amounts to the extent that they are reasonable in the circumstances and included in the cost to, or in the case of depreciable property the capital cost to, the corporation, or any other person or partnership, of the production:

(a) the salary or wages directly attributable to the production that are incurred after 1994 and in the taxation year, or the preceding taxation year, by the corporation for the stages of production of the property, from the production commencement time to the end of the post-production stage, and paid by it in the taxation year or within 60 days after the end of the taxation year (other than amounts incurred in that preceding taxation year that were paid within 60 days after the end of that preceding taxation year),

(b) that portion of the remuneration (other than salary or wages and other than remuneration that relates to services rendered in the preceding taxation year and that was paid within 60 days after the end of that preceding taxation year) that is directly attributable to the production of property, that relates to services rendered after 1994 and in the taxation year, or that preceding taxation year, to the corporation for the stages of production, from the production commencement time to the end of the post-production stage, and that is paid by it in the taxation year or within 60 days after the end of the taxation year to

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 120(4), will amend the portion of the definition “labour expenditure” in subsec. 125.4(1) before subpara. (b)(i) to read as above, applicable on the same basis as the amendment to 125.4(1) “assistance”.

Technical Notes: The definition “labour expenditure” describes the underlying expenditures of a qualified corporation in respect of a film or video production that will be eligible for the CFVPTC. The definition is amended concurrently with the repeal of the definition “investor” in subsection 125.4(1) and the amendment of subsections 125.4(2) and (4), to include those production expenditures incurred by the qualified corporation for or on behalf of another person. That is, labour expenditures are no longer limited to those included in the cost to the qualified corporation of the production. The definition is also amended concurrently with the introduction of the definition “production commencement time”, which represents the time after which an eligible expenditure will qualify for the CFVPTC.

Where a particular corporation is a co-producer with another qualified corporation, and that other corporation has incurred expenditures for or on behalf of the taxpayer, new paragraph 125.4(2)(d) prevents the particular corporation from claiming a CFVPTC in respect of those expenditures.

For more information on subsections 125.4(2) and (4) and the definitions “investor” and “production commencement time”, refer to the commentary for those provisions.

(i) an individual who is not an employee of the corporation, to the extent that the amount paid

(ii) another taxable Canadian corporation, to the extent that the amount paid is attributable to and does not exceed the salary or wages of the other corporation’s employees for personally rendering services for the production of the property,

(iii) another taxable Canadian corporation all the issued and outstanding shares of the capital stock of which (except directors’ qualifying shares) belong to an individual and the activities of which consist principally of the provision of the individual’s services, to the extent that the amount paid is attributable to services rendered personally by the individual for the production of the property, or

(i) the corporation is a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation of another taxable Canadian corporation (in this section referred to as the “parent”), and the reimbursement made by the corporation in the year, or within 60 days after the end of the year, of an expenditure that was incurred by the parent in a particular taxation year of the parent in respect of that production and that would be included in the labour expenditure of the corporation in respect of the property for the particular taxation year because of paragraph (a) or (b) if

(iii) the corporation had had such a particular taxation year, and

(iv) the expenditure were incurred by the corporation for the same purpose as it was by the parent and were paid at the same time and to the same person or partnership as it was by the parent.

Related Provisions: 13(7)–(7.4) — Capital cost of depreciable property; 125.4(1), 248(1) — Extended meaning of salary or wages; 125.4(2) — Rules governing labour expenditure.

Proposed Addition — 125.4(1) “production commencement time”

“production commencement time”, in respect of a Canadian film or video production, means the earlier of

(a) the time at which principal photography of the production begins, and

(b) the latest of

(i) the time at which a qualified corporation that has an interest in, or for civil law a right in, the production, or the parent of the corporation, first makes an expenditure for salary or wages or other remuneration for activities, of scriptwriters, that are directly attributable to the development by the corporation of script material of the production,

(ii) the time at which the corporation or the parent of the corporation acquires a property, on which the production is based, that is a published literary work, screenplay, play, personal history or all or part of the script material of the production, and

(iii) two years before the date on which principal photography of the production begins.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 120(7), will add the definition “production commencement time” to subsec. 125.4(1), applicable on the same basis as the amendment to 125.4(1) “assistance”.

Technical Notes: For the purpose of the definition “labour expenditure” in subsection 125.4(1), in order to be eligible for the CFVPTC, expenditures in respect of a film or video production must be incurred by a qualified corporation from the time that is the “final script stage” of the production. The definition “labour expenditure” is amended to instead refer to expenditures incurred after the production commencement time. The new definition “production commencement time” describes the time that is the latest of the following:

1. The time at which a qualified corporation or its parent company first incurs development labour costs for the development of property of the corporation that is script material on which a Canadian film or video production is based.

2. The first time at which the qualified corporation or its parent company acquires a right in respect of the story that is the basis of the final script. Such rights might include a published literary work, play or screenplay.
3. Two years before the date on which principal photography of the production begins.

It is intended that the in-house development labour costs of an initial draft of a script, as well as the cost of modifications, should fall within the period of production for which labour expenditures qualify for the CFVPTC. These in-house costs could include the cost to hire an independent writer to create a script on the basis of some other story or literary work for which the rights have been acquired by the corporation.

Existing conditions on eligible labour expenditures also apply to scriptwriting labour. (See, for example, amounts excluded from the definition "salary and wages" in subsection 125.4(1), such as amounts determined by reference to profits or revenues). As well, the cost to acquire an initial script or any other right referred to above will, like other rights, not qualify. Such an expenditure represents the cost of a property, not a labour expenditure.

The new definition "script material" in subsection 125.4(1) is defined for the purpose of the definition "production commencement time".

"qualified corporation" for a taxation year means a corporation that is throughout the year a prescribed taxable Canadian corporation the activities of which in the year are primarily the carrying on through a permanent establishment (as defined by regulation) in Canada of a business that is a Canadian film or video production business.

Technical Notes: See under 125.4(1) "qualified labour expenditure" (b) A before (ii) below.

(a) the amount, if any, by which

A is 60% of the amount by which

exceeds

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 120(6), will amend the portion of the description of A before subpara. (ii) in para. (b) of the definition "qualified labour expenditure" in subsec. 125.4(1) to read as above, applicable on the same basis as the amendment to 125.4(1) "assistance".

Technical Notes: The definition "qualified labour expenditure" describes the portion of a qualified corporation's labour expenditures upon which it can claim a 25% investment tax credit for a Canadian film or video production. Under a formula in the definition, qualified labour expenditures in respect of a production are limited to 48% of the amount by which the cost of the production to the qualified corporation exceeds any "assistance" in respect of that cost that has not been repaid.

Variable A in the formula is amended to increase the maximum amount of labour expenditure that qualify for the CFVPTC from 48% to 60% of the cost of the production. The definition is also amended concurrently with the repeal of the definition "investor" in subsection 125.4(1) and the amendment of subsections 125.4(2) and (4), to include in the production cost those production expenditures incurred by the qualified corporation for or on behalf of another person. That is, production expenditures are no longer limited to those included in the cost to the qualified corporation of the production.

Where the taxpayer corporation is a co-producer with another qualified corporation, and that other corporation has incurred expenditures for or on behalf of the taxpayer, those expenditures are excluded from the formula by new paragraph 125.4(2)(b).

For more information on subsections 125.4(2) and (4) and the definition "investor", refer to the commentary for those provisions.

B is the total of all amounts each of which is the qualified labour expenditure of the corporation in respect of the production for a preceding taxation year before the end of which the principal filming or taping of the production began.

"salary or wages" does not include an amount described in section 7 or any amount determined by reference to profits or revenues.

Proposed Amendment — 125.4(1) "salary or wages"

"salary or wages" does not include an amount

(a) described in section 7;

(b) determined by reference to profits or revenues; or

(c) paid to a person in respect of services rendered by the person at a time when the person was non-resident, unless the person was at that time a Canadian citizen.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 120(2), will amend the definition "salary or wages" in subsec. 125.4(1) to read as above, applicable on the same basis as the amendment to 125.4(1) "assistance".

Technical Notes: For the purposes of the Canadian film and video production tax credit, the definition "salary or wages", which is generally defined in subsection 248(1), does not include an amount described in section 7 (share option benefits) or any amount determined by reference to profits or revenues.

The definition "salary or wages" is amended to provide that it also does not include an amount paid to a person in respect of services rendered by the person at a time when the person was non-resident, unless the person was at that time a Canadian citizen.

Dept. of Finance news release 2003-058, Nov. 14, 2003: See under 125.4(2).

Related Provisions: 125.4(2)(a) — Meaning of "remuneration"; 248(1) "salary or wages" — Definition extended to include all income from employment.

Proposed Addition — 125.4(1) "script material"

"script material", in respect of a production, means written material describing the story on which the production is based and, for greater certainty, includes a draft script, an original story, a screen story, a narration, a television production concept, an outline or a scene-by-scene schematic, synopsis or treatment.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 120(7), will add the definition "script material" to subsec. 125.4(1), applicable on the same basis as the amendment to 125.4(1) "assistance".

Technical Notes: The new definition "script material" applies for the purpose of determining the "production commencement time" of a production. Script material is written material describing the story on which the production is based and, for greater certainty, includes a draft script, original story, screen story, narration, television production concept, outline or scene-by-scene schematic, synopsis or treatment. These descriptions are terms commonly used in the film production industry.

Technical Notes: Subsection 125.4(2) provides rules that apply for the purpose of the definition of "labour expenditure" in subsection 125.4(1). Paragraph 125.4(2)(a) provides that remuneration does not include remuneration determined by reference to profits or revenues.

Subsection 125.4(2) is amended to provide that it also applies to the definition "qualified labour expenditure" in subsection 125.4(1). In addition, paragraph 125.4(2)(a) is amended to provide that remuneration also does not include remuneration in respect of services rendered by a person at a time when the person was non-resident, unless the person was at that time a Canadian citizen.

Dept. of Finance news release 2003-058, Nov. 14, 2003: Government Announces Changes to the Canadian Film or Video Production Tax Credit

John Manley, Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance, and Sheila Copps, Minister of Canadian Heritage, today released draft amendments to the Income Tax Act concerning the Canadian Film or Video Production Tax Credit (CFVPTC).

The CFVPTC supports film and video production in Canada by providing a tax credit equal to 25% of qualifying labour expenditures. The intent of these modifications is to simplify the credit and ensure that tax assistance is appropriately targeted. The proposed amendments include the following:

- The limit on the base of qualifying labour expenditures will be raised to 60% of the total cost of a production from the existing 48% limit. [See 125.4(1) "qualified labour expenditure" (b) A — ed.]
- Labour expenditures in respect of non-residents of Canada (other than Canadian citizens) will no longer be eligible for the credit. [See 125.4(1) "salary or wages" and 125.4(2)(a)(ii) — ed.]
- The holding of an interest in a film or video production by a person other than the production corporation will no longer disqualify the production from eligibility for a tax credit, unless the production or one of the investors is associated with a tax shelter. [See 125.4(4) — ed.] However, the credit will continue to be available only with respect to production expenditures made by the production corporation.
- If a government entity is an investor, that investment will be treated in the same manner as other forms of government assistance. [See 125.4(1) "assistance" — ed.]

Today's proposal results from ongoing consultations with all sectors of the film industry, which were undertaken by the Departments of Finance and Canadian Heritage following Budget 2000. The changes are in keeping with the Government's goal of simplifying the rules and administration of the CFVPTC, and basing the credit more closely on Canadian labour content.

The new rules will generally apply to productions for which development commences on or after today. As well, a production corporation may elect that the proposed rules apply to productions for which labour expenditures were first incurred in the taxation year of the corporation that includes today.

Background

The Government introduced the Canadian Film or Video Production Tax Credit ("CFVPTC") in the 1995 budget. The credit is equal to 25% of the eligible labour costs of a Canadian-controlled production corporation for films that have high Canadian content.

In the February 2000 budget, the Government indicated that the rules and administration of the CFVPTC would be simplified and would reflect more closely the original objectives of the eligibility requirements. The 2003 budget promised the continuation of industry consultations on the CFVPTC, with a view to ensuring that intended support levels are maintained.

As a result of the proposals announced today, the maximum amount of Canadian labour cost that qualifies for a tax credit will be increased from 48% to 60% of the total cost of a film or video production. The effect of this change to the "production cost cap" is to increase benefits to productions that have relatively high Canadian labour costs. However, the qualifying labour pool will now exclude amounts paid for the services of non-residents (other than Canadian citizens).

Other details of the proposal include the following:

- It will not be required that only the production corporation hold an interest in the production. It is proposed that the so-called "investor rule" in subsection 125.4(4) disqualify a production for the CFVPTC only where the production or a person or partnership holding an interest in the production is a tax shelter. However, it remains a requirement under the Income Tax Regulations [Reg. 1106(1) "excluded production" (a)(ii)(A) — ed.] that the production corporation have ownership of copyright. This latter provision is currently under review by the Department of Canadian Heritage.
- The equity share of a production of a government agency (including loans that participate in profits) will be treated in the same manner as other forms of government assistance.
- Funding under the Licence Fee Program of the Canadian Television Fund will continue to be exempted from treatment as government assistance.
- Production costs recognized under the CFVPTC are those incurred after the "final script stage" of a production. To reduce uncertainties in interpretation, the commencement time for a production will be defined to allow the possibility for eligible costs to be incurred as early as two years before principal photography begins. Eligible labour expenditures will include those incurred after principal photography begins, plus those incurred after the latest of the following three times:
 - The time at which the production corporation or its parent company first incurs development labour costs for the development of property of the corporation that is script material on which the production is based.
 - The first time at which the production corporation or its parent company acquires a right in respect of the story that is the basis of the final script. Such rights might include a published literary work, play or screenplay.
 - Two years prior to the date on which principal photography begins.

It is intended that in-house development labour costs of an initial draft of a script, as well as the cost of modifications, should be eligible. These in-house costs could include the cost to hire an independent writer to create a script on the basis of some other story or literary work for which the rights have been acquired by the corporation.

Existing conditions on eligible labour expenditures will also apply to scriptwriting labour (e.g. the exclusion of amounts determined by reference to profits or revenues). However, the cost to acquire an initial script or any other right referred to above will, like other rights, not qualify. Such an expenditure represents the cost of a property, not a labour expenditure.

- The definition of "Canadian film or video production certificate" in the Act [125.4(1) — ed.] will be amended to remove the requirement for the Minister of Canadian Heritage to provide estimates. Such estimates will still be provided, but only on request.
- It will be clarified that a Canadian film or video production certificate may be revoked in respect of one episode of a television series without affecting the eligibility of other episodes in the series and that, in such a case, the expenditures attributable to that episode do not qualify for the CFVPTC. [See 125.4(6) — ed.]

The new rules will generally apply to productions for which development commences on or after today. As well, the new rules will apply if development commenced before today and the first labour expenditures (as defined under the old rules) were incurred by the corporation after 2003. Further, if development commenced before today and the first labour expenditures (as defined under the old rules) were incurred by the corporation in its taxation year that includes today, then the corporation may elect to have the new rules apply. Subject to this election, corporations must continue to claim the CFVPTC under the old rules for productions that qualified under those rules. A production cannot qualify under both schemes.

Further, the amended investor rule will apply to any production for which labour expenditures were incurred after 1997 (to coincide, generally, with the application of the matchable expenditure rules in section 18.1).

(b) services referred to in paragraph (b) of that definition that relate to the post-production stage of the production include only the services that are rendered at that stage by a person who performs the duties of animation cameraman, assistant colourist, assistant mixer, assistant sound-effects technician, boom operator, colourist, computer graphics designer, cutter, developing technician, director of post production, dubbing technician, encoding technician, inspection technician — clean up, mixer, optical effects technician, picture editor, printing technician, projectionist, recording technician, senior editor, sound editor, sound-effects technician, special effects editor, subtitle technician, timer, video-film recorder operator, videotape operator or by a person who performs a prescribed duty; and

(c) that definition does not apply to an amount to which section 37 applies.

Proposed Addition — 125.4(2)(d)

(d) an expenditure incurred in respect of a film or video production by a qualified corporation (in this paragraph referred to as the “co-producer”) in respect of goods supplied or services rendered by another qualified corporation to the co-producer in respect of the production is not a labour expenditure to the co-producer or, for the purpose of applying of [sic] this section to the co-producer, a cost or capital cost of the production.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 120(9), will add para. 125.4(2)(d), applicable on the same basis as the amendment to 125.4(1) “assistance”.

Technical Notes: A film or video production may be produced jointly by two or more qualified corporations. New paragraph 125.4(2)(d) is added to ensure that only one qualified corporation may claim a CFVPTC in respect of any particular expenditure. Where another qualified corporation supplies goods to or renders services for or on behalf of the taxpayer corporation, new paragraph 125.4(2)(d) provides that the related expenditure by the taxpayer is not a labour expenditure, a cost or capital cost of the production to the taxpayer. This provision does not affect the calculation of the cost of the production for other purposes of the Act.

History [subsec. 125.4(2)]: Para. 125.4(2)(c) added by 2001, c. 17, s. 115, applicable after November 1999.

(3) Tax credit — Where

(a) a qualified corporation for a taxation year files with its return of income for the year

- (i) a Canadian film or video production certificate issued in respect of a Canadian film or video production of the corporation,
- (ii) a prescribed form containing prescribed information, and
- (iii) each other document prescribed in respect of the production, and

(b) the principal filming or taping of the production began before the end of the year, the corporation is deemed to have paid on its balance-day for the year an amount on account of its tax payable under this Part for the year equal to 25% of its qualified labour expenditure for the year in respect of the production.

(4) Exception — This section does not apply to a Canadian film or video production if the production — or an interest in a person or partnership that has, directly or indirectly, an interest in, or for civil law a right in, the production — is a tax shelter investment for the purpose of section 143.2.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 120(10), will amend subsec. 125.4(4) to read as above, applicable

(a) to taxation years that end after November 14, 2003; and

(b) in respect of a film or video production in respect of which a corporation has, in a return of income filed before November 14, 2003, claimed an amount under subsec. 125.4(3) in respect of a labour expenditure incurred after 1997.

Technical Notes: Subsection 125.4(4) provides that a Canadian film or video production tax credit is not available for a production if an investor may deduct an amount in respect of the production in computing its income for any taxation year. An investor is defined in subsection 125.4(1) to include, generally, any person, other than a prescribed person, that does not carry on a film or video production basis in Canada on a substantial basis.

Subsection 125.4(4) is amended concurrently with the repeal of the definition “investor”, to deny the CFVPTC only in circumstances where the production or a person or partnership holding an interest in the production is a tax shelter investment for the purpose of section 143.2.

However, section 1106 of the Income Tax Regulations includes a requirement that, for a film or video production to qualify as a Canadian film or video production eligible for the CFVPTC, a prescribed taxable Canadian corporation must retain worldwide ownership of copyright.

Dept. of Finance news release 2003-058, Nov. 14, 2003: See under 125.4(2).

(5) When assistance received — For the purposes of this Act other than this section, and for greater certainty, the amount that a corporation is deemed under subsection (3) to have paid for a taxation year is assistance received by the corporation from a government immediately before the end of the year.

Related Provisions: 12(1)(x) — Inclusion of assistance in income; 13(7.4) — Reduction in capital cost of depreciable property to reflect assistance; 53(2)(k) — Reduction in ACB of capital property to reflect assistance.

(6) Revocation of a certificate — A Canadian film or video production certificate in respect of a production may be revoked by the Minister of Canadian Heritage where

(a) an omission or incorrect statement was made for the purpose of obtaining the certificate, or

(b) the production is not a Canadian film or video production, and, for the purpose of subparagraph (3)(a)(i), a certificate that has been revoked is deemed never to have been issued.

Proposed Amendment — 125.4(6)

(6) Revocation of a certificate — If an omission or incorrect statement was made for the purpose of obtaining a Canadian film or video production certificate in respect of a production, or if the production is not a Canadian film or video production,

- (a) the Minister of Canadian Heritage may
 - (i) revoke the certificate, or
 - (ii) if the certificate was issued in respect of productions included in an episodic television series, revoke the certificate in respect of one or more episodes in the series;
- (b) for greater certainty, for the purposes of this section, the expenditures and cost of production in respect of productions included in an episodic television series that relate to an episode in the series in respect of which a certificate has been revoked are not attributable to a Canadian film or video production; and
- (c) for the purpose of subparagraph (3)(a)(i), a certificate that has been revoked is deemed never to have been issued.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 120(11), will amend subsec. 125.4(6) to read as above, applicable after November 14, 2003.

Technical Notes: Subsection 125.4(6) provides that a Canadian film or video production certificate in respect of a production may be revoked by the Minister of Canadian Heritage. The revocation of a certificate may occur if an incorrect statement or an omission was made in order to obtain the certificate, or if the production is not a Canadian film or video production. A revoked certificate is considered never to have been issued, so a Canadian film or video production tax credit under new subsection 125.4(3) cannot be claimed in respect of the decertified production.

Subsection 125.4(6) is amended, applicable after November 14, 2003, to clarify that a Canadian film or video production certificate may be revoked in respect of one episode of a television series without affecting the eligibility of other episodes in the series and that, in such a case, the expenditures attributable to that episode do not qualify for the CFVPTC.

Related Provisions: 241(3.3) — Disclosure to public of information on revoked certificate.

Proposed Addition — 125.4(7)

(7) Guidelines — The Minister of Canadian Heritage shall issue guidelines respecting the circumstances under which the conditions in paragraphs (a) and (b) of the definition of “Canadian film or video production certificate” in subsection (1) are satisfied. For greater certainty, these guidelines are not statutory instruments as defined in the Statutory Instruments Act.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 120(12), will add subsec. 125.4(7), applicable in respect of film or video productions in respect of which certificates are issued by the Minister of Canadian Heritage after December 20, 2002, except that in respect of those film or video productions in respect of which certificates are issued by the Minister of Canadian Heritage before 2004, the reference to “paragraphs (a) and (b)” in subsec. 125.4(7) is to be read as “subparagraphs (a)(i) and (ii)”.

Technical Notes: New subsection 125.4(7), which applies in respect of Canadian film or video productions for which certificates are issued by the Minister of Canadian Heritage after December 20, 2002, requires the Minister of Canadian Heritage to issue guidelines respecting the circumstances under which new conditions in the definition “Canadian film or video production certificate” in subsection 125.4(1) are met. For further details, see the commentary for that definition.

History: S. 125.4 added by 1996, c. 21, s. 28, applicable to 1995 et seq. except that, in applying the definition “qualified corporation” in subsec. 125.4(1) in respect of a film or video production the principal photography of which began before July 1996, the words “are primarily” in that definition shall be read as “include”.

Possible Future Amendment — 126(2)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Feb. 21, 2003:

Dear Bill:

As you know, the CCRA has planned for some time to announce a significant change in its administrative practices relating to the foreign tax credits available to Canadian banks and other lending institutions. . . . We very much appreciate your co-operation in this regard, and I am writing now to update you on the progress of our work.

The transactions that give rise to this issue are loans by a resident of Canada to a non-resident, and the resulting receipt by the resident of interest income. If the non-resident borrower's country of residence imposes a withholding tax (as Canada itself often would in the reverse case), it is appropriate in policy terms that Canada provides some foreign tax credit for the tax. Indeed, if Canada has a tax treaty with the country in question, the tax treaty generally designates the interest income to be from a source in that other country, and Canada is required under the treaty to provide a credit.

The difficulty arises where there is no such treaty obligation. If the Canadian-resident lender earns the interest as income from carrying on a business in Canada, it is not clear that the interest has a foreign source. If it does not have a foreign source, it will not give rise to a foreign tax credit. This would be the result despite the fact that, as I have noted, we impose withholding taxes generally with the expectation that they will be creditable in the recipient's country of residence.

Again, thank you for the patience you have shown in this matter. With your continued co-operation, we hope to be able to clear it off both our agendas within a reasonable time.

Yours sincerely,

[Senior Assistant Deputy Minister] Stephen R. Richardson

(4.11) [Artificial foreign tax credit generators] — If a taxpayer is a member of a partnership, any income or profits tax paid to the government of a particular country other than Canada — in respect of the income of the partnership for a period during which the taxpayer's share of the income of the partnership under the income tax laws of any country other than Canada under whose laws the income of the partnership is subject to income taxation, is less than its share thereof for the purposes of the Act — is not included in computing the taxpayer's business-income tax or non-business-income tax for any taxation year.

Application: The March 4, 2010 federal Budget Notice of Ways and Means Motion, resolution (42), will add subsec. 126(4.11), effective for foreign taxes incurred in respect of taxation years that end after March 4, 2010.

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 4, 2010: Foreign Tax Credit Generators

The Canadian income tax system generally taxes Canadian residents on their worldwide income. However, in recognition of the fact that foreign countries may also assert the right to tax income earned in their territory by a Canadian resident, Canada generally provides a credit for foreign income taxes paid in respect of such income. This foreign tax credit (FTC) is aimed at relieving Canadian residents from double taxation.

Similar relief is provided in the computation of the income of a foreign affiliate that is subject to tax in the hands of its Canadian shareholder. This relief is provided either through the foreign accrual tax (FAT) mechanism, in the case of the foreign accrual property income (FAPI) of a controlled foreign affiliate, or through the underlying foreign tax (UFT) mechanism, in the case of dividend distributions out of taxable surplus.

Some Canadian corporations have recently been engaging in schemes, often referred to as "foreign tax credit generators", that are designed to shelter tax otherwise payable in respect of interest income on loans made, indirectly, to foreign corporations. These schemes artificially create foreign taxes that are claimed by the Canadian corporation as a FTC, or a FAT or UFT deduction, in order to offset Canadian tax otherwise payable.

There are two main categories of these schemes, and many variations within these categories. The first category involves the use of a foreign partnership, the second involves the use of a foreign corporation that is intended to qualify as a foreign affiliate. The main thrust of all of these schemes is to exploit asymmetry, as between the tax laws of Canada and those of a foreign country, in the characterization of the Canadian corporation's direct or indirect investment in a foreign entity earning the income that is subject to the foreign tax.

These foreign tax credit generator schemes generally involve a complex series of transactions which, in substance, amount to a Canadian corporation making a loan to a corporation resident in a foreign jurisdiction that taxes on the basis of the substantive effect of the transaction, while relying on Canadian tax law looking only to the form of the transaction. The form is that of an investment by the Canadian corporation in a foreign special purpose entity which pays full foreign tax on an amount of income that is, in part, the return derived on the Canadian taxpayer's investment. However, an offsetting tax reduction is generated in respect of that return within the foreign corporation's group. If the Canadian corporation had instead made a simple loan to the foreign corporation, the interest income on that loan would generally not be subject to any foreign tax. As such, no FTC, nor any UFT or FAT deduction, would be available in Canada and full Canadian tax would be levied on the interest income in respect of that loan. By using these foreign tax credit generator schemes, the foreign corporation receives the same substantive foreign tax treatment as it would for a simple borrowing but the Canadian corporation is able to claim an FTC, or a UFT or FAT deduction, in order to partly or fully offset its Canadian tax otherwise payable in respect of its interest income. The Canadian tax savings are generally shared between the Canadian lender and the foreign borrower in determining the terms of the loan and related matters.

Although the Government believes that these foreign tax credit schemes can be successfully challenged under existing rules in the Income Tax Act, the magnitude of this problem warrants greater assurance through specific and immediate legislative action. Consequently, Budget 2010 proposes measures that will deny claims for FTCs, and FAT and UFT deductions, in circumstances in which the income tax law of the jurisdiction levying the foreign income tax, or another relevant jurisdiction, considers the Canadian corporation to have a lesser direct or indirect interest in the foreign special purpose entity than the Canadian corporation is considered to have for the purposes of the Income Tax Act. This measure should generally put the Canadian corporation in the same tax position as if it had made a simple loan to the foreign corporation.

This measure is proposed to be effective for foreign taxes incurred in respect of taxation years that end after March 4, 2010. The Government will be accepting comments in the finalization of the legislation to implement this measure and encourages stakeholders to submit any such comments before May 4, 2010.

(4.2) Short-term securities acquisitions — If at any particular time a taxpayer disposes of a property that is a share or debt obligation and the period that began at the time the taxpayer last acquired the property and ended at the particular time is one year or less, the amount included in business-income tax or non-business-income tax paid by the taxpayer for a particular taxation year on account of all taxes (referred to in this subsection and subsections (4.3) and 161(6.1) as the "foreign tax") that are

- (b) otherwise included in business-income tax or non-business-income tax for any taxation year, and
- (c) similar to the tax levied under Part XIII shall, subject to subsection (4.3), not exceed the amount determined by the formula

where

A is 40%, if the foreign tax would otherwise be included in business-income tax, and 30%, if the foreign tax would otherwise be included in non-business-income tax,

- B is the total of the taxpayer's proceeds from the disposition of the property at the particular time and the amount of all dividends or interest from the property in respect of the period included in computing the taxpayer's income for any taxation year,
- C is the total of the cost at which the taxpayer last acquired the property and any outlays or expenses made or incurred by the taxpayer for the purpose of disposing of the property at the particular time,
- D is the amount of foreign tax that would otherwise be included in computing the taxpayer's business-income tax or non-business-income tax for the particular year, and
- E is the total amount of foreign tax that would otherwise be included in computing the taxpayer's business-income tax or non-business-income tax for all taxation years.

- (a) that is a capital property;
- (b) that is a debt obligation issued to the taxpayer that has a term of one year or less and that is held by no one other than the taxpayer at any time;
- (c) that was last acquired by the taxpayer before February 24, 1998; or

 - (i) 40% of the taxpayer's income from the business in the taxing country for the year exceeds
 - (ii) the total of all amounts that would, but for this subsection, be income or profits taxes paid in the year in respect of the business to the government of the taxing country, and
- (b) the taxpayer's production tax amount for the business in the taxing country for the year.

- (a) December 31, 1999; and
- (b) where, for the purposes of this subsec., a date is designated in writing by the taxpayer and the designation is filed with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes June 14, 2001, the later of
 - (i) the date so designated, and
 - (ii) December 31, 1994.

Subsec. 126(5) formerly read:

- (5) Foreign tax — A tax paid to the government of a country other than Canada or to the government of a state, province or other political subdivision of such a country may, subject to prescribed conditions, be deemed, for the purposes of this Act, to be an income or profits tax paid to the government of that country.

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 126.

(5.1) Deductions for specified capital gains — Where in a taxation year an individual has claimed a deduction under section 110.6 in computing the individual's taxable income for the year, for the purposes of this section the individual shall be deemed to have claimed the deduction under section 110.6 in respect of such taxable capital gains or portion thereof as the individual may specify in the individual's return of income required to be filed pursuant to section 150 for the year or, where the individual has failed to so specify, in respect of such taxable capital gains as the Minister may specify in respect of the taxpayer for the year.

Related Provisions: See Related Provisions at end of s. 126.

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 126.

(6) Rules of construction — For the purposes of this section,

- (a) the government of a country other than Canada includes the government of a state, province or other political subdivision of that country;
- (b) where a taxpayer's income for a taxation year is in whole or in part from sources in more than one country other than Canada, subsections (1) and (2) shall be read as providing for separate deductions in respect of each of the countries other than Canada; and
- (c) if any income from a source in a particular country would be tax-exempt income but for the fact that a portion of the income is subject to an income or profits tax imposed by the government of a country other than Canada, the portion is deemed to be income from a separate source in the particular country.

Proposed Addition — 126(6)(d)

(d) if, in computing a taxpayer's income for a taxation year from a business carried on by the taxpayer in Canada, an amount is included in respect of interest paid or payable to the taxpayer by a person resident in a country other than Canada, and the taxpayer has paid to the government of that other country a non-business income tax for the year with respect to the amount, the amount is, in applying the definition "qualifying incomes" in subsection (7) for the purpose of subsection (1), deemed to be income from a source in that other country.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 121(5), will add para. 126(6)(d), applicable to amounts received after February 27, 2004.

Technical Notes: Section 126 permits a taxpayer to claim a foreign tax credit. Subsection 126(1) sets out the rules for claiming the credit in respect of foreign non-business-income tax — that is, the foreign taxes imposed on investment income and other categories of foreign source non-business income. A credit in respect of foreign taxes on business income is provided under subsection 126(2).

Subsection 126(1) has been interpreted [by the CRA in IT-270R2 para. 24 — ed.] to allow a non-business foreign tax credit for non-business foreign tax paid on interest income earned abroad by a Canadian business that does not carry on business in the foreign jurisdiction, and therefore is not eligible for a business foreign tax credit. In order to ensure that the credit continues to be available in these situations, subsection 126(6), which contains interpretation rules that apply to the section, is amended to add new paragraph 126(6)(d). New paragraph 126(6)(d) deems foreign interest income earned from a business carried on in Canada, and for which the business has paid a non-business foreign tax to a country other than Canada, to be from a source in that other country. Therefore, if a taxpayer includes in its Canadian business income for the year foreign interest income, and has paid foreign tax with respect to this amount, the taxpayer will be eligible to claim a non-business foreign tax credit subject to the limits set out in section 126.

Related Provisions: See Related Provisions at end of s. 126.

History: Subsec. 126(6) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 117(13), applicable after June 27, 1999. Subsec. 126(5) formerly read:

(6) Construction of subssecs. (1) and (2) — For greater certainty, where a taxpayer's income for a taxation year is in whole or in part from sources in more than one country other than Canada, subsections (1) and (2) shall be read as providing for separate deductions in respect of each of the countries other than Canada.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-270R3: Foreign tax credit. Also see at end of s. 126.

(7) Definitions — In this section,

"business-income tax" paid by a taxpayer for a taxation year in respect of businesses carried on by the taxpayer in a country other than Canada (in this definition referred to as the "business country") means, subject to subsections (4.1) and (4.2), the portion of any income or profits tax paid by the taxpayer for the year to the government of a country other than Canada that can reasonably be regarded as tax in respect of the income of the taxpayer from a business carried on by the taxpayer in the business country, but does not include a tax, or the portion of a tax, that can reasonably be regarded as relating to an amount that

(a) any other person or partnership has received or is entitled to receive from that government, or

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 123(5), will amend the opening words of subsec. 127(3) to read as above, in force (per subsec. 280(3)) before January 1, 2007 (the in-force date for S.C. 2006, c. 9 (Bill C-2, Royal Assent December 12, 2006), subsec. 64(2)), and applicable to monetary contributions made after December 20, 2002, except that for monetary contributions made before 2004, the expression “to a registered party, a provincial division of a registered party, a registered association or a candidate” is to be read as “to a registered party or a candidate”.

Subsection 127(3) is amended consequential to the addition of new subsections 248(31) and (32), to provide that the amount of a contribution that is eligible for the political contributions tax credit is to be reduced by the amount of any advantage or benefit, as defined by subsection 248(32), to which the taxpayer is entitled in respect of the contribution. This amendment is generally applicable to monetary contributions made after December 20, 2002.

It is proposed that subsections 2000(1) and (6) of the Regulations be amended to provide that every official receipt issued by a registered party in respect of a contribution contain, in addition to the information already prescribed, the eligible amount and the amount of the advantage, if any, in respect of the contribution.

Application: Former Bill C-20 (2007; requires re-introduction), subsec. 125(1), will amend the opening words of subsec. 127(3) to read as above, in force six months after Royal Assent. History: Subsec. 127(3) amended by 2003, c. 19, s. 73, applicable to monetary contributions made in taxation years ending after 2003, except that

- (a) for monetary contributions made in 2004 taxation years but before the day on which the amendment to s. 230.1 comes into force [Jan. 1, 2004], the preamble to subsec. 127(3) is to be read by replacing “to a registered party, a registered association, or a candidate” with “to a registered party or a candidate”;
- (b) if the day on which the amendment to s. 230.1 comes into force [Jan. 1, 2004] occurs during an election period, within the meaning assigned by the Canada Elections Act, the preamble to subsec. 127(3) is to be read, in respect of that election, as described in (a) above.

This transitional rule in para. (a) above is technically meaningless because it does not refer to the words “a provincial division of a registered party”, which were added at the Commons committee stage before the 2003 election financing bill received Third Reading in the House of Commons.

Subsec. 127(3) formerly read:

(3) Contributions to registered parties and candidates [political contribution credit] — There may be deducted from the tax otherwise payable by a taxpayer under this Part for a taxation year in respect of the total of all amounts each of which is a monetary contribution made by the taxpayer in the year to a registered party or to a candidate whose nomination has been confirmed in an election of a member or members to serve in the House of Commons of Canada (in this section referred to as “the total”),

- (a) 75% of the total, if the total does not exceed $200,

- (c) the lesser of
 - (i) $325 plus 33⅓% of the amount by which the total exceeds $550, and
 - (ii) $500,

if payment of each monetary contribution that is included in the total is proven by filing a receipt with the Minister, signed by a registered agent of the registered party or by the official agent of the candidate whose nomination has been confirmed, as the case may be, that contains prescribed information.

Subsec. 127(3) amended by 2000, c. 9, s. 560, applicable to 2000 et seq. except that, in its application to money contributions made after 1999 and before September 1, 2000 (the in-force date of 2000, c. 9), the references in 127(3) to “a monetary contribution made”, “monetary contribution” and a “candidate whose nomination has been confirmed” shall be read as references to “an amount contributed”, “amount contributed” and “an officially nominated candidate”, respectively. Subsec. 127(3) formerly read:

- (3) There may be deducted from the tax otherwise payable by a taxpayer under this Part for a taxation year in respect of the total of all amounts each of which is an amount contributed by the taxpayer in the year to a registered party or to an officially nominated candidate at an election of a member or members to serve in the House of Commons of Canada (in this section referred to as “the total”),
 - (a) 75% of the total if the total does not exceed $100,
 - (b) $75 plus 50% of the amount by which the total exceeds $100 if the total exceeds $100 and does not exceed $550, or
 - (c) the lesser of
 - (i) $300 plus 33⅓% of the amount by which the total exceeds $550 if the total exceeds $550, and
 - (ii) $500,

if payment of each amount contributed that is included in the total is proven by filing a receipt with the Minister, signed by a registered agent of the registered party or by the official agent of the officially nominated candidate, as the case may be, that contains prescribed information.

Proposed Amendment — 127(9) "pre-production mining expenditure"

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 8, 2004:

[xxx], Rio Tinto Canada Inc., Montreal, QC

Dear [xxx]:

We are writing in response to your letter dated March 23, 2004 and further to our meeting on May 25, 2004.

In your letter and in our subsequent meeting you expressed concern regarding the restriction in paragraph (b) of the definition "pre-production mining expenditure" in subsection 127(5) [should be 127(9) — ed.] of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"). That paragraph excludes an expenditure from qualifying as a pre-production mining expenditure if it is renounced under the terms of a flow-through share agreement.

You have asked us to recommend changes to the Act that would allow pre-production mining expenditures renounced under a flow-through share agreement to qualify for the pre-production tax credit if the flow-through shareholder is a taxable Canadian corporation that owns all the outstanding shares of the corporation that incurred the expenditures.

You advised us that, for commercial reasons, mineral exploration and development activities are frequently carried on through a wholly-owned subsidiary of a mining corporation. You also advised us that the preferred method of financing the subsidiary would generally be through the issuance of flow-through shares. In this case, the subsidiary would not normally have any income or would not be expected to have any income for a considerable period of time and, therefore, would not be in a position to use the pre-production tax credit.

As set out in the March 2003 technical paper titled, "Improving the Income Taxation of the Resource Sector in Canada", the credit was deliberately limited to the taxable Canadian corporation that incurred the expenditures and was not intended to be transferable to another corporation.

However, we agree that pre-production mining expenditures actually incurred by a wholly-owned subsidiary of a taxable Canadian corporation ("parent corporation") and renounced to that corporation should qualify for the pre-production tax credit if the parent corporation is a "principal-business corporation" as defined in subsection 66(15) of the Act, if the definition were read without reference to paragraphs (a), (a.1), (f), (b) and (i). Accordingly, we will recommend to the Minister of Finance that the definition of pre-production mining expenditure be amended, for expenses renounced under a flow-through share agreement entered into after 2004, to provide for this result. While I cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendation, I hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber

Proposed Amendment — 127(9) "pre-production mining expenditure"

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 9, 2009:

Mr. Douglas J. Powrie, Borden Ladner Gervais LLP, Vancouver, BC

Dear Mr. Powrie:

I am writing in response to your letter of May 14, 2007 addressed to Davine Roach and subsequent discussions with officials, of the Tax Legislation Division, regarding the definition of "pre-production mining expenditure" in subsection 127(9) of the Income Tax Act (Act). I note that, on November 22, 2007, you wrote to the Minister of Finance, the Honourable James Flaherty, inquiring about the status of your letter of May 14, 2007. I apologize for the delay in providing you with a formal response to your submission.

In your correspondence, you express the concern that expenditures incurred by a principal-business corporation through a general partnership for the purpose of developing a new mine may not be eligible for the pre-production mining expenditure investment tax credit.

Accordingly, you have asked us to recommend changes to the Act that would confirm that a mining corporation's share of the pre-production mining expenditures incurred by it through a general partnership will qualify for the pre-production mining credit. You submit that these changes would be consistent with the recommended amendment referred to in the letter issued by the Department of Finance in December 2004 that would allow expenditures incurred by a principal-business corporation through a flow-through share financing arrangement with its subsidiary to qualify for the credit.

From a tax policy perspective, we agree that a taxable Canadian corporation's share of the pre-production mining expenditures (the "eligible expenditures") incurred through a general partnership should qualify for the credit if:

- (a) each member of the partnership would (otherwise because of being a member of the partnership) be a "principal-business corporation" as defined in subsection 66(15) of the Act, if that definition were read without reference to paragraphs (a), (a.1), (f), (h) and (i) thereof; and
- (b) the corporation is a member of the partnership at the time the eligible expenditures are incurred and would not be a specified member of the partnership if the definition "specified member" in subsection 248(1) of the Act were read without reference to subparagraph (b)(ii) thereof.

Accordingly, we will recommend to the Minister that the Act be amended, effective for expenditures incurred in fiscal periods of a partnership that end after 2006, to provide for this result.

While I cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendation, I hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard Lalonde

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 9, 2009:

Mr. John Gravelle, PriceWaterHouseCoopers LLP, Toronto ON

Dear Mr. Gravelle:

I am writing in response to your letters of April 8, 2009, July 4, 2008 and February 20, 2008 and discussions with officials, of the Tax Legislation Division, regarding the definition of "pre-production mining expenditure" in subsection 127(9) of the Income Tax Act (Act). I apologize for the delay in providing you with a formal response to your submission. Specifically, you are concerned that pre-production mining expenditures incurred by a principal-business corporation, as defined in subsection 66(15) of the Act, through a general partnership may not be eligible for the pre-production mining expenditure investment tax credits.

(11.7) Definitions — The definitions in this subsection apply in this subsection and subsection (11.6).

“adjusted selling cost” to a person or partnership (referred to in this definition as the “supplier”) of a property is the amount determined by the formula

where

A is

(a) where the property is purchased from another person or partnership with which the supplier does not deal at arm’s length, the lesser of

- (i) the cost to the supplier of the property, and

- (ii) the adjusted selling cost to the other person or partnership of the property, and

(b) in any other case, the cost to the supplier of the property, and for the purpose of paragraph (b),

(c) where part of the cost to a supplier of a particular property is attributable to another property acquired by the supplier from a person or partnership with which the supplier does not deal at arm’s length, that part of the cost is deemed to be the lesser of

- (i) the amount of that part of the cost otherwise determined, and

- (ii) the adjusted selling cost to the person or the partnership of the other property,

(d) where part of the cost to a supplier of a property is attributable to a service (other than a service rendered by a person as an employee of the supplier) rendered to the supplier by a person or partnership with which the supplier does not deal at arm’s length, that part of the cost is deemed to be the lesser of

- (i) the amount of that part of the cost otherwise determined, and

- (ii) the adjusted service cost to the person or partnership of rendering the service, and

(e) no part of the cost to a supplier of a property that is attributable to remuneration based on profits or a bonus paid or payable to an employee of the supplier shall be included, and

B is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of government assistance or non-government assistance that can reasonably be considered to be in respect of the property and that the supplier has received, is entitled to receive or can reasonably be expected to receive.

Related Provisions: 127(11.8) — Interpretation; 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

“adjusted service cost” to a person or partnership (referred to in this definition as the “supplier”) of rendering a particular service is the amount determined by the formula:

where

A is the cost to the supplier of rendering the particular service,

B is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the cost to the supplier for a service (other than a service rendered by a person as an employee of the supplier) rendered by a person or partnership that does not deal at arm's length with the supplier to the extent that the cost is incurred for the purpose of rendering the particular service

(b) the adjusted service cost to the person or partnership referred to in paragraph (a) of rendering the service referred to in that paragraph to the supplier,

C is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the cost to the supplier of a property acquired by the supplier from a person or partnership that does not deal at arm's length with the supplier

exceeds

(b) the adjusted selling cost to the person or partnership referred to in paragraph (a) of the property, to the extent that the excess relates to the cost of rendering the particular service,

D is the total of all amounts each of which is remuneration based on profits or a bonus paid or payable to an employee of the supplier to the extent that it is included in the cost to the supplier of rendering the particular service, and

E is the total of all amounts each of which is government assistance or non-government assistance that can reasonably be considered to be in respect of rendering the particular service and that the supplier has received, is entitled to receive or can reasonably be expected to receive;

(a) the cost to a person or partnership (referred to in this paragraph as the “supplier”) of rendering a service or providing a property to another person or partnership (referred to in this paragraph as the “recipient”) with which the supplier does not deal at arm's length does not include,

(i) where the cost to the recipient of the service rendered or property provided by the supplier would, but for this paragraph, be a cost to the recipient incurred in rendering a particular service or providing a particular property to a person or partnership with which the recipient does not deal at arm's length, any expenditure of the supplier to the extent that it would, if it were incurred by the recipient in rendering the particular service or providing the particular property, be excluded from a cost to the recipient because of this paragraph, and

(ii) in any other case, any expenditure of the supplier to the extent that it would, if it were incurred by the recipient, not be a qualified expenditure of the recipient;

(b) paragraph 69(1)(c) does not apply in determining the cost of a property; and

(c) the leasing of a property is deemed to be the rendering of a service.

(12.2) Idem — For the purposes of paragraphs 53(2)(c), (h) and (k), where in a taxation year a taxpayer has deducted under subsection (5) an amount that may reasonably be regarded as attributable to amounts included in computing the investment tax credit of the taxpayer at the end of the year in respect of property acquired, or an expenditure made, in a subsequent taxation year, the taxpayer shall be deemed to have made the deduction under that subsection in that subsequent taxation year.

(12.3) Idem — For the purposes of the determination of J in the definition “cumulative Canadian exploration expense” in subsection 66.1(6), where, pursuant to a designation by a trust, an amount is required by subsection (7) to be added in computing the investment tax credit of a taxpayer at the end of the taxpayer's taxation year, the portion thereof that can reasonably be considered to relate to a qualified Canadian exploration expenditure of the trust for a taxation year shall be deemed to have been received by the trust at the end of its taxation year in respect of which the designation was made as assistance from a government in respect of that expenditure.

(a) the amount specified in the agreement for the purpose of this subsection,

(b) the amount that but for the agreement would be the transferor's SR&ED qualified expenditure pool at the end of the particular year, and

(i) for the performance of scientific research and experimental development for, or on behalf of, the transferee,

(ii) that is paid by the transferee to the transferor on or before the day that is 180 days after the end of the particular year, and

(I) would be incurred by the transferor in the particular year (if this Act were read without reference to subsections (26) and 78(4)) in respect of that portion of the scientific research and experimental development that was performed at a time when the transferor did not deal at arm's length with the transferee, and

(e) an amount determined in respect of the transferee for the transferee's first taxation year that ends at or after the end of the particular year for the purpose of determining the value of B in the definition "SR&ED qualified expenditure pool" in subsection (9), and where the total of all amounts each of which is an amount specified in an agreement filed with the Minister under this subsection in respect of a particular taxation year of a transferor exceeds the amount that would be the transferor's SR&ED qualified expenditure pool at the end of the particular year if no agreement were filed with the Minister in respect of the particular year, the least of the amounts determined under paragraphs (a) to (c) in respect of each such agreement is deemed to be nil.

- (c) the cost, or the portion of the cost, of the particular property is included, or would if this Act were read without reference to subsection (26) be included, in an amount, a percentage of which can reasonably be considered to be included in computing the taxpayer's investment tax credit at the end of the taxation year, and

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 123(7), will amend paras. 127(27)(b) and (c) to read as above, applicable to dispositions and conversions that occur after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: Subsection 127(27) provides for the recapture of investment tax credits in respect of property used for scientific research and experimental development (SR&ED) where the property is sold or converted to commercial use. This recapture is effected by way of an addition to tax payable of an amount equal to the lesser of

- the amount that can reasonably be considered to have been included in the taxpayer's investment tax credit in respect of the particular property (i.e., the amount that is obtained by multiplying the amount of the qualified expenditure by the ITC rate that applied to that expenditure), and

- the amount that is obtained by multiplying the ITC rate (that applied to the qualified expenditure) by
 - the proceeds of disposition of the particular property (or of property that incorporates the particular property) if the property is disposed of to a person who deals at arm's length with the taxpayer. (See paragraph 127(27)(e).)
 - in any other case, the fair market value of the particular property (or the other property) at the time of its conversion or disposition. (See paragraph 127(27)(f).)

Concern has been expressed about the application of subsection 127(27) in the context of shared-use equipment, only 25% or 50% of the cost of which is a "qualified expenditure" under subsection 127(9) because of subsection 127(11.5). This concern is illustrated by the following example.

Example:

- Year 1: Taxpayer acquires shared-use equipment for \$100. The ITC rate is 20% and the taxpayer claims an ITC for first term shared-use equipment of \$5 (20% × \$25 $\frac{1}{4}$ of its \$100 cost under paragraph 127(11.5)(c)).*
- Year 2: Taxpayer claims an ITC for second term shared-use equipment of \$5 (20% × \$25 $\frac{1}{4}$ of its \$100 cost under paragraph 127(11.5)(c)).*
- Year 4: Taxpayer sells the property for $80.*
- Recapture under subsection 127(27):*
 - $10 being the lesser of:*
 - $10 (20% × $100 × 50% because the property is second term shared-use equipment), and*
 - $16 (20% × $80 proceeds of disposition).*

However, in this example the $16 amount should be $8 given that only a portion (50%) of the cost of the second term shared-use equipment is a qualified expenditure.

As well, the government is concerned that subsection 127(27) should apply where the disposition or conversion relates to property acquired pursuant to an expenditure that would have been a qualified expenditure incurred in a taxation year but for the application of the 180-day-unpaid-amount rule in subsection 127(26).

To address these concerns, subsection 127(27) is amended in four respects.

First, paragraphs 127(27)(b) and (c) are amended to refer to the "cost, or a portion of the cost, of the particular property" instead of to the "cost of the particular property".

Second, paragraphs 127(27)(b) and (c) are amended to provide that the reference therein to a qualified expenditure included in a taxpayer's investment tax credit be read without reference to subsection 127(26) relating to unpaid amounts.

Application Policies: SR&ED 2005-01: Shared-use equipment.

(d) in the year and after February 23, 1998, the taxpayer converts to commercial use, or disposes of without having previously converted to commercial use, the particular property or another property that incorporates the particular property,

there shall be added to the taxpayer's tax otherwise payable under this Part for the year the lesser of the amount that can reasonably be considered to be included in computing the taxpayer's investment tax credit in respect of the particular property and the amount that is the percentage (described in paragraph (c)) of

(e) if the particular property or the other property is disposed of to a person who deals at arm's length with the taxpayer, the proceeds of disposition of that property, and

(f) in any other case, the fair market value of the particular property or the other property at the time of the conversion or disposition.

Proposed Amendment — 127(27) after (d)

there shall be added to the taxpayer's tax otherwise payable under this Part for the year the lesser of

(e) the amount that can reasonably be considered to be included in the taxpayer's investment tax credit at the end of any taxation year, or that would be so included if this Act were read without reference to subsection (26), in respect of the particular property, and

(f) the amount that is the percentage — that is the sum of each percentage described in paragraph (c) that has been applied to compute the taxpayer's investment tax credit in respect of the particular property — of

(i) in the case where the particular property or the other property is disposed of to a person who deals at arm's length with the taxpayer,

(A) the proceeds of disposition of the property, if the property

(I) is the particular property and is neither first term shared-use equipment nor second term shared-use equipment, or

(II) is the other property,

(B) 25% of the proceeds of disposition of the property, if the property is the particular property, is first term shared-use equipment and is not second term shared-use equipment, and

(C) 50% of the proceeds of disposition of the property, if the property is the particular property and is second term shared-use equipment, and

(ii) in the case where the particular property or the other property is converted to commercial use or is disposed of to a person who does not deal at arm's length with the taxpayer,

(A) the fair market value of the property, if the property

(I) is the particular property and is neither first term shared-use equipment nor second term shared-use equipment, or

(II) is the other property,

(B) 25% of the fair market value of the property at the time of its conversion or disposition, if the particular property is first term shared-use equipment and is not second term shared-use equipment, and

(C) 50% of the fair market [value] of the property at the time of its conversion or disposition, if the particular property is second term shared-use equipment.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 123(8), will amend the portion of subsec. 127(27) after para. (d) to read as above, applicable to dispositions and conversions that occur after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: Third, consequential changes are made to the wording between paragraphs 127(27)(d) and (e). In particular, the first of the two amounts in the "lesser of" formula is moved to new paragraph 127(27)(e). The second of these two amounts is described in amended paragraph 127(27)(f), which combines former paragraphs 127(27)(e) and (f).

Fourth, paragraph 127(27)(f), which combines former paragraphs 127(27)(e) and (f), is changed to account for circumstances where the property that is disposed of or converted is first term shared-use equipment or second term shared-use equipment.

(27.1) Recapture of investment tax credit — child care space amount — There shall be added to a taxpayer's tax otherwise payable under this Part for a particular taxation year, the total of all amounts each of which is an amount determined under subsection (27.12) in respect of a disposition by the taxpayer in the particular taxation year of a property a percentage of the cost of which can reasonably be considered to have been included in the child care space amount of the taxpayer for a taxation year, if the property was acquired in respect of a child care space that was created at a time that is less than 60 months before the disposition.

127.4 (1) [Labour-sponsored funds tax credit] Definitions — In this section,

“approved share” means a share of the capital stock of a prescribed labour-sponsored venture capital corporation, but does not include

(a) a share issued by a registered labour-sponsored venture capital corporation the venture capital business of which was discontinued before the time of the issue, and

(b) a share issued by a prescribed labour-sponsored venture capital corporation (other than a registered labour-sponsored venture capital corporation) if, at the time of the issue, every province under the laws of which the corporation is a prescribed labour-sponsored venture capital corporation has suspended or terminated its assistance in respect of the acquisition of shares of the capital stock of the corporation;

Proposed Amendment — 127.4(1) “approved share”(b)

(b) a share issued by a prescribed labour-sponsored venture capital corporation that is not a registered labour-sponsored venture capital corporation if, at the time of the issue, no province under the laws (described in section 6701 of the Income Tax Regulations) of which the corporation is registered or established provides assistance in respect of the acquisition of the share;

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 127.4(1), will amend para. (b) of the definition “approved share” in subsec. 127.4(1) to read as above, applicable to acquisitions of shares that occur after 2003.

Technical Notes: Subsection 127.4(2) allows an individual (other than a trust) a tax credit for the acquisition of an “approved share”, which is defined in subsection 127.4(1) as, generally, a share issued by a prescribed LSVCC. LSVCCs prescribed for this purpose under section 6701 of the Regulations include LSVCCs registered under Part X.3 of the Act, as well as specified provincially registered LSVCCs. Paragraph (b) of the definition “approved share” excludes from the definition certain shares issued by a provincially-registered LSVCC that is not a federally-registered LSVCC. This exclusion applies only in the event that, at the time of the issue of the shares, no assistance is available in respect of the acquisition of such shares because of a suspension or termination of assistance to the LSVCC under the laws of every province in which the LSVCC is registered.

Paragraph (b) of the definition “approved share” is amended to provide that an approved share does not include a share issued by a provincially-registered LSVCC (that is not a federally-registered LSVCC) if, at the time of the issue, no province under the laws of which the corporation is an LSVCC that is a prescribed LSVCC provides assistance in respect of the acquisition of the share. This amendment is provided to have the definition “approved share” better reflect the policy that a federal income tax credit be available in respect of a share issued by a provincially-registered LSVCC (that is not a federally-registered LSVCC) only if a provincial income tax credit is also available in respect of the share.

Paragraph (b) of the definition will continue to apply if, at the time of the issue by such an LSVCC of a share, no assistance is available in respect of the acquisition of shares of the LSVCC because of a suspension or termination of assistance to the LSVCC under the laws of every province in which the LSVCC is registered.

Amended paragraph (b) of the definition will also apply where there has not been a suspension or termination of assistance with respect to the issuance of the LSVCC's shares generally, but assistance is not available with respect to the acquisition of a particular share. For example, if under the laws of a province under which an LSVCC is a prescribed LSVCC, a taxpayer who acquires a share is not entitled to any assistance in respect of the acquisition either because of having reached the age of 65 years or because of the province of residence of the taxpayer, the share will not be treated as an approved share.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Sept. 29, 2004:

Dear [xxx]

Thank you for your letter of April 28, 2004, requesting that the Government of Canada delay the effective date of the amendment to the definition of “approved share” in subsection 127.4(1) of the Income Tax Act. The amendment and the effective date were originally announced in a package of income tax technical amendments released in draft form by the Department of Finance in December of 2002. You have asked that the original effective date of the amendment be delayed until the 2004 and subsequent taxation years.

As you point out in your letter, the Canada Revenue Agency issued a Technical Interpretation on April 15, 2003 that indicated that the federal tax credit given for purchasing a share of a labour-sponsored venture capital corporation registered in Québec would be available to an investor notwithstanding that the investor was not eligible for a provincial credit, without any mention of the December 2002 proposed change. Technical interpretations are not legally binding on the Canada Revenue Agency and, indeed, contain wording that explains this fact. However, as it was recognized that some confusion could have been created by the issuance of this document after the release of the December 2002 technical amendment package, our Minister is prepared to recommend to Parliament a coming into force provision that would provide that the proposed amendment would apply to acquisitions of shares after 2003.

Thank you for writing on this matter.

Yours sincerely,

Proposed Amendment — Convertible LSVCC shares

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 13, 2004:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing in response to your letter of September 24, 2003, concerning the application of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") to investors owning shares in a labour-sponsored venture capital corporation ("LSVCC") that are convertible into another series of class A share. Specifically, you are concerned that the labour-sponsored fund tax credit recovery mechanism contained in Part XII.5 will apply to an investor in such an LSVCC upon the conversion of their shares, and submit that this result is inconsistent with the policy of the LSVCC program.

You have informed us that [xxx] is now the manager of [xxx], a federally registered LSVCC. It is your wish to have [xxx] issue its class A shares in series, with shareholders having the ability to convert from one series to another at their request. The only difference between the series will be the investments selected for the non-eligible investment portion, or reserve, of [xxx] portfolio. The venture capital portion of the shareholder's equity will be the same for all series. On that basis, we understand that under your proposed structure no eligible investment will be at risk of divestment as the result of a conversion from one series of class A share to another.

Based on our understanding that the issue of convertible shares by [xxx] would not put at risk the capital placed in eligible investments, restrict the LSVCC from investing more than the minimal requirement in eligible investments nor allow an investor to withdraw their investment from the LSVCC before the eight-year holding period expires without a recovery of the tax credit given in respect of those shares, your proposal does not appear to contravene the policy underlying the LSVCC program. Accordingly, we intend to recommend to the Minister of Finance that changes to the Act be implemented to allow for such conversions without creating a recapture of the labour-sponsored tax credit. It is contemplated that accommodation would be made only for exchanges subject to section 51 of the Act, where the conversion is made from one series of class A share to another series of class A share, and where the series differ only in respect of the reserve portion of the shareholder's equity, as described above. In conjunction with this accommodation, it is also envisioned that changes to section 127.4 of the Act will be made to ensure that a new labour-sponsored tax credit is not available upon the issuance of new class A shares by a LSVCC pursuant to a share conversion. We will be recommending that these changes be effective for conversions that take place after 2003. If our recommendations are acted upon, we anticipate that the amendments would be included in an upcoming technical bill.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber

Proposed Addition — 127.52(1)(d)(iii)

(iii) this Act were read without reference to subsection 104(21.6);

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), s. 125, will add para. 127.52(1)(d)(iii), applicable to 2000 et seq.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 127.52(1)(d) provides that in computing an individual's adjusted taxable income for minimum tax purposes, the total amount of capital gains and losses is to be taken into account. In some cases, because of subsection 104(21.6) (which in some cases deems a taxpayer to have realised a larger capital gain than was actually realised) more than the total amount of capital gains and losses would be taken into account. Excess capital gains are deemed by subsection 104(21.6) to have been realized in order that the inclusion rate for capital gains realized on property disposed of by a trust prior to February 28, 2000 is $\frac{3}{4}$ and property disposed of by a trust after February 27, 2000 and before October 18, 2000 is $\frac{2}{5}$. Paragraph 127.52(1)(d) is therefore amended to ensure that only the actual amount of the gain is included in computing the alternative minimum tax.

(e) the total of all amounts deductible under section 65, 66, 66.1, 66.2, 66.21 or 66.4 or under subsection 29(10) or (12) of the Income Tax Application Rules in computing the individual's income for the year were the lesser of the amounts otherwise so deductible by the individual for the year and the total of

(i) the individual's income for the year from royalties in respect of, and such part of the individual's income, other than royalties, for the year as may reasonably be considered as attributable to, the production of petroleum, natural gas and minerals, determined before deducting those amounts, and

(ii) all amounts included in computing the individual's income for the year under section 59;

(e.1) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount deductible under any of paragraphs 20(1)(c) to (f) in computing the individual's income for the year in respect of a property that is a flow-through share (if the individual is the person to whom the share was issued under an agreement referred to in the definition "flow-through share" in subsection 66(15)), a Canadian resource property or a foreign resource property were the lesser of the total of the amounts otherwise so determined for the year and the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount described in subparagraph (e)(i) or (ii), determined without reference to paragraphs 20(1)(c) to (f),

exceeds

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount deductible under section 65, 66, 66.1, 66.2, 66.21 or 66.4 or under subsection 29(10) or (12) of the Income Tax Application Rules in computing the individual's income for the year;

(f) subsection 82(1) were read without reference to paragraph 82(1)(b);

(g) the total of all amounts deductible under section 104 in computing the income of a trust for the year were equal to the total of

(i) the total of all amounts otherwise deductible under that section, and

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is $\frac{2}{5}$ of

(A) amounts designated by the trust under subsection 104(21) for the year, or

(B) that portion of a net taxable capital gain of the trust that may reasonably be considered to

(I) be part of an amount included, by virtue of subsection 104(13) or section 105, in computing the income for the year of a non-resident beneficiary of the trust, or

(II) have been paid in the year by a trust governed by an employee benefit plan to a beneficiary thereunder;

(h) the only amounts deductible under sections 110 to 110.7 in computing the individual's taxable income for the year or taxable income earned in Canada for the year, as the case may be, were

(i) the amounts deducted under any of subsections 110(2), 110.6(2), (2.1), (2.2), (3) and (12) and 110.7(1),

(ii) the amount deducted under paragraph 110(1)(d), not exceeding the total of

Proposed Amendment — 127.531

Letter from Dept. of Finance, March 23, 2010:

Dear [xxx]:

I am writing in response to your letters dated August 17 and November 4, 2009, in which you identified an issue with respect to the interaction of the logging tax credit set out in subsections 127(1) and (2) of the Income Tax Act (Act) and the alternative minimum tax (AMT) rules set out in sections 127.5 to 127.55 of the Act. I apologize for the delay of this reply.

The AMT rules set out an alternate calculation of tax that an individual must pay if the AMT payable is greater than the individual's tax payable under the standard tax calculation. In your letter you identified a situation where an individual claiming the logging tax credit could become subject to the AMT. In particular, you have noted that the federal logging tax credit is available under the standard tax calculation, but is not available under the AMT calculation.

We are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that section 127.531 of the Act be amended to add a reference to subsection 127(1) of the Act, and that the amendment apply to the 2009 and subsequent taxation years. If our recommendation were acted upon, we anticipate that the amendment would be included in a future technical bill. While I cannot offer any assurance that the Minister will agree with our recommendation, I hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard Lalonde, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(1.1) Trusts subject to subsec. 94(3) — Paragraph (1)(b) does not apply, at a time in a particular taxation year of a trust, to the trust if the trust is resident in Canada for the particular taxation year for the purpose of computing its income.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part I — NRTs and FIEs), s. 32, will add subsec. 128.1(1.1), applicable to trust taxation years that begin after 2006, and to trust taxation years that begin Technical Notes: Subsection 128.1(1) sets out rules that apply where a taxpayer becomes resident in Canada. Paragraph 128.1(1)(b) treats a taxpayer who becomes resident in Canada as having disposed of the taxpayer's property, with certain exceptions, for proceeds equal to the property's fair market value.

New subsection 128.1(1.1) identifies a set of circumstances in which paragraph 128.1(1)(b) does not apply to a taxpayer that is a trust.

Under subsection 128.1(1.1), paragraph 128.1(1)(b) will not apply, at a time in a particular taxation year of a trust, to the trust if the trust is resident in Canada because of new paragraph 94(3)(a) for the particular taxation year for the purpose of computing its income.

This rule applies to ensure that a deemed disposition does not occur solely because the basis for a trust's residency in Canada changes from paragraph 94(3)(a) to some other basis.

For more detail on subsections 94(3) and (4), see the commentary on those provisions.

Related Provisions: 94(4)(b) [proposed] — Deeming non-resident trust to be resident in Canada does not apply to para. (a).

where

A is the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount deemed by paragraph (1)(c) to be the cost to the corporation of property deemed under that paragraph to have been acquired by the corporation at the particular time

exceeds

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a debt owing by the corporation, or any other obligation of the corporation to pay an amount, that is outstanding at the particular time,

(b) for the purposes of this Act, in computing the paid-up capital in respect of a class of shares of the corporation's capital stock at any time after the particular time and before the time, if any, at which the corporation next becomes resident in Canada, there shall be

(i) added the amount of the paid-up capital adjustment in respect of the particular class, if that amount is positive and the corporation so elects for all such classes in respect of that acquisition of residence by notifying the Minister in writing within 90 days after the particular time, and

(ii) deducted, if the amount of the paid-up capital adjustment in respect of the particular class is negative, the absolute value of that amount.

(5) Instalment interest — If an individual is deemed by subsection (4) to have disposed of a property in a taxation year, in applying sections 155 and 156 and subsections 156.1(1) to (3) and 161(2), (4) and (4.01) and any regulations made for the purposes of those provisions, the individual's total taxes payable under this Part and Part I.1 for the year are deemed to be the lesser of

(a) the individual's total taxes payable under this Part and Part I.1 for the year, determined before taking into consideration the specified future tax consequences for the year, and

(b) the amount that would be determined under paragraph (a) if subsection (4) did not apply to the individual for the year.

History: Subsec. 128.1(5) added by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 123(5), applicable to changes in residence that occur after October 1, 1996.

(6) Returning former resident — If an individual (other than a trust) becomes resident in Canada at a particular time in a taxation year and the last time (in this subsection referred to as the "emigration time"), before the particular time, at which the individual ceased to be resident in Canada was after October 1, 1996,

(a) subject to paragraph (b), if the individual so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister on or before the individual's filing-due date for the year, paragraphs (4)(b) and (c) do not apply to the individual's cessation of residence at the emigration time in respect of all properties that were taxable Canadian properties of the individual throughout the period that began at the emigration time and that ends at the particular time;

(b) where, if a property in respect of which an election under paragraph (a) is made had been acquired by the individual at the emigration time at a cost equal to its fair market value at the emigration time and had been disposed of by the individual immediately before the particular time for proceeds of disposition equal to its fair market value immediately before the particular time, the application of subsection 40(3.7) would reduce the amount that would, but for that subsection and this subsection, be the individual's loss from the disposition,

(i) the individual is deemed to have disposed of the property at the time of disposition (within the meaning assigned by paragraph (4)(b)) in respect of the emigration time for proceeds of disposition equal to the total of

(A) the adjusted cost base to the individual of the property immediately before the time of disposition, and

(B) the amount, if any, by which that reduction exceeds the lesser of

(I) the adjusted cost base to the individual of the property immediately before the time of disposition, and

(II) the amount, if any, that the individual specifies for the purposes of this paragraph in the election under paragraph (a) in respect of the property,

(ii) the individual is deemed to have reacquired the property at the emigration time at a cost equal to the amount, if any, by which the amount determined under clause (i)(A) exceeds the lesser of that reduction and the amount specified by the individual under subclause (i)(B)(II), and

(iii) for the purpose of section 119, the individual is deemed to have disposed of the property immediately before the particular time;

(c) if the individual so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister on or before the individual's filing-due date for the year, in respect of each property that the individual owned throughout the period that began at the emigration time and that ends at the particular time and that is deemed by paragraph (1)(b) to have been disposed of because the individual became resident in Canada, notwithstanding paragraphs (1)(c) and (4)(b) the individual's proceeds of disposition at the time of disposition (within the meaning assigned by paragraph (4)(b)), and the individual's cost of acquiring the property at the particular time, are deemed to be those proceeds and that cost, determined without reference to this paragraph, minus the least of

(i) the amount that would, but for this paragraph, have been the individual's gain from the disposition of the property deemed by paragraph (4)(b) to have occurred,

(ii) the fair market value of the property at the particular time, and

(iii) the amount that the individual specifies for the purposes of this paragraph in the election; and

(d) notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5), any assessment of tax that is payable under this Act by the individual for any taxation year that is before the year that includes the particular time and that is not before the year that includes the emigration time shall be made that is necessary to take an election under this subsection into account, except that no such assessment shall affect the computation of

(i) interest payable under this Act to or by a taxpayer in respect of any period that is before the day on which the taxpayer's return of income for the taxation year that includes the particular time is filed, or

(ii) any penalty payable under this Act.

History: Subsec. 128.1(6) added by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 123(5), applicable to changes in residence that occur after October 1, 1996, and an election made under paras. 128.1(6)(a) and (c) by an individual who ceased to be resident in Canada before June 14, 2001 is deemed to have been made in a timely manner if it is made on or before the individual's filing-due date for the taxation year that includes June 14, 2001.

Regulations: 600(c) (late filing of elections under (6)(a) and (c)).

(6.1) Deemed taxable Canadian property — For the purposes of paragraph (6)(a), a property is deemed to be taxable Canadian property of the individual throughout the period that began at the emigration time and that ends at the particular time if

(a) the emigration time is before March 5, 2010; and

(b) the property was taxable Canadian property of the individual on March 4, 2010.

History: Subsec. 128.1(6.1) added by 2010, c. 12, s. 15, applicable in determining after March 4, 2010 whether a property is taxable Canadian property of a taxpayer.

(7) Returning trust beneficiary — If an individual (other than a trust)

- (a) becomes resident in Canada at a particular time in a taxation year,
- (b) owns at the particular time a property that the individual last acquired on a trust distribution to which subsection 107(2) would, but for subsection 107(5), have applied and at a time (in this subsection referred to as the “distribution time”) that was after October 1, 1996 and before the particular time, and
- (c) was a beneficiary of the trust at the last time, before the particular time, at which the individual ceased to be resident in Canada, the following rules apply:

- (d) subject to paragraphs (e) and (f), if the individual and the trust jointly so elect in writing and file the election with the Minister on or before the earlier of their filing-due dates for their taxation years that include the particular time, subsection 107(2.1) does not apply to the distribution in respect of all properties acquired by the individual on the distribution that were taxable Canadian properties of the individual throughout the period that began at the distribution time and that ends at the particular time,
- (e) paragraph (f) applies in respect of the individual, the trust and a property in respect of which an election under paragraph (d) is made where, if the individual

- (i) had been resident in Canada at the distribution time,
- (ii) had acquired the property at the distribution time at a cost equal to its fair market value at that time,
- (iii) had ceased to be resident in Canada immediately after the distribution time, and
- (iv) had, immediately before the particular time, disposed of the property for proceeds of disposition equal to its fair market value immediately before the particular time, the application of subsection 40(3.7) would reduce the amount that would, but for that subsection and this subsection, have been the individual's loss from the disposition,

(f) where this paragraph applies in respect of an individual, a trust and a property,

- (i) notwithstanding paragraph 107(2.1)(a), the trust is deemed to have disposed of the property at the distribution time for proceeds of disposition equal to the total of

- (A) the cost amount to the trust of the property immediately before the distribution time, and
- (B) the amount, if any, by which the reduction under subsection 40(3.7) described in paragraph (e) exceeds the lesser of

- (I) the cost amount to the trust of the property immediately before the distribution time, and
- (II) the amount, if any, which the individual and the trust jointly specify for the purposes of this paragraph in the election under paragraph (d) in respect of the property, and

- (ii) notwithstanding paragraph 107(2.1)(b), the individual is deemed to have acquired the property at the distribution time at a cost equal to the amount, if any, by which the amount otherwise determined under paragraph 107(2)(b) exceeds the lesser of the reduction under subsection 40(3.7) described in paragraph (e) and the amount specified under subclause (i)(B)(II),

(g) if the individual and the trust jointly so elect in writing and file the election with the Minister on or before the later of their filing-due dates for their taxation years that include the particular time, in respect of each property that the individual owned throughout the period that began at the distribution time and that ends at the particular time and that is deemed by paragraph (1)(b) to have been disposed of because the individual became resident in Canada, notwithstanding paragraphs 107(2.1)(a) and (b), the trust's proceeds of disposition under paragraph 107(2.1)(a) at the distribution time, and the individual's cost of acquiring the property at the particular time, are deemed to be those proceeds and that cost determined without reference to this paragraph, minus the least of

- (i) the amount that would, but for this paragraph, have been the trust's gain from the disposition of the property deemed by paragraph 107(2.1)(a) to have occurred,
- (ii) the fair market value of the property at the particular time, and
- (iii) the amount that the individual and the trust jointly specify for the purposes of this paragraph in the election,

(h) if the trust ceases to exist before the individual's filing-due date for the individual's taxation year that includes the particular time,

- (i) an election or specification described in this subsection may be made by the individual alone in writing if the election is filed with the Minister on or before that filing-due date, and
- (ii) if the individual alone makes such an election or specification, the individual and the trust are jointly and severally liable for any amount payable under this Act by the trust as a result of the election or specification, and

- (i) interest payable under this Act to or by the trust or the individual in respect of any period that is before the individual's filing-due date for the taxation year that includes the particular time, or

- (ii) any penalty payable under this Act.

(e) the amount that would, but for the election, be the individual's gain from the disposition of the property at the particular time, and

(10) Definitions — The definitions in this subsection apply in this section.

"excluded right or interest" of a taxpayer who is an individual means

(a) a right of the individual under, or an interest of the individual in a trust governed by,

- (i) a registered retirement savings plan or a plan referred to in subsection 146(12) as an "amended plan",
- (ii) a registered retirement income fund,
- (iii) a registered education savings plan,
- (iii.1) a registered disability savings plan,
- (iii.2) a TFSA,
- (iv) a deferred profit sharing plan or a plan referred to in subsection 147(15) as a "revoked plan",
- (v) an employees profit sharing plan,
- (vi) an employee benefit plan (other than a plan described in subparagraph (b)(i) or (ii)),

Proposed Addition — 128.1(10) "excluded right or interest" (a)(vi.1)

(vi.1) an employee life and health trust,

Application: The February 26, 2010 draft legislation (ELHTs), s. 12, will add subpara. (a)(vi.1) to the definition "excluded right or interest" in subsec. 128.1(10), applicable after 2009.

Technical Notes: Subsection 128.1(10) defines the expression "excluded right or interest" for the purposes of the taxpayer migration rules in section 128.1. This definition is primarily relevant for paragraphs 128.1(1)(b) and (4)(b), which treat individuals as having disposed of (and immediately reacquired) most of their property on immigrating to or emigrating from Canada. Generally, excluded rights or interests are exempted from these deemed disposition rules. Paragraph (a) of the definition refers to rights under, or an interest in, a trust governed by certain deferred income plans.

Paragraph (a) of the definition is amended to add a reference to employee life and health trusts. This will ensure that a beneficiary under an employee life and health trust who immigrates to or emigrates from Canada will not be treated as having disposed of their rights under the trust.

For more information regarding employee life and health trusts, please refer to the commentary on new section 144.1.

(vii) a plan or arrangement (other than an employee benefit plan) under which the individual has a right to receive in a year remuneration in respect of services rendered by the individual in the year or a prior year,

(ii) a plan or arrangement that would, but for paragraph 6801(c) of the Income Tax Regulations, be a salary deferral arrangement, to the extent that the benefit can reasonably be considered to be attributable to services rendered by the individual in Canada;

(c) a right of the individual under an agreement referred to in subsection 7(1);

(d) a right of the individual to a retiring allowance;

(e) a right of the individual under, or an interest of the individual in, a trust that is

(i) an employee trust,

(ii) an amateur athlete trust,

(iii) a cemetery care trust, or

(iv) a trust governed by an eligible funeral arrangement;

(f) a right of the individual to receive a payment under

(i) an annuity contract, or

(i) the Canada Pension Plan or a provincial plan described in section 3 of that Act,

(ii) the Old Age Security Act,

(iv) a plan or arrangement instituted by the social security legislation of a country other than Canada or of a state, province or other political subdivision of such a country;

(h) a right of the individual to a benefit described in any of subparagraphs 56(1)(a)(iii) to (vi);

(i) a right of the individual to a payment out of a NISA Fund No. 2;

(j) an interest of the individual in a personal trust resident in Canada if the interest was never acquired for consideration and did not arise as a consequence of a qualifying disposition by the individual (within the meaning that would be assigned by subsection 107.4(1) if that subsection were read without reference to paragraphs 107.4(1)(h) and (i));

(k) an interest of the individual in a non-resident testamentary trust if the interest was never acquired for consideration; or

(l) an interest of the individual in a life insurance policy in Canada, except for that part of the policy in respect of which the individual is deemed by paragraph 138.1(1)(e) to have an interest in a related segregated fund trust.

Related Provisions: 108(6) — Where terms of trust are varied; 108(7) — Meaning of "acquired for consideration"; 128.1(1)(b)(iv) — No deemed disposition on immigration; 128.1(4)(b)(iii) — No deemed disposition on emigration; 128.1(4)(d.1) — Where share acquired under stock option before emigration; 128.1(10) "reportable property" — No requirement to report most excluded personal property.

“reportable property” of an individual at a particular time means any property other than

- (a) money that is legal tender in Canada and deposits of such money;
- (b) property that would be an excluded right or interest of the individual if the definition “excluded right or interest” in this subsection were read without reference to paragraphs (c), (j) and (l) of that definition;
- (c) if the individual is not a trust and was not, during the 120-month period that ends at the particular time, resident in Canada for more than 60 months, property described in subparagraph (4)(b)(iv) that is not taxable Canadian property; and

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 2, 2003:

Dear [xxx]:

I am writing in response to your letter dated April 25, 2003 to Mr. Lawrence Purdy of this Division asking that we consider recommending an amendment to section 128.3 of the Income Tax Act (“Act”) so that this section applies for the purposes of subparagraph 128.1(4)(b)(iv).

Under the taxpayer migration rules in section 128.1 of the Act, the post-departure disposition of a property can have important tax consequences for an emigrant individual. Section 128.3 of the Act allows for a deferral of these consequences in certain circumstances, by deeming the individual not to have disposed of shares that were converted to new shares under section 51 of the Act, or subject to a share for share exchange, reorganization or amalgamation under any of sections 85.1, 86 or 87 of the Act. Section 128.3 also deems the share received by an individual to be the same as the old share for the purposes of section 119, and subsections 126(2.21) to (2.23). These provisions provide tax credits for individuals who were subject to the departure rules. As well, the new share is deemed to be the same share for the purposes of subsections 128.1(6) to (8), which allow returning former residents to “unwind” transactions subject to the departure tax rules, or in certain cases carry back future losses to the year of departure. By deeming the new share to be the same as the old share, the rule ensures that the individual does not lose access to these relieving provisions.

However, you have pointed out that section 128.3 does not apply for the purposes of subparagraph 128.1(4)(b)(iv). Under subparagraph 128.1(4)(b)(iv) property owned by an individual is not subject to the deemed disposition rules on emigration from Canada if the individual, during the last 10 years, was not resident in Canada for more than 60 months and owned the property when the individual first took up residence in Canada or inherited the property after that time. Since section 128.3 does not apply, an individual who immigrated to Canada owning shares, and received new shares after this time, because of a share for share exchange, reorganization or merger, or because the shares were converted into new shares, would be deemed to dispose of these new shares upon emigration from Canada, even if the individual had resided here less than 60 months in the past 10 years. In your view this is an unfair result, and you request that we consider extending the policy of section 128.3 to include individuals who find themselves in this situation.

The policy intent of section 128.3 is to allow continuity in the migration rules’ treatment of an individual where the individual’s property has been replaced because of a situation that is typically beyond the individual’s control, such as a corporate merger or reorganization. It is important to note that although this section is relatively new, and the previous rules, contained in section 48 of the Act, did not provide such relief, there was in the past less need for it. This was because the previous rules allowed individuals to defer departure tax on most property owned by them, by electing to treat the property as taxable Canadian property (TCP). That election meant that the property was not deemed disposed of upon emigration. Therefore, an individual who received new shares because of a reorganization or merger could elect on emigration to treat these as TCP and avoid the deemed disposition of this property on emigration. The election effectively removed the need to have something similar to section 128.3.

In my view, there is no reason in policy terms not to extend the relief provided in section 128.3 to subparagraph 128.1(4)(b)(iv), which as I have described provides an exception to the deemed disposition rules for short-term residents. The effect of the change would be that short-term residents who own shares on immigration and receive new shares on a tax deferred basis under any of sections 51, 85.1, 86 or 87 of the Act, would be deemed not to have disposed of the share and the new share would be the same as the old share, thereby allowing the share to continue to qualify for the exemption from the deemed disposition rules provided in subparagraph 128.1(4)(b)(iv).

You further request that we recommend this change be applicable for individuals who have emigrated from Canada after October 1, 1996 to ensure consistency. We do not normally recommend that changes such as this be made on such a markedly retroactive basis, since both taxpayers and the Government need to be able to rely at any particular time on the law as it exists at that time. Exceptionally, however, we do recommend linking a relieving change to the transaction or circumstance that makes the Government aware of the need for the change. In this case, we understand that this fact situation applies to your client's 2002 taxation year and therefore we are willing to recommend that this change apply to an individual's 2002 and subsequent taxation years.

I cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with the recommendation that we intend to make in this regard. Nonetheless, I hope that this statement of our position is helpful. Thank you for bringing this issue to our attention.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — 129(3)(a)(ii)(C)

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), s. 127, will amend cl. 129(3)(a)(ii)(C) to replace " $1\frac{1}{4}\%$ of" with "3 times", applicable to 2003 et seq.

Technical Notes: Section 129 allows a private corporation that pays a taxable dividend to obtain a partial refund of the income taxes it has paid on its investment income. For this purpose, paragraph 129(3)(a) adds to the refundable dividend tax on hand of a Canadian-controlled private corporation at the end of a taxation year the least of three amounts.

One of these amounts, which is described in subparagraph 129(3)(a)(ii), is $26\frac{2}{3}\%$ of a corporation's taxable income, less income that either benefited from the section 125 small business deduction or supported a foreign tax credit (FTC). Income that supported an FTC is measured by multiplying both the corporation's non-business- and its business-income FTCs by factors that reflect assumed Canadian tax rates. Subparagraph 129(3)(a)(ii) is amended to adjust the factor for foreign business income. The factor for business-income FTCs will become 3. This implies an assumed tax rate of 33.3%.

(iii) the corporation's tax for the year payable under this Part determined without reference to section 123.2,

(b) the total of the taxes under Part IV payable by the corporation for the year, and

(c) where the corporation was a private corporation at the end of its preceding taxation year, the corporation's refundable dividend tax on hand at the end of that preceding year

exceeds

(d) the corporation's dividend refund for its preceding taxation year.

Related Provisions: 129(3.1) — Grandfathering for property disposed of before November 13, 1981; 141.1 — Insurance corporation deemed not to be private corporation; 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero; 260(1)(c) — Amounts deemed paid where partnership of corporations enters into securities lending arrangement.

History: Subsec. 129(3) substituted by 1996, c. 21, subsec. 32(2), applicable to taxation years that end after June 1995 except that, in their application to such taxation years that began before July 1995, in computing the amount determined under each of subparas. 129(3)(a)(i) and (ii) there shall be deducted an amount equal to that proportion of $\frac{1}{4}$ of the amount otherwise determined under the subpara. that the number of days in that year are before July 1995 is of the number of days in the year. Subsec. 129(3) formerly read:

(3) In this section, "refundable dividend tax on hand" of a corporation at the end of any particular taxation year means the amount, if any, by which the total of

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of a taxation year commencing after it last became a private corporation and ending not later than the end of the particular taxation year and, where the taxation year commences after November 12, 1981, throughout which the corporation was a Canadian-controlled private corporation, equal to, in respect of taxation years ending before 1978, the least of, in respect of taxation years ending after 1977 and commencing before 1987, $\frac{2}{3}$ of the least of, in respect of taxation years commencing after 1986 and before 1988, the least of, and in respect of taxation years commencing after 1987, $\frac{1}{4}$ of the least of

(B) in respect of a taxation year ending after November 12, 1981, the amount, if any, by which the total of the amounts that would, if subsection (4) were read without reference to C in the definition "Canadian investment income" in that subsection, be its Canadian investment income for the year and its foreign investment income for the year, exceeds the total of

(I) the amount, if any, deducted under paragraph 111(1)(b) from the corporation's income for the year, and

(II) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of the corporation's loss for the year from a source that is property,

(ii) the amount, if any, by which the total of

(A) 25% of the corporation's Canadian investment income for the year, and

(B) the amount, if any, by which 30% of the corporation's foreign investment income for the year exceeds the total of amounts deducted under subsection 126(1) from the tax for the year otherwise payable by it under this Part, exceeds 25% of the amount, if any, deducted under paragraph 111(1)(b) from the corporation's income for the year,

(iii) 25% of the amount, if any, by which the corporation's taxable income for the year exceeds the total of

(A) the least of the amounts determined under paragraphs 125(1)(a) to (c) in respect of the corporation for the year,

(C) 1/4 of the total of amounts deducted under subsection 126(2) from its tax for the year otherwise payable under this Part, and

(iv) 3/4 of the amount of the corporation's tax for the year payable under this Part determined without reference to section 123.2,

(b) the total of the taxes under Part IV payable by the corporation for the particular taxation year and any previous taxation years ending after it last became a private corporation, and

(b.1) the amount, if any, of the corporation's addition at December 31, 1986 of refundable dividend tax on hand

exceeds the total of

(c) the total of the corporation's dividend refunds for taxation years ending after it last became a private corporation and before the particular taxation year,

(d) the amount, if any, of the corporation's reduction at December 31, 1977 of refundable dividend tax on hand, and

(e) the amount, if any, of the corporation's reduction at December 31, 1987 of refundable dividend tax on hand.

That portion of subsec. 129(3) preceding para. (a) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 73(3), applicable to 1993 et seq. That portion formerly read:

(A) was a specified shareholder of the corporation at any time after June 20, 1996 and before August 14, 1998, and

(B) would have been a specified shareholder of the corporation on June 20, 1996 if subpara 130(3)(a)(vii), as amended, were read without reference to clauses (B) and (D), subpara. 130(3)(a)(vii), as amended, does not apply to the corporation, with respect to the particular person and persons related to the particular person, except as provided in subsections 155(5) to (11) of the said c. 19, which were also amended by 1999, c. 22 (see below). These amendments by 1999, c. 22 are deemed to have come into force on June 18, 1998. The amendment made by 1998, c. 19 read:

(vii) no person would be a specified shareholder of the corporation in the year if, in the definition “specified shareholder” in subsection 248(1),

(A) the portion of that definition before paragraph (a) were read as follows:

“specified shareholder” of a corporation in a taxation year means a taxpayer who owns, directly or indirectly, at any time in the year, more than 25% of the issued shares of any class of the capital stock of the corporation and, for the purpose of this definition,

(B) the reference in paragraph (d) of that definition to “not less than 10%” were read as a reference to “more than 25%”, and

Subsecs. 155(5) to (11) of 1998, c. 19, (as amended by 1999, c. 22, s. 92, deemed to have come into force on June 18, 1998) provide:

(5) [The amendment to subpara. 130(3)(a)(vii)] applies to a corporation that was an investment corporation on June 20, 1996 for a taxation year that begins after that day if, at any time after that day and before the end of the year, a particular person described in paragraph [155(4)(b) of the said c. 19 (above)] in respect of the corporation for the year contributes capital to the corporation or acquires a share of the capital stock of the corporation other than by a permitted acquisition.

(6) [The amendment to subpara. 130(3)(a)(vii)] applies to a corporation that was an investment corporation on June 20, 1996 for a taxation year that begins after that day where, at any time after that day and before the end of the year, a newly related person in respect of the corporation

(a) contributed capital to the corporation; or

(b) held at any particular time property (in this paragraph referred to as an “ineligible investment”) that is

(i) a share of the capital stock of the corporation, or

(ii) a share of the capital stock of a corporation, or an interest in a partnership or trust, that held an ineligible investment at the particular time.

(7) For the purpose of subsection (6), a newly related person in respect of a corporation at any time means a person who, at any other time that is before that time and after June 20, 1996, became related to a particular person described in paragraph [155(4)(b) of the said c. 19 (above)] in respect of the corporation, but does not include a person who would, if the taxation year of the corporation that includes that other time had ended immediately before that other time, have been a particular person described in paragraph [155(4)(b) of the said c. 19 (above)] in respect of the corporation for the year.

(8) [Repealed by 1999, c. 22, s. 92]

(9) For the purposes of subsections (5) to (8),

(a) where at a particular time

(i) a trust that existed on June 20, 1996 distributes a share of the capital stock of a corporation to a person who was a beneficiary under the trust throughout the period from June 20, 1996 to the particular time in satisfaction of all or any part of the beneficiary’s capital interest in the trust, or

(ii) a partnership that existed on June 20, 1996 distributes, on ceasing to exist, a share of the capital stock of a corporation or an interest in a share to a person who was a member of the partnership throughout the period from June 20, 1996 to the particular time, the share is deemed to have been owned by the beneficiary or member from the later of June 20, 1996 and the time the share was last acquired by the trust or partnership until the particular time; and

(b) where a person who is a beneficiary of a trust or a member of a partnership is deemed by paragraph (b), (c) or (e) of the definition “specified shareholder” in subsection 248(1) of the Act to own a share owned by the partnership or trust, the person is deemed to have acquired the share at the later of the time the share was acquired by the trust or partnership and the time the person last became a beneficiary of the trust or a member of the partnership.

(10) At any time on or after the day of the death of a person described in paragraph [155(4)(c) of the said c. 19 (above)] in respect of a corporation and before the third anniversary of that day,

(a) the estate of the deceased person is deemed to be a person described in paragraphs (4)(b) and (c) [of the said c. 19 (above)] who is related to each person who, throughout the period that begins at the end of June 20, 1996 and ends at the time of death, was related to the deceased person;

(b) notwithstanding subsection (7), the estate is deemed not to be a newly related person in respect of the corporation;

(c) notwithstanding subsection (11), the acquisition of shares of the corporation’s capital stock by the estate from the deceased person is deemed to be a permitted acquisition; and

(d) the estate is deemed not to be a trust for the purposes of subparagraph (9)(a)(i) of this Act and paragraphs (b) and (c) of the definition “specified shareholder” in subsection 248(1) of the Income Tax Act.

(11) The definitions in this subsection apply in subsections (4) to (10) [of the said c. 19 (above)] and this subsection.

“permitted acquisition” means an acquisition by a particular person of a share of a class of the capital stock of a corporation that was

(a) held, at each particular time after June 20, 1996 and before the time at which the particular person acquired it, or

(b) issued after June 20, 1996 by the corporation as a stock dividend and held, at each particular time after the time the share was issued and before the time at which the particular person acquired it,

by the particular person or by a person who was related to the particular person throughout the period that begins at the end of June 20, 1996 and ends at the particular time if, immediately after the time at which the particular person acquires the share, the total percentage of the issued shares of that class held by the particular person and persons related to the particular person (or in the case of acquisitions before August 14, 1998, by the particular person and persons with whom the particular person did not deal at arm’s length immediately after the acquisition) does not exceed the permitted percentage for the particular person in respect of that class of shares.

“permitted percentage” for a particular person in respect of any class of shares of the capital stock of a corporation means

(a) in respect of acquisitions of shares before August 14, 1998, the greatest percentage that is the total percentage of the issued shares of a class of the capital stock of the corporation held at the end of June 20, 1996 by the particular person and persons with whom the particular person did not at that time deal at arm’s length; and

(b) in any other case, the greater of

(i) the greatest percentage that is the total percentage of the issued shares of a class of the capital stock of the corporation held at the end of June 20, 1996 by the particular person and persons related to the particular person, and

(ii) the greatest percentage that is the total percentage of the issued shares of a class of the capital stock of the corporation held at the beginning of August 14, 1998 by the particular person and persons related to the particular person.

"related persons" and persons related to each other have, for purposes other than applying the definitions "permitted acquisition" and "permitted percentage" in respect of acquisitions of shares before August 14, 1998, the meaning that would be assigned by section 251 of the Act if paragraph 251(2)(a) of the Act were read as follows:

(a) an individual and

(i) the individual's child (as defined in subsection 70(10)) who is under 19 years of age, or

(ii) the individual's spouse;

"specified shareholder" has the meaning assigned by subparagraph 130(3)(a)(vii) of the Act, as enacted by subsection (2).

Proposed Amendment — Application of 130(3)(a)(vii) — definition of "specified shareholder" in transition rules

Letter from Department of Finance, March 12, 2003:

Dear [xxx]

We are responding to your letter to me of January 8, 2003, your letter of February 3, 2003 to Stephanie Smith and subsequent discussions with Ms. Smith concerning the special transitional rules that apply to exempt from the application of subparagraph 130(3)(a)(vii) an investment corporation that had at least one "existing specified shareholder" on June 20, 1996. In general, the exemption is lost where the existing specified shareholder and certain "newly related persons" acquire more shares of the corporation after June 20, 1996, other than by certain permitted acquisitions. For this purpose, if any such person has an interest in a partnership or trust, the exemption is lost if the partnership or trust acquires a share of the investment corporation after that date.

Your letter describes an investment corporation that had an individual who was an existing specified shareholder (the "Specified Shareholder") on June 20, 1996. The transitional rules provide that in determining who is a specified shareholder of an investment corporation, a person is deemed to own the shares of any corporation that are owned by a related person. Related persons are specifically defined for the purpose of these rules. As a result of the rules, if any of the Specified Shareholder's spouse's grandchildren under 19 years of age (the "Grandchildren") acquire or are deemed to acquire a share of the investment corporation after June 20, 1996, other than in a permitted acquisition, the transitional relief afforded in the transitional rules from the application of subparagraph 130(3)(a)(vii) would be lost.

In the situation you have described, the Specified Shareholder's daughter, who is over 19 years of age, (the "Daughter") established a registered education savings plan ("RESP") in the late 1980s for a number of persons including certain of the Grandchildren. In 1997, 1998 and 1999, the Daughter transferred shares of the investment corporation to the RESP and the dividend income received on the shares held in the RESP was, in part, paid by the RESP to the Grandchildren. In 2000, the shares of the investment corporation were reacquired by the Daughter from the RESP. The deemed acquisition of shares of the investment corporation by the Grandchildren would result in the investment corporation losing its exemption from the application of subparagraph 130(3)(a)(vii) provided for in the transitional rules and, therefore, losing its status as an investment corporation in 1997. You have asked us to expand the scope of the transitional rules to accommodate your client's situation.

We are sympathetic to this request and intend to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Income Tax Act and the transitional rules that apply to investment corporations be amended to exclude from the definition of "specified shareholder", as it applies for the purpose of investment corporations, a beneficiary's interest in a trust governed by a RESP where the beneficiary of the trust is less than 19 years of age. Furthermore, we intend to recommend that the amendment be effective only for taxation years that begin before the date detailed legislative proposals are made public.

While we cannot offer any assurance that our recommendation in this matter will be accepted, we hope our statement of intent in this letter will be helpful in responding to your concern.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein

Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(10) The definitions in this subsection apply in subsections (3) [i.e., the application above] to (9) and this subsection.

"mortgage lender" means a particular corporation where the ordinary business of

- (a) the particular corporation, or
- (b) a corporation (other than a mortgage investment corporation) or partnership affiliated with the particular corporation includes the holding of debts that are secured, whether by mortgage or in any other manner, on houses (as defined in section 2 of the National Housing Act) or on property included within a housing project (as defined in that section).

"newly related persons" means persons who are related to each other and who became so related after January 14, 1998.

"permitted acquisition" means an acquisition by a particular person of a share of a class of the capital stock of a corporation that was

- (a) held, at each particular time after January 14, 1998 and before the time at which the particular person acquired it, or
- (b) issued after January 14, 1998 by the corporation as a stock dividend and held, at each particular time after the time the share was issued and before the time at which the particular person acquired it, by the particular person or by a person who was related to the particular person throughout the period that began at the beginning of January 15, 1998 and that ends at the particular time if, immediately after the time at which the particular person acquires the share, the percentage of the issued shares of that class held by the particular person and persons related to the particular person (or in the case of acquisitions before August 14, 1998, by the particular person and persons with whom the particular person did not deal at arm's length immediately after the acquisition) does not exceed the permitted percentage for the particular person in respect of that class of shares.

"permitted percentage" for a particular person in respect of a class of shares of the capital stock of a corporation means

- (a) in respect of acquisitions of shares before August 14, 1998, the percentage of the issued shares of that class held at the end of January 14, 1998 by the particular person and persons with whom the particular person did not at that time deal at arm's length; and

- (i) the percentage of the issued shares of that class held at the end of January 14, 1998 by the particular person and persons related at that time to the particular person, and
- (ii) the percentage of the issued shares of that class held at the beginning of August 14, 1998 by the particular person and persons related at that time to the particular person.

"related persons" and persons related to each other have, for purposes other than applying the definitions "permitted acquisition" and "permitted percentage" in respect of acquisitions of shares before August 14, 1998, the meaning that would be assigned by section 251 of the Act if paragraph 251(2)(a) of the Act were read as follows:

Proposed Amendment — 131(6) "capital gains dividend account"

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Nov. 9, 2005:

Mr. Hugh Chasmar, Deloitte & Touche LLP, Toronto, ON

Dear Mr. Chasmar:

I am responding to your facsimile to Grant Nash of June 18, 2004 and the attached letter dated November 15, 2001 concerning the definition of "capital gains dividend account" for mutual fund corporations (MFCs).

In general, the definition of "capital gains dividend account" in subsection 131(6) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") includes all capital gains and all capital losses realized by a MFC from the disposition of capital property. Where a MFC holds units of a trust that makes a distribution out of its realized capital gains, and the trust makes an election under 104(21) of the Act in favour of the MFC, the MFC will be deemed to have realized a taxable capital gain, not a capital gain. As a result, it appears that no amount of this distribution will be included in the capital gains dividend account of the mutual fund corporation.

From a tax policy perspective it is intended that a mutual fund corporation will be a "flow-through entity" with respect to realized capital gains. This is generally achieved by refunding to the MFC its tax paid on taxable capital gains, to the extent that it distributes its capital gains to shareholders by way of a capital gains dividend, or through the redemption of shares. As such, there does not appear to be any policy reason why a MFC should not be entitled to flow through capital gains received from a trust that has made an election under 104(21) in favour of the MFC. We note that a similar amendment was previously made to the definition of "capital dividend account" in subsection 89(1) of the Act to provide for the inclusion in a corporation's capital dividend account of an amount in respect of the non-taxable portion of capital gains distributed by a trust to the corporation.

We are therefore prepared to recommend an amendment to the Act to allow a MFC to flow through capital gains received from a trust that has made an election under 104(21) in favour of the MFC. We will also recommend that this amendment be made effective for 2005 and subsequent taxation years.

⁴⁷Sic. Should be "gains" — ed.

We cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with the recommendations that we intend to make in this regard. Nonetheless, we trust that this statement of our position is helpful.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

- (b) it has not issued a share (other than a share issued as a stock dividend) of its capital stock after February 20, 1990 and before that time to a person who, after reasonable inquiry, it had reason to believe was non-resident, except where the share was issued to that person under an agreement in writing entered into before February 21, 1990.

Possible Future Amendment — 131(8.1)

(8.1) If, at any particular time, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at the particular time, of an issued and outstanding share of the capital stock of a corporation held by a non-resident person or a partnership that is not a Canadian partnership is more than 50% of the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at the particular time, of an issued and outstanding share of the corporation, the corporation is deemed not to be, after the particular time, a mutual fund corporation unless

- (a) both
 - (i) throughout the period that begins on the later of January 1, 2005 and the day of its incorporation and ends at the particular time, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a specified property (as defined in subsection 132(4)) of the corporation was not more than 10% of the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a property of the corporation, and
 - (ii) where the corporation was incorporated before 2005, throughout the period that began on the later of February 21, 1990 and the day of its incorporation and ends on the earlier of the particular time and December 31, 2004, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a taxable Canadian property (determined without reference to paragraph (b) of the definition “taxable Canadian property” in subsection 248(1)) of the corporation was not more than 10% of the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a property of the corporation; or
- (b) it has
 - (i) not issued a share (other than a share issued as a stock dividend) of its capital stock after February 20, 1990 and before the particular time to a person who, after reasonable inquiry, it had reason to believe was non-resident, except where the share was issued to that person under an agreement in writing entered into before February 21, 1990, and
 - (ii) not issued a share (other than a share issued as a stock dividend) of its capital stock after [the day before September 16, 2004] and before the particular time to a partnership that, after reasonable inquiry, it had reason to believe was not a Canadian partnership, except where the share was issued to that partnership under an agreement in writing, between the corporation and the partnership, made before September 16, 2004.

Application: The September 16, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 17(4), would have amended subsec. 131(8.1) to read as above, applicable after March 22, 2004, except that the opening words, in their application before 2005 to a corporation, are to, unless the corporation elects otherwise in writing by filing the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before its filing-due date for its taxation year in which the amending legislation is assented to, be read as follows:

(8.1) If at any particular time it can reasonably be considered that a corporation (having regard to all the circumstances, including the terms and conditions of the shares of its capital stock) was incorporated, or is maintained, primarily for the benefit of non-resident persons, the corporation is deemed not to be a mutual fund corporation after the particular time, unless

In addition, the reference in para. 131(8.1)(a), as amended, to "January 1, 2005" is to be read as "January 1, 2007" and the reference to "2004" is to be read as "2006" in the application of that paragraph to a corporation that

(i) on March 23, 2004 would have ceased to be a mutual fund corporation if
(A) the reference to the expression "throughout the period that begins on the later of January 1, 2005 and the day of its incorporation and ends at the particular time" in that paragraph were read as "on March 23, 2004", and

(B) the reference to the expression "December 31, 2004" in that paragraph were read as "March 22, 2004", and

(ii) on March 24, 2004 was a mutual fund corporation.

This proposal is unlikely to be enacted in its current form; see news release in Possible Future Amendment to 132(7).

Technical Notes: Subsection 131(8.1) provides that a corporation is not a mutual fund corporation after a particular time if, at the particular time, it is reasonable to conclude that the corporation was established or maintained primarily for the benefit of non-resident persons. There are two exceptions to this rule. The first, which is set out in paragraph 131(8.1)(a), applies if, throughout the period that started on February 21, 1990 (or if later, the date of incorporation) and that ends at the particular time, all or substantially all of the corporation's property consisted of property other than taxable Canadian property. The second, which is set out in paragraph 131(8.1)(b), applies if the corporation did not issue a share of its capital stock, other than a stock dividend, after February 20, 1990 and before that time to a person who, after reasonable inquiry, it had reason to believe was not resident in Canada, except where the share was issued pursuant to an agreement in writing entered into before February 21, 1990.

The preamble to subsection 131(8.1) is amended to provide that a corporation is not a mutual fund corporation after a particular time if, at that time, more than 50% of the fair market value of the issued and outstanding shares of the capital stock of the corporation is attributable to the fair market value of shares that are held by one or any combination of non-resident persons or partnerships that are not "Canadian partnerships" (as defined in section 102).

This amendment applies

- after March 22, 2004 to a corporation that so elects in writing by filing the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before its filing-due date for its taxation year in which the amendment receives Royal Assent; and
- after 2004 to a corporation that does not so elect. Where a corporation does not so elect, subsection 131(8.1) will continue to provide, until December 31, 2004, that the corporation is not a mutual fund corporation after a particular time if, at that time, it can reasonably be considered that the corporation (having regard to all the circumstances, including the terms and conditions of the shares of its capital stock) was incorporated, or is maintained, primarily for the benefit of non-resident persons.

The loss, under the general rule in subsection 131(8.1), after the particular time of a corporation's status as a mutual fund corporation will continue to be subject to the exceptions found in paragraphs 131(8.1)(a) and (b).

Paragraph 131(8.1)(a) is amended to clarify that, in addition to other forms of taxable Canadian property, Canadian resource property and timber resource property are included in determining the availability of relief under that paragraph. Except as otherwise provided in the transitional rules for the amendments, the amendments to paragraph 131(8.1)(a) apply after March 22, 2004.

Corporations incorporated after 2004

Paragraph 131(8.1)(a) is amended to provide that the exception applies to a corporation incorporated after 2004 only if, throughout the period that begins on the later of January 1, 2005 and the day of its incorporation and ends at the particular time, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a "specified property" (as newly defined in subsection 132(4)) of the corporation was not more than 10% of the fair market value of all of its properties.

Corporations incorporated before 2005

For a corporation incorporated before 2005, paragraph 131(8.1)(a) is amended to provide that the exception applies to the corporation only if both

- throughout the period that begins on January 1, 2005 and ends at the particular time, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a "specified property" (as defined in subsection 132(4)) of the corporation was not more than 10% of the fair market value of all of its properties, and

- throughout the period that began on the later of February 21, 1990 and the day of its incorporation and ends on the earlier of the particular time and December 31, 2004, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a taxable Canadian property (determined without reference to paragraph (b) of the definition "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1)) of the corporation was not more than 10% of the fair market value of all of its properties.

Transitional relief: corporations otherwise offside on March 23, 2004

Some corporations that were otherwise mutual fund corporations at the end of March 23, 2004, might have lost their mutual fund status on March 23, 2004 if the addition of Canadian resource property and timber resource property to the properties considered in determining the application of paragraph 131(8.1)(a) applied on March 23, 2004. For such a corporation, paragraph 131(8.1)(a) is amended to provide that the exception in that paragraph applies to the corporation if both

- throughout the period that begins on January 1, 2007 and ends at the particular time, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a "specified property" (as defined in subsection 132(4)) of the corporation was not more than 10% of the fair market value of all of its properties, and
- throughout the period that began on the later of February 21, 1990 and the day of its incorporation and ends on the earlier of the particular time and December 31, 2006, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a taxable Canadian property (determined without reference to paragraph (b) of the definition "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1)) of the corporation was not more than 10% of the fair market value of all of its properties.

For more detail on the new definition "specified property" in subsection 132(4), see the commentary on that subsection.

Paragraph 131(8.1)(b) is amended to provide that the exception applies to a corporation only if the corporation satisfies the existing condition in that paragraph (i.e., the condition found, under these amendments, in subparagraph 131(8.1)(b)(i)) and it has not issued a share (other than a share issued as a stock dividend) of its capital stock on or after September 16, 2004 and before the particular time to a partnership that, after reasonable inquiry, it had reason to believe was not a "Canadian partnership" (as defined in section 102), except where the share was issued to that partnership under an agreement in writing, between the corporation and the partnership, made before September 16, 2004.

(B) the amount, if any, that the Minister determines to be reasonable in the circumstances, after giving consideration to the percentages applicable in determining the trust's capital gains refunds for the year and preceding taxation years and the percentages applicable in determining the trust's refundable capital gains tax on hand at the end of the year, and

(ii) the trust's refundable capital gains tax on hand at the end of the year; and

(b) shall, with all due dispatch, make that capital gains refund after mailing the notice of assessment if an application for it has been made in writing by the trust within the period within which the Minister would be allowed under subsection 152(4) to assess tax payable under this Part by the trust for the year if that subsection were read without reference to paragraph 152(4)(a).

(4) Definitions — In this section,

“capital gains redemptions” of a mutual fund trust for a taxation year means the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is the portion of an amount paid by the trust in the year on the redemption of a unit in the trust that is included in the proceeds of disposition in respect of that redemption,

B is the total of the fair market value at the end of the year of all the issued units of the trust and the amount determined for A in respect of the trust for the year,

C is 100/14.5 of the trust’s refundable capital gains tax on hand at the end of the year,

$$(K + L) - (M + N)$$

where

K is the amount of the fair market value at the end of the year of all the issued units of the trust,

L is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of any debt owing by the trust, or of any other obligation of the trust to pay an amount, that was outstanding at that time,

“pro rata portion”, of a beneficiary, of a mutual fund trust’s TCP gains balance for a taxation year, in respect of an amount designated under subsection 104(21) by the mutual fund trust for the taxation year, means the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the mutual fund trust’s TCP gains balance for the taxation year,

B is the amount the mutual fund trust has designated under that subsection in respect of the beneficiary for the taxation year, and

C is the total of all amounts designated under that subsection by the mutual fund trust for the taxation year;

(a) 29% of its taxable income for the year,

B is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of any previous taxation year throughout which the trust was a mutual fund trust, equal to its capital gains refund for the year.

Possible Future Amendment — 132(4) “specified property”

“specified property” means property that is any of

- (a) taxable Canadian property (determined without reference to paragraph (b) of the definition “taxable Canadian property” in subsection 248(1));
- (b) Canadian resource property; and
- (c) timber resource property.

Application: The September 16, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 18(1), would have added the definition “specified property” to subsec. 132(4), applicable after March 22, 2004. However, see Application annotation to Possible Future Amendment to 132(7).

Technical Notes: “Specified property” means property that is taxable Canadian property (determined without reference to paragraph (b) of the definition “taxable Canadian property” in subsection 248(1)), Canadian resource property, or timber resource property.

The new definition “specified property” is relevant in applying paragraphs 131(8.1)(a) and 132(7)(a). For more detail on those paragraphs, see the commentary to subsections 131(8.1) and 132(7).

“TCP gains balance”, of a mutual fund trust for a particular taxation year, means the amount, if any, by which

- (a) the total of
 - (i) the mutual fund trust’s capital gains from dispositions, after March 22, 2004 and at or before the end of the particular taxation year, of taxable Canadian properties, and
 - (ii) the TCP gains distributions (including those defined in section 131) received by the mutual fund trust at or before the end of the particular taxation year;

exceeds

- (b) the total of
 - (i) the mutual fund trust’s capital losses from dispositions, after March 22, 2004 and at or before the end of the particular taxation year, of taxable Canadian properties, and
 - (ii) the total of all amounts deemed, in respect of amounts designated by the mutual fund trust under subsection 104(21) for taxation years that preceded the particular taxation year, to be TCP gains distributions received by beneficiaries under the mutual fund trust;

History: The definition “TCP gains balance” in subsec. 132(4) added by 2005, c. 19, subsec. 31(1), applicable after March 22, 2004.

“TCP gains distribution” means a TCP gains distribution described in subsection (5.1).

History: The definition “TCP gains distribution” in subsec. 132(4) added by 2005, c. 19, subsec. 31(1), applicable after March 22, 2004.

(5) Definition of “taxed capital gains” — In subsection (4), “taxed capital gains” of a taxpayer for a taxation year has the meaning assigned by subsection 130(3).

(5.1) TCP gains distribution — If a mutual fund trust designates an amount under subsection 104(21) for a taxation year of the trust in respect of a beneficiary under the trust, for the purposes of this Part and Part XIII,

- (a) the beneficiary is deemed to have received from the mutual fund trust a TCP gains distribution equal to the lesser of
 - (i) twice the amount designated, and
 - (ii) the beneficiary’s pro rata portion of the mutual fund trust’s TCP gains balance for the taxation year; and
- (b) where the beneficiary is a non-resident person or a partnership that is not a Canadian partnership,
 - (i) the amount designated is deemed by subsection 104(21) to be a taxable capital gain of the beneficiary only to the extent that it exceeds one half of the TCP gains distribution, and

(ii) one half of the TCP gains distribution is to be added to the amount otherwise included under subsection 104(13) in computing the income of the beneficiary, and is deemed to be an amount to which paragraph 212(1)(c) applies.

(5.2) Application of subsection (5.1) — Subsection (5.1) applies to an amount designated under subsection 104(21) by a mutual fund trust for a taxation year only if more than 5% of the total of all amounts each of which is an amount designated under that subsection by the mutual fund trust for the taxation year was designated in respect of beneficiaries under the mutual fund trust each of whom is a non-resident person or is a partnership that is not a Canadian partnership.

(6) Meaning of “mutual fund trust” — Subject to subsection (7), for the purposes of this section, a trust is a mutual fund trust at any time if at that time

- (a) it was a unit trust resident in Canada,
- (b) its only undertaking was
 - (i) the investing of its funds in property (other than real property or an interest in real property),
 - (ii) the acquiring, holding, maintaining, improving, leasing or managing of any real property (or interest in real property) that is capital property of the trust, or

Technical Notes: See under 12(4).

(iii) any combination of the activities described in subparagraphs (i) and (ii), and

- (c) it complied with prescribed conditions relating to the number of its unit holders, dispersal of ownership of its units and public trading of its units.

Proposed Amendment — 132(6)(c)

- (c) it complied with prescribed conditions.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), s. 128, will amend para. 132(6)(c) to read as above, applicable to 2000 et seq.

Technical Notes: Subsection 132(6) sets out the definition “mutual fund trust”. Under paragraph 132(6)(c), a trust will qualify at any time as a mutual fund trust only if at that time it meets prescribed conditions relating to the number of its unit holders, dispersal of ownership of trust units issued by it and public trading of trust units issued by it.

Paragraph 132(6)(c) is amended so that the prescribed conditions that a trust may be required to satisfy in order to qualify as a mutual fund trust are not limited to those relating to ownership and trading of its units.

This amendment applies to the 2000 and subsequent taxation years.

The regulations setting out these prescribed conditions for a mutual fund trust are found in Part XLVIII of the Income Tax Regulations. In particular, Regulation 4801 sets out conditions that apply to a class of units issued by a trust in order for the trust to be considered a mutual fund trust. It is intended that proposed amendments to Part XLVIII of the Regulations would include the following:

- The French language version would be amended to correct a technical deficiency in the use of the expression "appel public à l'épargne" ("qualified for distribution to the public"). The amendments to the French version of the Regulations would clarify that, as is the case in the English version, the defined expression in subsection 4803(2) of the Regulations applies in determining whether a class of units is qualified for distribution to the public in paragraph 4801(a) of the Regulations.
- Paragraph 4801(a) of the Regulations would be amended so that subparagraph 4801(a)(ii) applies to a trust created before 2000, for its 2004 and subsequent taxation years, if the trust elects by notifying the Minister of National Revenue in writing in its return of income for the taxation year of the trust that ends in the calendar year in which the amending regulations are published in Part II of the Canada Gazette. As a result of the proposed change, if there has been a lawful distribution in a province to the public of units of a class of units of a trust created before 2000 and a prospectus, registration statement or similar document was not required under the laws of the province to be filed in respect of the distribution, the trust could rely upon subparagraph 4801(a)(ii) to meet, in its 2004 and later taxation years, the condition prescribed under paragraph 4801(a).

These amendments to the Regulations would, except as described above, be proposed to apply to the 2000 and subsequent taxation years of trusts.

(iii) because the trust ceased to exist;

(b) the trust was a mutual fund trust at the beginning of the year; and

(c) the trust would, throughout the portion of the year throughout which it was in existence, have been a mutual fund trust if

(i) in the case where the condition described in paragraph 108(2)(a) was satisfied at any time in the year, that condition were satisfied throughout the year,

(a) at that time, all or substantially all of its property consisted of property other than property that would be taxable Canadian property if the definition "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1) were read without reference to paragraph (b) of that definition; or

(b) it has not issued any unit (other than a unit issued to a person as a payment, or in satisfaction of the person's right to enforce payment, of an amount out of the trust's income determined before the application of subsection 104(6), or out of the trust's capital gains) of the trust after February 20, 1990 and before that time to a person who, after reasonable inquiry, it had reason to believe was non-resident, except where the unit was issued to that person under an agreement in writing entered into before February 21, 1990.

(7) Loss of mutual fund trust status — If, at any particular time, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at the particular time, of a unit issued by a trust and held by a non-resident person or a partnership that is not a Canadian partnership is more than 50% of the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at the particular time, of a unit issued by the trust, the trust is deemed not to be, after the particular time, a mutual fund trust unless

(a) both

(i) throughout the period that begins on the later of January 1, 2005 and the day on which the trust was created and ends at the particular time, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a specified property of the trust was not more than 10% of the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a property of the trust, and

(ii) where the trust was created before 2005, throughout the period that began on the later of February 21, 1990 and the day of its creation and ends on the earlier of the particular time and December 31, 2004, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a taxable Canadian property (determined without reference to paragraph (b) of the definition "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1)) of the trust was not more than 10% of the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a property of the trust; or

(b) it has

(i) not issued any unit (other than a unit issued to a person as a payment, or in satisfaction of the person's right to enforce payment, of an amount out of the trust's income determined before the application of subsection 104(6), or out of the trust's capital gains) of the trust after February 20, 1990 and before the particular time to a person who, after reasonable inquiry, it had reason to believe was non-resident, except where the unit was issued to that person under an agreement in writing entered into before February 21, 1990, and

(ii) not issued any unit (other than a unit issued to a partnership as a payment, or in satisfaction of the partnership's right to enforce payment, of an amount out of the trust's income determined before the application of subsection 104(6), or out of the trust's capital gains) of the trust after September 15, 2004 and before the particular time to a partnership that, after reasonable enquiry, it had reason to believe was not a Canadian partnership, except where the unit was issued to that partnership under an agreement in writing, between the trust and the partnership, entered into before September 16, 2004.

Application: The September 16, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 18(3), would have amended subsec. 132(7) to read as above, applicable after March 22, 2004, except that the opening words, in their application before 2005 to a trust, are to, unless the trust elects otherwise in writing by filing the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before its filing-due date for its taxation year in which the amending legislation is assented to, be read as follows:

(7) If at any particular time it can reasonably be considered that a trust (having regard to all the circumstances, including the terms and conditions of the units of the trust) was created, or is maintained, primarily for the benefit of non-resident persons, the trust is deemed not to be a mutual fund trust after the particular time, unless

In addition, the reference in para. 132(7)(a), as amended, to "January 1, 2005" is to be read as "January 1, 2007" and the reference to "2004" is to be read as "2006" in the application of that paragraph to a corporation that

(i) on March 23, 2004 would have ceased to be a mutual fund trust if

(A) the reference to the expression "throughout the period that begins on the later of January 1, 2005 and the day on which the trust was created and ends at the particular time" in that paragraph were read as "on March 23, 2004", and

(B) the reference to "December 31, 2004" in that paragraph were read as "March 22, 2004", and

(ii) on March 24, 2004 was a mutual fund trust.

This proposal is unlikely to be enacted in its current form; see news release below.

Dept. of Finance news release 2004-075, Dec. 6, 2004: Today's Notice [of Ways and Means Motion, later Bill C-33 replacing the Sept. 16/04 draft legislation, now enacted as S.C. 2005, c. 19 — ed.] does not include the proposal concerning mutual funds maintained primarily for the benefit of non-residents. Further discussions will be pursued with the private sector concerning the appropriate Canadian tax treatment of non-residents investing in resource property through mutual funds.

Technical Notes: Subsection 132(7) provides that a trust is not a mutual fund trust after a particular time if, at the particular time, it is reasonable to conclude that the trust was established or maintained primarily for the benefit of non-resident persons. There are two exceptions to this rule. The first, which is set out in paragraph 132(7)(a), applies if, throughout the period that started on February 21, 1990 (or if later, the date of the trust's creation) and that ends at the particular time, all or substantially all of the trust's property consisted of property other than taxable Canadian property. The second, which is set out in paragraph 132(7)(b), applies if the trust did not issue any unit (other than a unit issued to a person as a payment, or in satisfaction of the person's right to enforce payment, of an amount out of the trust's income determined before the application of subsection 104(6), or out of the trust's capital gains) after February 20, 1990 and before that time to a person who, after reasonable inquiry, it had reason to believe was not resident in Canada, except where the unit was issued pursuant to an agreement in writing entered into before February 21, 1990.

The preamble to subsection 132(7) is amended to provide that a trust is not a mutual fund trust after a particular time if, at that time, more than 50% of the fair market value of the issued units of the trust is attributable to the fair market value of those issued units that are held by one or any combination of non-resident persons or partnerships other than Canadian partnerships (as defined in section 102).

This amendment applies

- after March 22, 2004 to a trust that elects otherwise in writing by filing the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before its filing-due date for its taxation year in which the amendment receives Royal Assent; and
- after 2004 to trusts that do not so elect. Where a trust does not so elect, subsection 132(7) will continue to provide, until December 31, 2004, that the trust is not a mutual fund trust after a particular time if, at that time, it can reasonably be considered that the trust (having regard to all the circumstances, including the terms and conditions of the units of the trust) was created, or is maintained, primarily for the benefit of non-resident persons.

The loss, under the general rule in subsection 132(7), after the particular time of a trust's status as a mutual fund trust will continue to be subject to the exceptions found in paragraphs 132(7)(a) and (b).

Paragraph 132(7)(a) is amended to clarify that, together with other forms of taxable Canadian property, Canadian resource property and timber resource property are included in determining the availability of relief under that paragraph. Except as otherwise provided in the transitional rules for the amendments, the amendments to paragraph 132(7)(a) apply after March 22, 2004.

Trusts created after 2004

In particular, paragraph 132(7)(a) is amended to provide that it applies to a trust created after 2004 if, throughout the period that begins on the later of January 1, 2005 and the day of its creation and ends at the particular time, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a "specified property" (as newly defined in subsection 132(4)) of the trust was not more than 10% of the fair market value of all of its properties.

Trusts created before 2005

For a trust created before 2005, paragraph 132(7)(a) is amended to provide that it applies to the trust if both

- throughout the period that begins on January 1, 2005 and ends at the particular time, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a "specified property" (as defined in subsection 132(4)) of the trust was not more than 10% of the fair market value of all of its properties; and
- throughout the period that began on the later of February 21, 1990 and the day of its creation and ends on the earlier of the particular time and December 31, 2004, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a taxable Canadian property (determined without reference to paragraph (b) of the definition "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1)) of the trust was not more than 10% of the fair market value of all of its properties.

For more detail on the new definition "specified property" in subsection 132(4), please see the commentary on that subsection.

Transitional relief: trusts otherwise offside on March 23, 2004

Some trusts that were otherwise mutual fund trusts at the end of March 23, 2004, might have lost their mutual fund status on March 23, 2004 if the addition of Canadian resource property and timber resource property to the properties considered in determining the application of paragraph 132(7)(a) applied on March 23, 2004. For such a trust, paragraph 132(7)(a) is amended to provide that the exception in that paragraph applies to the trust if both

- throughout the period that begins on January 1, 2007 and ends at the particular time, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a "specified property" (as defined in subsection 132(4)) of the trust was not more than 10% of the fair market value of all of its properties; and
- throughout the period that began on the later of February 21, 1990 and the day of its incorporation and ends on the earlier of the particular time and December 31, 2006, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a taxable Canadian property (determined without reference to paragraph (b) of the definition "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1)) of the trust was not more than 10% of the fair market value of all of its properties.

Paragraph 132(7)(b) is amended to provide that it applies to a trust only if the trust satisfies the existing condition in that paragraph (i.e., the condition found, under these amendments, in subparagraph 132(7)(b)(i)) and it has not issued any unit (other than a unit issued to a partnership as a payment, or in satisfaction of the partnership's right to enforce payment, of an amount out of the trust's income determined before the application of subsection 104(6), or out of the trust's capital gains) of the trust on or after September 16, 2004 and before the particular time to a partnership that, after reasonable enquiry, it had reason to believe was not a Canadian partnership, except where the unit was issued to that partnership under an agreement in writing, between the trust and the partnership, entered into before September 16, 2004.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Oct. 5, 2004:

Dear [xxx]:

Thank you for your letter of September 23, 2004 concerning the legislative proposals relating to subsection 132(7) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") that were announced by the Department of Finance on September 16, 2004.

To briefly highlight the legislative proposals, it is proposed, effective after December 31, 2004, that the preamble to subsection 132(7) be amended to provide that a commercial trust ceases under certain circumstances to be a mutual fund trust if more than 50% of the fair market value of the issued trust units are held by any combination of non-resident persons or partnerships (other than a Canadian partnership).

Under those legislative proposals, if the ownership of the commercial trust's units by non-resident persons or partnerships (other than a Canadian partnership) exceeds the 50% limit described above, the commercial trust could still maintain its status as a mutual fund trust provided:

- 1) At all times after February 21, 1990, not more than 10% of the fair market value of all the trust's property can be attributed to taxable Canadian property; and
- 2) At all times after December 31, 2004, not more than 10% of the fair market value of all the trust's property can be attributed to property that is any of taxable Canadian property, Canadian resource property or timber resource property.

In your letter, you had recommended that under the proposed new fair market value test, units of a different class of trust, which have substantially the same rights to the income, and capital of the trust should be deemed to have the same fair market value. You have stated that the fair market value of a publicly listed security is generally considered to be equal to its trading price and, as a consequence, it could be difficult for a mutual fund trust with units trading on a foreign exchange and a Canadian exchange to manage the relative fair market values of issued trust units held by residents and non-resident persons or partnerships (other than a Canadian partnership). This difficulty arises because trust units held by non-residents may trade at a premium because of market forces, even though the rights of the units are substantially the same except for ownership restrictions based on country of residence. With regard to this recommendation, we are willing to conduct further study and consultation with the view to addressing this potential difficulty while preserving the integrity of the 50% non-resident ownership test.

You have also requested that the new taxable Canadian property exceptions mentioned above be applied prospectively after March 22, 2004. The proposed rules provide a 10% taxable Canadian property ownership limitation that would have to be measured at all times subsequent to February 21, 1990. You argue that the application of this new 10% brightline test to past periods would be inappropriate, given that the new test explicitly requires the trust to respect a 10% threshold based on the fair market value of the trust's assets whereas the "all or substantially all" test gave rise to some uncertainty as to whether cost or market value would be the appropriate measurement base.

Given the possible differing interpretations of the "all or substantially all" test in paragraph 132(7)(a), it would seem appropriate to maintain the existing "all or substantially all" test for periods prior to 2005. Consequently, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the proposed legislation be modified to provide this result. While we cannot offer any assurances that either the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendation, we hope that this statement of our position is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(a) the trust's taxation year that began before December 16 of the particular year and, but for this paragraph, would end at the end of the particular year (or, where the first taxation year of the trust began after December 15 of the preceding calendar year and no return of income was filed for a taxation year of the trust that ended at the end of the preceding calendar year, at the end of the preceding calendar year) is deemed to end at the end of December 15 of the particular year;

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 129(1), will amend para. 132.11(1)(b) to read as above, applicable after 1998, except that in applying the para. to taxation years that end before 2000, it is to be read without reference to "subject to subsection (1.1)".

Technical Notes: Section 132.11 generally allows a mutual fund trust to elect to have taxation years that end on December 15, rather than on December 31.

Where a trust makes this election, each subsequent taxation year of the trust is deemed to start on December 16 of a calendar year and to end on December 15 of the following calendar year, unless any of certain events intervenes. One of the events that can intervene, and that results in an earlier year-end, is a qualifying exchange under section 132.2.

As a consequence of the restructuring of section 132.2, the reference in paragraph 132.11(1)(b) to paragraph 132.2(1)(b) is replaced by a reference to paragraph 132.2(3)(b).

This amendment applies after 1998 except that, in applying the amended version of paragraph 132.11(1)(b) to taxation years that end before 2000, the paragraph is to be read as though it did not contain the words "subject to subsection (1.1)".

Paragraph 132.11(1)(c) generally provides that each fiscal period of a mutual fund trust that has made an election under subsection 132.11(1) shall end no later than the end of the trust's taxation year that ends on December 15th.

(c) each fiscal period of the trust that begins in a taxation year of the trust that ends on December 15 because of paragraph (a) or that ends in a subsequent taxation year of the trust shall end no later than the end of the year or the subsequent year, as the case may be.

Related Provisions: 132.11(1.1) — Revocation of election; 132.11(2) — Where trust is member of partnership; 132.11(3) — Where trust is beneficiary of another trust; 132.11(6) — Additional income.

History: Para. 132.11(1)(b) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 130(1), applicable to taxation years that end after 1999. The para. formerly read:

(b) where the trust's taxation year ends on December 15 because of paragraph (a), each subsequent taxation year of the trust is deemed to be the period that begins at the beginning of December 16 of a calendar year and ends at the end of December 15 of the following calendar year or at such earlier time as is determined under paragraph 132.2(1)(b) or subsection 142.6(1); and Regulations: 4801.01 (prescribed trust).

(1.1) Revocation of election — Where a particular taxation year of a trust ends on December 15 of a calendar year because of an election made under paragraph (1)(a), the trust applies to the Minister in writing before December 15 of that calendar year (or before a later time that is acceptable to the Minister) to have this subsection apply to the trust, with the concurrence of the Minister

(a) the trust's taxation year following the particular taxation year is deemed to begin immediately after the end of the particular taxation year and end at the end of that calendar year; and

(b) each subsequent taxation year of the trust is deemed to be determined as if that election had not been made.

History: Subsec. 132.11(1.1) added by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 130(2), applicable to taxation years that end after 1999.

(2) Electing trust's share of partnership income and losses — Where a trust is a member of a partnership a fiscal period of which ends in a calendar year after December 15 of the year and a particular taxation year of the trust ends on December 15 of the year because of subsection (1), each amount otherwise determined under paragraph 96(1)(f) or (g) to be the trust's income or loss for a subsequent taxation year of the trust is deemed to be the trust's income or loss determined under paragraph 96(1)(f) or (g) for the particular year and not for the subsequent year.

(3) Electing trust's income from other trusts — Where a particular trust is a beneficiary under another trust a taxation year of which (in this subsection referred to as the "other year") ends in a calendar year after December 15 of the year and a particular taxation year of the trust ends on December 15 of the year because of subsection (1), each amount determined or designated under subsection 104(13), (19), (21), (22) or (29) for the other year that would otherwise be included, or taken into account, in computing the income of the particular trust for a subsequent taxation year of the trust shall

(a) be included, or taken into account, in computing the particular trust's income for the particular year; and

(b) not be included, or taken into account, in computing the particular trust's income for the subsequent year.

(4) Amounts paid or payable to beneficiaries — For the purposes of subsections (5) and (6) and 104(6) and (13) and notwithstanding subsection 104(24), each amount that is paid, or that becomes payable, by a trust to a beneficiary after the end of a particular taxation year of the trust that ends on December 15 of a calendar year because of subsection (1) and before the end of that calendar year, is deemed to have been paid or to have become payable, as the case may be, to the beneficiary at the end of the particular year and not at any other time.

Proposed Amendment — 132.11(4)

(4) Amounts paid or payable to beneficiaries — Notwithstanding subsection 104(24), for the purposes of subsections (5) and (6) and 104(6) and (13) and paragraph (i) of the definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1) each amount that is paid, or that becomes payable, by a trust to a beneficiary after the end of a particular taxation year of the trust that ends on December 15 of a calendar year because of subsection (1) and before the end of that calendar year, is deemed to have been paid or to have become payable, as the case may be, to the beneficiary at the end of the particular year and not at any other time.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 129(3), will amend subsec. 132.11(4) to read as above, applicable to amounts that are paid or have become payable by a trust after 1999.

Technical Notes: Subsection 132.11(4) is designed to permit distributions made in the last 16 days of a calendar year in respect of a trust's taxation year ending on December 15 of the calendar year to be treated as if they were made at the end of that taxation year.

Subsection 132.11(4) is amended so that it applies for the purpose of paragraph (i) of the definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1). As a result, in the case of a mutual fund trust that has elected under section 132.11 to have a December 15th taxation year-end, distributions from the trust in respect of a taxpayer's capital interest made in the last 16 days of a calendar year will not result in a disposition of the interest.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, March 7, 2003:

Dear [xxx]:

Thank you for your letter of January 8, 2003, concerning the application of subsection 132.11(4) of the Income Tax Act in the context of distributions by a mutual fund trust.

Section 132.11 of the Act generally allows a mutual fund trust to elect to have a taxation year that ends on December 15. The objective of section 132.11 of the Act is to provide mutual fund trusts with an administratively workable basis for calculating income and distributions for a taxation year and for reporting on a timely basis. Subsection 132.11(4) permits, for a number of purposes including subsections 104(6) and (13) of the Act, distributions made in the last 16 days of a calendar year in respect of a trust's taxation year that ends on December 15 of the calendar year to be treated as if they were made at the end of that taxation year.

Paragraph (d) of the definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1) of the Act provides that a taxpayer disposes of the taxpayer's capital interest in a trust upon payment of an amount, from the trust, that is in respect of the capital interest. An exception to this general rule is found in paragraph (i) of the definition, which provides that there is no such disposition if the payment is made out of the trust's income (determined without reference to subsection 104(6)) or capital gains for a taxation year and the payment was made in that taxation year or the right to the payment was acquired in that taxation year.

As subsection 132.11(4) does not apply for the purpose of paragraph (1) of the definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1) of the Act, you are concerned that, in the case of a mutual fund trust that has elected under section 132.11 to have a December 15th taxation year-end, distributions from the trust in respect of a taxpayer's capital interest made in the last 16 days of a calendar year will result in a disposition of the interest.

From a policy perspective, a disposition of the taxpayer's capital interest would be unintended in these circumstances. This is because the relevant distribution would generally be recognized in computing the taxpayer's income, such that a disposition of the taxpayer's interest upon the distribution might give rise to double taxation of the amount distributed. Therefore, we are prepared to recommend an amendment to the Act so that subsection 132.11(4) does, for payments made by a mutual fund trust after 1999, apply for the purpose of paragraph (i) of the definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1) of the Act.

Of course, we cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with the recommendation that we intend to make in this regard. Nonetheless, we trust that this statement of our position is helpful.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(l) there shall be added to the amount determined under the description of A in the definition "refundable capital gains tax on hand" in subsection 132(4) in respect of the transferee for its taxation years that begin after the transfer time the amount, if any, by which

(ii) for the purposes of Part I.3, the transferor's taxation year that, but for this paragraph, would have included the transfer time is deemed to have ended immediately before the transfer time (except that, for greater certainty, nothing in this paragraph shall affect the computation of any amount determined under this Part);

(B) the cost amount to the transferor at the end of the year of a property that was not transferred on the qualifying exchange, and

(ii) the transferee is deemed not to have acquired any property that was transferred to it on the qualifying exchange; and

(q) except as provided in subparagraph (o)(i), the transferor is, notwithstanding subsections 131(8) and 132(6), deemed to be neither a mutual fund corporation nor a mutual fund trust for taxation years that begin after the transfer time.

Proposed Administrative Policy — Extension of filing deadlines after merger

Letter from CRA, May 5, 2004:

Mr. John Mountain, Vice President, Regulation, The Investment Funds Institute of Canada, Toronto, Ontario

Dear Mr. Mountain:

Re: Blanket Extension of Time to Make Tax Filings After Mutual Funds Mergers.

This is in response to your letter dated June 25, 2003, addressed to Mr. David Miller, Assistant Commissioner, Assessment and Collections Branch, and the subsequent meeting between you and Thomas C. Lee representing IFIC, and Doug Watson and André Gauthier representing the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA). Your letter was forwarded to us for reply.

In your letter, you requested that CRA grant a blanket extension of time for all tax filings that must be prepared by unit trusts and mutual fund trusts that are a party to a merger, whether or not the merger was a “qualifying exchange” as defined in subsection 132.2(2) of the Income Tax Act (ITA). The types of tax filings to be covered by your request would include:

- T3 Trust Income Tax Return
- T3 Summary and Supplementary
- NR4 Summary and Supplementary
- T5008 Summary and Supplementary

As well, you requested that the filing due date be extended to the next normal filing date that would have occurred in the absence of the merger (i.e. 90 days after December 15 or December 31). Finally, with respect to the continuing fund, you asked to combine the information for the taxation years immediately before and after the merger date into one T3 slip for each unit-holder (to avoid having to issue multiple slips to the investors for the same calendar year).

Blanket extension of time for return filing

As previously discussed, CRA is unable to agree to a blanket extension of the time for filing the required returns and summaries. However, we are prepared to review all requests for an extension of time for tax filings on a merging of mutual funds on a case-by-case basis. This will ensure that CRA has all requisite information on hand to make an informed decision. In order to consider granting an extension, the Mutual Fund Manager or Trustee should provide CRA with the following information:

- Reasons for requesting an extension of time.
- Names of the units trusts, mutual funds trust or mutual funds corporation involved with their identification numbers, the date of the merger and when CRA may expect to receive the related returns.

- Is the exchange a “qualifying exchange” and is an election made under paragraph 132.2(2)(c) of the definition of “qualifying exchange”?

At the APFF 2002 round table, the Department of Finance indicated that they would not commit to extending the use of section 132.2, by administrative policy, to any entity other than the ones described in the section. Consequently, extensions of time will be granted only to mutual funds or unit trusts that are deemed mutual fund trusts for the purposes of the ITA. An extension of time request will be considered provided the appropriate information outlined above is provided to CRA and the requester agrees to:

- File the T3 returns, T3 summaries, NR4 summaries for each mutual fund that is part of the merger, no later than the date indicated in the letter granting the extension, which cannot exceed the next normal filing date that would have occurred in the absence of the merger.
- Identify each of the relevant T3 returns, when they are filed as either the transferee trust or transferor trust.
- Indicate whether the reorganization has created a new transferee trust instead of a continuation of the existing trust. It should be noted that a Trust account number would be issued to any newly created transferee trust when it is filed.
- Identify any amount of refundable capital gains on hand available to be transferred.
- Attach a copy of the letter approving the request to each of the relevant returns.
- Provide CRA with a breakdown of the types of income and capital gains of the various underlying funds.
- The granting of an extension of time should not, in any circumstances, trigger any year-ends of any mutual funds as defined in the ITA.

Combining of reporting information into one T3 slip for each unit-holder

The T3 Guide currently authorizes mutual funds that file magnetic media to combine information on the T3 slip from several funds onto one T3 slip for each unit-holder. However, when reporting slips are combined, it is necessary to:

- Prepare the tape, cartridge, CD-ROM, or diskette of summaries and slips, which will be submitted to CRA for each individual fund;
- Provide unit-holders with statements that allow them to reconcile the amounts reported on the combined information slips;
- Maintain an audit trail so the combined information slips can be verified, if CRA audits these funds later.

The CRA is prepared to allow the continuing fund to combine the information for the taxation years immediately before and after the merger date into one T3 slip for each unit-holder provided, of course, that the 3 requirements above are also followed. This policy would also apply to any NR4 Summary and slips or T5008 Summary or slips to be issued following a merger of mutual funds.

T4013 — T3 Trust Guide

In order to ensure that the above information is widely disseminated, we will request that the T3 Guide be amended to include that information.

Conclusion

As indicated at our meeting, while the CRA cannot grant a blanket extension of time for tax filings, we are prepared to facilitate a request that helps to improve compliance. CRA will consider a request for an extension of time for tax filings on a merging of mutual funds for the units trusts and mutual funds trusts that are part of the merger. CRA also confirms that the continuing fund may combine information on specific slips for each unit-holder, provided the requester complies with the requirements pointed out in this letter.

To minimize any delay in responding to an extension request, the request should be forwarded to the Assistant Director, Verification and Enforcement Division (ADVE), located in the Taxation Services Office (TSO) where the Funds Manager has its own file. This TSO will review the request and provide its answer to the Funds Manager.

With respect to the issue regarding the combined reporting of information on information slips such as the T-3, we will be forwarding a copy of this letter to the Department of Finance for consideration of a legislative change.

(A) its cost amount, and

(B) the amount that the fund designates in respect of the property in a notification to the Minister accompanying the election in respect of the qualifying exchange;

(b) subject to paragraph (1), the last taxation years of the funds that began before the transfer time are deemed to have ended at the acquisition time, and their first post-exchange years are deemed to have begun immediately after those last taxation years ended;

(c) each depreciable property of a fund (other than property to which subsection (5) applies and property to which paragraph

(iv) where the taxpayer is at the particular time affiliated with one or both of the funds,

(A) those units are deemed not to be identical to any other units of the transferee,

(B) if the taxpayer is the transferee, and the units cease to exist when the taxpayer acquires them (or, for greater certainty, when the taxpayer would but for that cessation have acquired them), the taxpayer is deemed

(l) if the transferor is a mutual fund corporation

(i) for the purpose of subsection 131(4) but, for greater certainty, without having any effect on the computation of any amount determined under this Part, the transferor is deemed in respect of any share disposed of in accordance with paragraph (g) to be a mutual fund corporation at the time of the disposition, and

(ii) for the purpose of Part I.3 but, for greater certainty, without having any effect on the computation of any amount determined under this Part, the transferor's taxation year that, if this Act were read without reference to this paragraph, would have included the transfer time is deemed to have ended immediately before the transfer time;

(m) for the purpose of determining the funds' capital gains redemptions (as defined in subsection 131(6) or 132(4), as the case may be), for their taxation years that include the transfer time,

(i) the total of the cost amounts to the transferor of all its properties at the end of the year is deemed to be the total of all amounts each of which is

(A) the transferor's proceeds of disposition of a property that was transferred to a transferee on the qualifying exchange, or

(B) the cost amount to the transferor at the end of the year of a property that was not transferred on the qualifying exchange, and

(ii) the transferee is deemed not to have acquired any property that was transferred to it on the qualifying exchange; and

(n) except as provided in subparagraph (l)(i), the transferor is, notwithstanding subsections 131(8) and 132(6), deemed to be neither a mutual fund corporation nor a mutual fund trust for taxation years that begin after the transfer time.

Technical Notes: Rules of General Application

New subparagraph 132.2(3)(g)(iii) applies in determining whether a person is a "designated beneficiary" (as defined in section 210) of a trust. Under the definition designated beneficiary, certain persons or partnerships that are beneficiaries under a trust may be treated (or may cause trusts or partnerships of which they are beneficiaries or members to be treated) as designated beneficiaries under the trust, unless the relevant interest in the trust is held at all times by the person or partnership, as the case may be, or by another person exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax, under Part I of the Act, on all of the other person's taxable income.

In a qualifying exchange, a mutual fund trust or mutual fund corporation (transferor) transfers all or substantially all of its property to another mutual fund trust (transferee) and takes back units of the transferee. Those units are then provided by the transferor to its investors in exchange for their shares or units of the transferor. New subparagraph 132.2(3)(g)(iii) ensures that, in these circumstances, the transferor is treated, for the purpose of the definition designated beneficiary, as not having held the units of the transferee.

This amendment applies for qualifying exchanges that occur after 1998. A similar rule, in former subparagraph 132.2(1)(j)(iii), applies for qualifying exchanges that occurred after June 1994 and before 1999.

Rules of General Application — Losses

132.2(3)(f) and (g)

New paragraphs 132.2(3)(f) and (g) are amended to ensure that the mutual fund merger rules do not apply inappropriately to create artificial or "phantom" losses. Although the changes reflected in these new provisions are not expected to be relevant to most qualifying exchanges, the following is a description of their purpose and effect.

Under the definition "qualifying exchange" in new subsection 132.2(1), all or substantially all of the outstanding shares issued by the transferor must be disposed of to the transferor within the 60 days after the transfer time, and every person so disposing of shares of the transferor must receive only units of the transferee as consideration. The second leg of a qualifying exchange is thus a set of transactions in which the transferor's investors replace their shares of the transferor with units of the transferee. The tax effect of those transactions are governed by paragraphs 132.2(1)(f) and (g). For clarity, these notes reflect the legislation by referring to investments in the transferor — whether a corporation or a trust — as shares, reserving the term "units" to refer to the units of the transferee mutual fund trust.

Existing paragraph 132.2(1)(i) provides that if, within 60 days after the transfer time, the transferor fund disposed of units of the transferee in exchange for shares of itself, its proceeds of disposition are deemed to be nil. Since the units acquired by the transferor in return for its property are deemed, under existing paragraph 132.2(1)(h) (now new paragraph 132.2(3)(e)), also to have had a cost of nil, this provision allows the transferor to roll those units out to its investors with no tax consequences to it. New paragraph 132.2(3)(f) provides that if, within 60 days after the transfer time, the transferor fund disposes of units of the transferee in exchange for shares of itself, its proceeds of disposition will be deemed to be equal to the cost amount of the units to the transferor immediately before the disposition. This change — from nil proceeds to proceeds equal to cost amount — ensures appropriate results if the transferor held units of the transferee that were acquired otherwise than as a result of the qualifying exchange. In this situation, that first tranche of units will have a cost base that, pursuant to section 47, will be averaged with the second tranche of units (i.e. the units that the transferor acquired in the qualifying exchange). Existing paragraph 132.2(1)(i) deems the proceeds of the disposition of the second tranche of units to be nil, an inappropriate result in that it creates a phantom loss. New paragraph 132.2(3)(f), deeming the proceeds of disposition equal to the cost amount of the units to the transferor immediately before the disposition, ensures that the transferor can still roll units of the transferee out to its investors with no tax consequences to it, and avoids the creation of a phantom loss.

Existing subparagraph 132.2(1)(j)(i) provides that, where a taxpayer disposes of shares of the transferor in exchange for units of the transferee within that same 60-day period, both the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the shares and the taxpayer's cost of the units are deemed to be equal to the cost amount of the shares immediately before the transfer time. New subparagraph 132.2(3)(g)(i) provides that, where a taxpayer disposes of shares of the transferor in exchange for units of the transferee within that same 60-day period, both the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the shares and the taxpayer's cost of the units are deemed to be equal to the cost amount of the shares immediately before the disposition. This change — from measuring the cost amount of the shares immediately before the transfer time to measuring it immediately before the disposition — ensures that the transferor's investors will not realize any gain or loss on their exchange of their shares for units of the transferee.

Paragraph 132.2(3)(g) also includes a new subparagraph 132.2(3)(g)(iv) to address the disposition by certain persons or partnerships of the units in the transferee that they received on the qualifying exchange. Those affected by this new provision are those who, when they acquire the units, are affiliated with one or both of the funds. This could include, for example, the transferee itself, or a corporation it controls.

The subparagraph first deems the units received in the qualifying exchange not to be identical to any other units of the transferee. This segregates the new units from the averaging effect of section 47.

Next, the subparagraph specifies the effects of disposing of the new units. If the taxpayer is the transferee, and the units cease to exist when the taxpayer acquires them (if, for example, the units are cancelled immediately on receipt), clause 132.2(3)(g)(iv)(B) provides two effects. First, to prevent any possible question in this regard, the taxpayer is deemed to have acquired those units. This ensures, among other things, that subparagraph (i) establishes the taxpayer's cost of the units. Second, the taxpayer is treated as having disposed of those units immediately after it acquired them, for proceeds of disposition equal to the cost amount to the taxpayer of those units at that time. This ensures, for greater certainty, that a transferee that had an investment in the transferor prior to the qualifying exchange will not incur a phantom loss as a result of exchanging its shares in the transferor in return for units of itself.

If the taxpayer is affiliated with one or both of the funds, but is not the transferee, clause 132.2(3)(g)(iv)(C) provides that, for the purpose of computing any gain or loss of the taxpayer from the taxpayer's first disposition of each of those units, the proceeds of disposition of the unit will depend on whether the disposition is a renunciation or surrender of the unit or some other disposition.

New subclause 132.2(3)(g)(iv)(C)(I) provides that, if the disposition is a renunciation or surrender of the unit by the taxpayer for no consideration, and is not in favour of any person other than the transferee, the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of that unit are deemed to be equal to that unit's cost amount to the taxpayer immediately before that disposition. This ensures that an affiliated taxpayer will never incur a phantom loss or gain on the renunciation or surrender of the unit.

If the disposition is not a renunciation or surrender of the unit described in subclause 132.2(3)(g)(iv)(C)(I), the affiliated taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of that unit are deemed by subclause 132.2(3)(g)(iv)(C)(II) to be equal to the greater of that unit's fair market value and its cost amount to the taxpayer immediately before that disposition. This ensures that the taxpayer will never incur a loss, including a phantom loss, on a disposition of one of those units, but may incur a gain.

Two additional points should be noted with respect to the operation of new subparagraph 132.2(3)(g)(iv).

- The deeming, by subclause 132.2(3)(g)(iv)(C)(II), of a taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the units the taxpayer acquired on the qualifying exchange applies only to the first disposition of each unit. It is possible that a taxpayer might dispose of a unit and then reacquire the same unit (under, for example, the change in residence rules in section 128.1). The subclause will not apply to any subsequent disposition of the unit by that taxpayer.
- In some circumstances, an affiliated taxpayer may have a latent loss on a share of the transferor prior to the qualifying exchange, and may wish to realize that loss. This can be done, if the affiliated taxpayer disposes of the share prior to the qualifying exchange. However, the possible application of the Act's "superficial loss" and loss deferral rules would have to be borne in mind.

New paragraphs 132.2(3)(f) and (g), together with the rest of new subsection 132.2(3), generally apply to qualifying exchanges that occur after 1998. A limited exception applies in respect of certain qualifying exchanges in respect of which a return of income, claiming the losses sought to be prevented by these amendments, was filed by the transferee mutual fund before July 18, 2005.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Feb. 14, 2006:

Mr. Stephen S. Ruby, Davies Ward Phillips & Vineberg LLP, Toronto, ON

Dear Mr. Ruby:

I am writing in response to your letter of January 31, 2006 requesting that we recommend several technical amendments to the mutual fund merger rules in section 132.2 of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"). These rules are already the subject of extensive proposed amendments, and all section references in this letter refer to the proposed legislation released in draft on July 18, 2005.

1. Timing

You note that there appears to be an inconsistency in the time periods referred to in the definition of "qualifying exchange" in subsection 132.2(1) and in the preamble of paragraph 132.2(3)(g). The definition of "qualifying exchange" requires that all or substantially all of the shares or units of the Transferor [As defined in section 132.2 of the Act.] be disposed of to the Transferee within 60 days after the "transfer time", which is defined to be the time when all or substantially all of the property of the Transferor is transferred to the Transferee [As defined in section 132.2 of the Act.]. The preamble to paragraph 132.2(3)(g) requires that the exchange of shares or units of the Transferor back to the Transferor in exchange for units of the Transferee occur on a tax-deferred basis only if the exchange takes place within 60 days after the day that includes the transfer time.

You have requested that the Act be amended to clarify that the two 60-day periods start at the same time. We note that the time period in paragraph 132.2(3)(f) also refers to an event within 60 days after the day that includes the transfer time. We can confirm that in both instances it was not intended by the addition of the words "the day that includes" to refer to a commencement date on the day following the day that includes the transfer time; rather it has always been intended that the commencement date be the day that includes the transfer time.

To clarify that all of the references to a 60-day period in section 132.2 are intended to refer to the same time period, and that the period is to commence on the day that includes the transfer time, we intend to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the references to "the day that includes" in paragraphs 132.2(3)(f) and (g) be deleted. We will also recommend that these changes be applicable to qualifying exchanges that occur after 1998 — the date that the proposed amendments that include the addition of the words "the day that includes" are proposed to come into effect.

2. Application of Section 116

You have noted that there is a concern that where a Transferor acquires its own shares or units in exchange for units of a Transferee in the course of a qualifying exchange, section 116 of the Act may apply to impose a reporting and withholding obligation. Section 116 generally applies when a non-resident person disposes of taxable Canadian property that is not excluded property. If the Transferor is a mutual fund trust or a mutual fund corporation at the time of the exchange by a non-resident unitholder or shareholder of the Transferor, the shares or units of the Transferor that the unitholder disposes of will generally not be taxable Canadian property at that time and therefore section 116 would not be applicable. However, your concern arises because paragraph 132.2(3)(n) deems the Transferor not to be a mutual fund corporation or a mutual fund trust, as the case may be, for its taxation years beginning after the transfer time. Pursuant to paragraph 132.2(3)(b), the first taxation year of the Transferor after the transfer time begins immediately after the "acquisition time". Given that the Act provides that the exchange may occur within 60 days after the transfer time, it is possible that the exchange will occur after the acquisition time — generally the time that the Transferee is treated as having acquired the property (other than depreciable property) transferred to it by the Transferor — and thus that the shares or units of the Transferor will be taxable Canadian property.

From a policy perspective it is not intended that the exchange of units or shares of a Transferor for units of the Transferee by a non-resident in the course of a qualifying exchange should be subject to section 116. As a result, we are prepared to recommend that the Act be amended to ensure that such a transaction is not subject to section 116. Given that this is an unintended technical deficiency in the Act, we will recommend that the amendment be applicable to qualifying exchanges that occur after June 1994, the date the mutual fund merger rules were introduced.

3. Application of Part XIII.2

You have also noted that there is a concern that where a Transferor acquires its own shares or units in exchange for units of a Transferee in the course of a qualifying exchange, Part XIII.2 of the Act may apply to impose a 15% tax. Unlike the discussion above, the concern arises only if the exchange occurs prior to the acquisition time, when the Transferor is a mutual fund trust or a mutual fund corporation. In general, Part XIII.2 will apply only if the units or shares of the Transferor are listed on a prescribed stock exchange and their value is primarily attributable to real property in Canada, Canadian resource property or timber resource property. If the units or shares meet those conditions, a 15% tax will apply to any amount that is paid or credited to a non-resident investor that is not otherwise subject to tax under Part I or Part XIII.2.

From a policy perspective it is not intended that the exchange of units or shares of a Transferor for units of the Transferee by a non-resident in the course of a qualifying exchange should be subject to Part XIII.2. As a result, we are prepared to recommend that the Act be amended to ensure that such a transaction is not subject to Part XIII.2. We will recommend that the amendment be applicable to qualifying exchanges that occur after 2004, the date Part XIII.2 was introduced.

In conclusion, we will recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended as discussed above to clarify the commencement of the 60-day period and to clarify that the exchange of units or shares of a Transferor for units of the Transferee by a non-resident in the course of a qualifying exchange is not subject to section 116 or Part XIII.2.

While we cannot offer any assurance that the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendation in this regard, I hope that this statement of our position is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(7) Amendment or revocation of election — The Minister may, on joint application by the funds on or before the due date of an election referred to in paragraph (c) of the definition "qualifying exchange" in subsection (1), grant permission to amend or revoke the election.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), s. 130, will amend s. 132.2 to read as above (para. 132.2(3)(h) also amended by S.C.

2008, c. 28 (Bill C-50, Royal Assent June 18, 2008), subsec. 41(2), applicable in respect of 2009 et seq., applicable as follows:

The definitions "first post-exchange year" and "share" in subsec. 132.2(1), and subsecs. 132.2(2) to (5), are applicable to qualifying exchanges that occur after 1998, except that if a qualifying exchange occurred before July 18, 2005 and the transferee has before July 18, 2005 filed a return of income, for any taxation year, that identified the realization of any loss that would not have been realized if paras. 132.2(3)(f) and (g), as amended, had applied in respect of the qualifying exchange, those paras. shall be read in their application to the qualifying exchange as follows:

(f) the transferor's proceeds of disposition of any units of the transferee that were received by the transferor as consideration for the disposition of the property, and that were disposed of by the transferor within 60 days after the day that includes the transfer time in exchange for shares of the transferor, are deemed to be nil;

(g) if, within 60 days after the day that includes the transfer time, a taxpayer disposes of shares of the transferor to the transferor in exchange for units of the transferee

(i) the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the shares and the cost to the taxpayer of the units are deemed to be equal to the cost amount to the taxpayer of the shares immediately before the transfer time,

(ii) where all of the taxpayer's shares of the transferor have been so disposed of, for the purpose of applying section 39.1 in respect of the taxpayer after that disposition, the transferee is deemed to be the same entity as the transferor, and

(iii) for the purpose of the definition "designated beneficiary" in section 210, the units are deemed not to have been held at any time by the transferor;

For qualifying exchanges that occurred after June 1994 and before 1999, para. 132.2(1)(j) is to be read as follows:

(j) where shares of the transferor have been disposed of by a taxpayer to the transferor in exchange for units of the transferee within 60 days after the transfer time,

(i) the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the shares and the cost to the taxpayer of the units are deemed to be equal to the cost amount to the taxpayer of the shares immediately before the transfer time,

(ii) if all of the taxpayer's shares of the transferor have been so disposed of, for the purposes of applying section 39.1 in respect of the taxpayer after that disposition, the transferee is deemed to be the same entity as the transferor, and

(iii) for the purpose of the definition "designated beneficiary" in section 210, the units are deemed not to have been held at any time by the transferor;

The definition "qualifying exchange" in subsec. 132.2(1) and subsecs. 132.2(6) and (7) are applicable to qualifying exchanges that occur after June 1994.

If a valid election referred to in para. (c) of the definition "qualifying exchange" in subsec. 132.2(2) was made, the election continues to have the effect of having s. 132.2, as modified from time to time, apply to the transfer.

If a valid election referred to in subsec. 159(4) of the Income Tax Amendments Act, 1997 [S.C. 1998, c. 19; see History to subsec. 132.2(1)] was made in respect of a qualifying exchange, subsec. 132.2(1) of the Act is to be read without reference to para. 132.2(1)(p), and the election is, on the application of this amendment, deemed to have the effect that subsec. 132.2(3), in respect of the qualifying exchange, is to be read without reference to para. 132.2(3)(i).

Technical Notes: Section 132.2 provides rules to allow two mutual fund trusts, or a mutual fund trust and a mutual fund corporation, to merge on a tax-deferred basis. Such a merger is referred to as a "qualifying exchange".

In addition to introducing several substantive improvements to the rules in section 132.2, these amendments restructure the provision as a whole. In general terms, the section is now organized as follows: new subsection 132.2(1) sets out definitions that apply for the section; subsection (2) describes the order in which the events that make up a qualifying exchange are considered to have occurred; subsection (3) provides a set of general rules; subsection (4) deals with non-depreciable property that is transferred on the qualifying exchange; and subsection (5) deals with depreciable property that is transferred. Subsection (6) establishes the due date for the election to treat a transfer as a qualifying exchange; and subsection (7) provides authority for the Minister of National Revenue to allow that election to be amended or revoked.

Despite this restructuring, the basic principles of section 132.2 remain unchanged, as do most aspects of its operation. The exceptions — the areas where these amendments change the provision substantively — have to do with depreciable property that is transferred on a qualifying exchange, and with the election to treat a transaction as a qualifying exchange. Further modifications have been made to prevent the creation of artificial or "phantom" losses, generally in circumstances where one fund holds units or shares of the other fund immediately before the transfer time.

Transfers of Depreciable Property

In its current form, section 132.2 does not deal comprehensively with transfers of depreciable property between mutual funds. In particular, the deemed timing of the transfer, in relation to the deemed year-end of the funds, may prevent either fund from claiming capital cost allowance (CCA) for the last taxation year that began before the qualifying exchange. The transferor has disposed of the property two moments before the end of its year, and the transferee will not acquire it until the last moment of its own year.

To ensure that one CCA claim is available for that last year, new subsection 132.2(5) provides a special regime for qualifying exchanges that include transfers of depreciable property. A key aspect of these special rules is the ordering of events in accordance with new subsection 132.2(2). That subsection provides that, starting with the actual (i.e., legal) transfer of property between a transferor fund and a transferee fund that carry out a qualifying exchange, the following series of times occurs, each immediately after the previous one:

Name of Time	Description	Reference
the transfer time	The actual transfer of the property between the funds takes place.	definition "qualifying exchange" in 132.2(1)
the first intervening time	The funds are treated as having disposed of and reacquired non-transferred property (other than depreciable property).	132.2(3)(a)
the acquisition time	The transferee is treated as having acquired transferred property (other than depreciable property); the funds' taxation years are treated as ending.	132.2(4)(a); 132.2(3)(b)
the beginning of the funds' first post-exchange years		132.2(3)(b)
the depreciables disposition time	The transferor is deemed to have disposed of any transferred property that is depreciable property.	132.2(5)(a)
the second intervening time	The funds are treated as having disposed of and reacquired any non-transferred property that is depreciable property.	132.2(3)(c)
the depreciables acquisition time	The transferee is deemed to have acquired any transferred property that is depreciable property.	132.2(5)(b)

As a result of this timing, the transferor fund will be treated as owning, until after its first post-exchange year has begun, any depreciable property that is being transferred. This will ensure that the transfer does not prevent the transferor from deducting CCA in respect of property of that class, for its taxation year that ends at the acquisition time. The new rule also ensures that the transferee does not duplicate that deduction, by treating the transferee as having acquired the property only after its new taxation year has begun.

This treatment of depreciable property applies, along with most aspects of the restructuring of section 132.2, to qualifying exchanges that take place after 1998.

Timing of Election

For section 132.2 to apply to a transfer of property between mutual funds, the definition "qualifying exchange" currently requires the funds to file their joint election in prescribed form with the Minister of National Revenue within six months after the transfer time. This timing requirement is changed to allow greater flexibility. The amended definition "qualifying exchange" requires that the funds' election be made before the election's "due date", defined in new subsection 132.2(6) to mean either the day that is six months after the day that includes the transfer time or any later day that the Minister accepts, on joint application by the funds. An example of a case in which the Minister might accept such an application would be one in which the Minister has already decided to accept a late filing of the funds' returns of income for the taxation year that includes the qualifying exchange.

In certain cases, mutual funds that have elected to treat a transfer as a qualifying exchange may wish to amend, or even revoke, their election. New subsection 132.2(7) allows the funds to do this, on joint application and with the permission of the Minister.

134. Non-resident-owned corporation not a Canadian corporation, etc. — Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, a non-resident-owned investment corporation that would, but for this section, be a Canadian corporation, taxable Canadian corporation or private corporation shall be deemed not to be a Canadian corporation, taxable Canadian corporation or private corporation, as the case may be, except for the purposes of section 87, subsection 88(2) and sections 212.1 and 219.

Definitions [s. 134]: "Canadian corporation" — 89(1), 248(1); "non-resident-owned investment corporation" — 133(8), 248(1); "private corporation", "taxable Canadian corporation" — 89(1), 248(1).

134.1 (1) NRO — transition — This section applies to a corporation that

- was a non-resident-owned investment corporation in a taxation year;
- is not a non-resident-owned investment corporation in the following taxation year (in this section referred to as the corporation's "first non-NRO year"); and
- elects in writing filed with the Minister on or before the corporation's filing-due date for its first non-NRO year to have this section apply.

Selected Cases [subsec. 134.1(1)]: CGU Holdings Canada Ltd. v. R., [2009] 3 C.T.C. 19 (FCA) (NRO status did not continue following amalgamation).

(2) Application — A corporation to which this section applies is deemed to be a non-resident-owned investment corporation in its first non-NRO year for the purposes of applying, in respect of dividends paid on shares of its capital stock in its first non-NRO year to a non-resident person or a non-resident-owned investment corporation, subsections 133(6) to (9) (other than the definition "non-resident-owned investment corporation" in subsection 133(8)) and section 212 and any tax treaty.

Proposed Amendment — 134.1(2)

(2) Application — For the purposes of applying subsections 104(10) and (11) and 133(6) to (9) (other than the definition "non-resident-owned investment corporation" in subsection 133(8)), section 212 and any tax treaty, a corporation described in subsection (1) is deemed to be a non-resident-owned investment corporation in its first non-NRO year in respect of dividends paid in that year on shares of its capital stock to a non-resident person, to a trust for the benefit of non-resident persons or their unborn issue or to a non-resident-owned investment corporation.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), s. 131, will amend subsec. 134.1(2) to read as above, applicable to a corporation that ceases to be a non-resident-owned investment corporation because of a transaction or event that occurs, or a circumstance that arises, in a taxation year of the corporation that ends after February 27, 2000.

Technical Notes: Section 134.1 was enacted, along with section 134.2, in 2001 to provide transitional relief for corporations that cease to be non-resident owned investment corporations (NROs). The essence of the relief provided in section 134.1 is to allow such a corporation to recover refundable tax by paying a dividend in its "first non-NRO year". In its current form, the section applies only in respect of dividends paid to a non-resident person or another NRO. There is, however, another kind of shareholder to whom an NRO may pay a dividend in respect of which it is appropriate to apply the section — a trust for the benefit of non-resident persons or their unborn issue. Since such a trust could, under the rules that have governed NROs themselves, have held the shares and debt of an NRO, a dividend to the trust ought to support a refund of the former NRO's refundable tax. Subsection 134.1(2) is therefore amended to include such dividends within the section's scope.

In addition, subsections 104(10) and (11) are added to the list of provisions in subsection 134.1(2) for which a former NRO is deemed to be an NRO during its first non-NRO year. Prior to the repeal of the NRO system, a trust that received a dividend from an NRO and that did not in turn distribute the amount of the dividend to its non-resident beneficiaries was entitled to deduct that amount from the trust's income under subsection 104(10). Subsection 104(11) then deemed the amount deducted under subsection 104(10) to have been paid to a non-resident beneficiary, with the result that Part XIII withholding tax would typically be payable. These two subsections are included in subsection 134.1(2) in order to allow a trust to benefit from these provisions in the year it receives the final payment of dividends from the former NRO.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Nov. 1, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

Thank you for your letter dated October 2, 2001 in which you request that we consider recommending an amendment to section 134.1 of the Income Tax Act, a relieving measure relating to the phase-out of non-resident-owned investment corporations (NROs). Section 134.1 treats a corporation that has ceased to be an NRO as an NRO during its first non-NRO year, so that it can claim a refund of the 25% tax paid while an NRO. The refund is based on dividends paid by the corporation during its first non-NRO year to a non-resident person or another NRO.

Your concern is that the relieving effect of section 134.1 is too narrow, given that the Income Tax Act contemplates that an NRO can be structured so that all of its shares are owned by a trust resident in Canada for the benefit of non-resident persons. In such a case, the NRO would pay dividends in its first non-NRO year to the trust, which would then allocate the dividends to the non-resident beneficiaries, but because the trust is resident in Canada the relief provided by section 134.1 would not be available.

We have reviewed your request, and I can confirm that the denial of the section 134.1 relief to a trust under the conditions you have described is unintended in policy terms. We are therefore prepared to recommend an amendment to the Income Tax Act that would allow an NRO to claim the relief available under section 134.1, where a Canadian-resident trust owns all of the shares of an NRO for the benefit of non-resident persons. We intend to recommend that this change be brought forward in a package of technical amendments at an early opportunity, and that the amendment have effect for the same time period as section 134.1 of the Act.

While I cannot offer any assurances that our recommendation in this matter will be accepted, I hope our statement of intent in this letter will be helpful in responding to your concern.

Thank you again for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — Prescribed payments

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Oct. 23, 2007:

Dear [xxx]:

I am responding to your September 7, 2007 letter to Brian Ernewein regarding our December 6, 2004 and October 11, 2005 letters to you and certain corporate reorganizations that have occurred (or will occur) this year.

In our December 6, 2004 letter we agreed to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the patronage payments from [xxx] and [xxx] be prescribed payments for the purpose of subsection 135(1.1) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"). Following certain corporate reorganizations in 2004 and 2005 — the amalgamation of [xxx] with a holding company and [xxx] being continued under the Canada Business Corporations Act (CBCA) as [xxx] — we further agreed in our October 11, 2005 letter to recommend to the Minister of Finance to [sic.] that the patronage dividends from amalgamated [xxx] to [xxx] and [xxx] Inc. be prescribed payments for the purpose of subsection 135(1.1) of the Act.

In the past year [xxx] acquired [xxx]. You indicate that on May 29, 2007 [xxx] was successful in its takeover bid and acquired, pursuant to a cash offer, approximately 82% of the common shares of [xxx] and approximately half of its outstanding preferred shares. On June 15, 2007 [xxx] completed its acquisition of the balance of [xxx] common and preferred shares. As a result, [xxx] is now a wholly-owned subsidiary of [xxx] and [xxx] has been continued as a [xxx] corporation. In addition, it is anticipated the [xxx] will be amalgamated with [xxx] Inc. ("Amalco") on November 1, 2007 and the amalgamated company will use the business name [xxx].

You have requested that payments by amalgamated [xxx] to Amalco [xxx] qualify as prescribed payments for the purpose of subsection 135(1.1) of the Act. As discussed in the technical note accompanying subsection 135(1.1) of the Act, the concept of a prescribed payment was introduced to accommodate cooperative structures that would, but for non-substantive technical reasons, satisfy the definition of a cooperative corporation. While [xxx] is a federally incorporated co-operative under the Canada Co-operative Act, it is unable to meet the member test in paragraph 136(2)(c) of the Act which requires that 90% of its members be individuals, other cooperative corporations, or corporations or partnerships that carry on the business of farming.

[xxx] currently has two active members [xxx] and [xxx] and two inactive members being a subsidiary of each of [xxx] and [xxx]. You have indicated that as a result of the amalgamation Amalco will be [xxx] only active member and will continue to be entitled to patronage payments for business done with [xxx]. There will be no other changes to existing circumstances. Amalco proposes to continue the combined agri-business of the [xxx] predecessor members essentially as before except for the disposition of various assets pursuant to a consent agreement with the Canadian Competition Bureau.

In addition, you have indicated that Amalco will continue [xxx] Inc.'s existing governance structure, in particular, prairie farmers will have a strong voice in the business of Amalco and will continue to participate in the governance of Amalco by electing a minority of directors through the [xxx] currently receives operational funding from [xxx] Inc. and after the amalgamation will receive funding from Amalco.

Following the completion of the amalgamation, the final structure will have been transformed considerably from the original structure described in your September 7, 2004 letter, although the business operations carried on by [xxx] members have remained essentially the same. After careful consideration we intend to recommend to the Minister of Finance that patronage payments by amalgamated [xxx] to Amalco be prescribed payments for the purpose of subsection 135(1.1).

This recommendation relies on your representations that (i) Amalco proposes to continue the combined agri-business of the [xxx] predecessor members essentially as before, (ii) prairie farmers will participate in the governance of Amalco and (iii) [xxx] will continue to receive funding from Amalco. Should there be any material changes to these or other salient aspects of the planned structure we expect that you will advise us so that we may have the opportunity to reconsider the appropriateness of our recommendation.

While we cannot offer any assurance that our recommendation in this matter will be accepted, we hope our statement of intent in this letter will be helpful in responding to your concern.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard Lalonde, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Oct. 11, 2005:

[xxx], Calgary, AB

Dear [xxx]:

I am responding to your April 7, 2005 letter and subsequent discussions with Stephanie Smith of this Division regarding our December 6, 2004 letter to you and certain corporate reorganizations that have occurred since the date of our letter. In our December 6, 2004 letter we agreed to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the patronage payments from [xxx] to [xxx] and [xxx] carrying on business as [xxx] be prescribed payments for the purpose of subsection 135(1.1) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"). Since that date [xxx] has amalgamated with a holding company ("Holdco"), [xxx] has been continued under the Canada Business Corporations Act (CBCA) as [xxx] and both [xxx] and [xxx] have incorporated wholly-owned subsidiaries. You have asked for our confirmation as to the effect of the planned prescription in these new circumstances.

You indicate that [xxx] amalgamated with Holdco effective January 1, 2005 such that its members, [xxx] and [xxx] now directly own all of the shares of [xxx] as to one membership share each and the remaining (non-membership) shares as to 57% and 43% respectively. In addition, both [xxx] and [xxx] have also incorporated wholly-owned subsidiaries which became members of [xxx] as of January 1, 2005 and each holds one membership share. To date neither of the subsidiaries has commenced carrying on a business.

The second reorganization relates to the recapitalization of [xxx] which was completed on March 31, 2005. [xxx] has been continued under the CBCA as [xxx]. All of the existing shares were converted into a single class of common voting shares, and debt of approximately $171 million owing to holders of convertible notes was exchanged for common voting shares. You indicate that [xxx]... The reorganization was conducted to allow the company to raise the additional equity it requires to materially strengthen its financial position, improve its debt-to-equity ratio and provide greater flexibility to withstand extended periods of below average crop production. [xxx] farming customers will continue to participate in the governance of [xxx] by electing a minority of directors, and through the establishment of a new cooperative, the [xxx] will provide funding to [xxx].

You have asked that we prescribe patronage payments paid by amalgamated [xxx] to [xxx] and [xxx]. As discussed in the technical note accompanying subsection 135(1.1) of the Act, the concept of a prescribed payment was introduced to accommodate cooperative structures that would, but for non-substantive technical reasons, satisfy the definition of a cooperative corporation. [xxx] is unable to meet the member test in paragraph 136(2)(c) of the Act which requires that 90% of its members are individuals, other cooperative corporations, or corporations or partnerships that carry on the business of farming.

In accordance with our statement in the December 6 letter that in principle we were comfortable with extending the prescription to an amalgamated [xxx], we confirm that we intend to recommend to the Minister of Finance that patronage payments from amalgamated [xxx] to [xxx] be prescribed payments. The recapitalization of [xxx] and its continuance under the CBCA as [xxx] is a more significant change. After having carefully considered the situation, we intend to recommend to the Minister of Finance that patronage payments from amalgamated [xxx] to [xxx] be prescribed payments.

As discussed in our December 6, 2004 letter we are comfortable, in principle, with extending the prescription to patronage payments from [xxx] to a wholly-owned subsidiary of either [xxx] or [xxx]. However, without having any information on the type of business carried on by the subsidiaries, we cannot definitively comment on whether such payments would be prescribed payments. Assuming one of the subsidiaries commenced carrying on one or more of the businesses currently carried on by its parent, it is likely that patronage payments from amalgamated [xxx] to that subsidiary would receive a favourable recommendation in terms of prescription.

While we cannot offer any assurance that our recommendations in this matter will be accepted, we hope our statement of intent in this letter will be helpful in responding to your concern.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 6, 2004:

Dear [xxx]:

I am responding to your September 7, 2004 letter to Len Farber and subsequent discussions with Stephanie Smith of this Division regarding the proposed change dealing with patronage dividends announced in the March 23, 2004 budget. The budget proposed that section 135 of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") be amended to prevent persons, other than cooperatives and credit unions, from deducting patronage dividends paid after March 22, 2004, to non-arm's length persons. Draft legislative proposals released on September 16, 2004 clarified that the current definition of "cooperative corporation" in subsection 136(2) of the Act will be used for the budget proposal. You have asked us to "grandfather" or exclude prescribed taxpayers (i) who have held forth the prospect of patronage allocations as referred to in paragraph 135(5)(a) for the previous ten years and (ii) whose principal business was the sale of agricultural supplies, products or services or any combination thereof.

You describe a situation where [xxx] may no longer be able to deduct patronage dividends as a result of the budget proposal. [xxx] is not a cooperative corporation for purposes of the budget proposal as it does not meet the Act's technical definition of cooperative corporation. [xxx] satisfies all of the requirements of the definition except for paragraph 136(2)(c), being the member and shareholder test.

[xxx] has three members, who are also its only shareholders — [xxx]. Holdco, which is owned by [xxx] and [xxx] was created at the request of [xxx] lending bank for purposes of the bank's security arrangements. Holdco does not receive patronage dividends.

[xxx] is unable to meet the member test in paragraph 136(2)(c) which requires that 90% of its members are individuals, other cooperative corporations, or corporations or partnerships that carry on the business of farming. [xxx] fails because Holdco, [xxx] and [xxx] are corporations that do not carry on the business of farming [xxx] and that are not cooperative corporations as defined in the Act. [xxx] and [xxx], similar to [xxx] satisfy most of the requirements of the cooperative corporation definition. As a result of failing the member test, [xxx] is unable to meet the shareholder test which requires that 90% of its shares be held by the members described in paragraph (c).

Having carefully considered your situation, we intend to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the proposal be amended to provide that a non-arm's length patronage payment will continue to be deductible if it is a prescribed payment (and assuming it otherwise meets the conditions set out in section 135). In your specific situation, we will recommend that the patronage payments from [xxx] to [xxx] and [xxx] be prescribed payments.

You have indicated in discussions with Ms. Smith that [xxx] and [xxx] are considering a corporate restructuring such that [xxx] may set up a wholly-owned corporation that will carry on the [xxx] business. Other restructurings are also being considered which include [xxx] and [xxx] creating a partnership and [xxx] amalgamating with Holdco. In principle, we are comfortable with extending the prescription I have described to an amalgamated [xxx] and to [xxx] making patronage payments to a wholly-owned subsidiary of either [xxx] or [xxx] however, without having knowledge of the specific structure we cannot definitively comment on whether such payments would be prescribed payments. Similarly, before commenting on a partnership or other structure we would need to understand the facts of the structure.

While we cannot offer any assurance that our recommendation in this matter will be accepted, we hope our statement of intent in this letter will be helpful in responding to your concern.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

History: Subsec. 135(1.1) added by 2005, c. 19, subsec. 32(2), applicable in respect of payments made by a taxpayer after March 22, 2004, except that subsec. 135(1.1) does not apply to the portion, if any, of a qualifying payment in respect of a taxation year that

- (a) can reasonably be regarded as having in commercial terms the nature of any one or more of an incentive payment, a rebate or a sales allowance; and
- (b) would have been deductible under the Act in computing the income of the paying corporation for the taxation year if that portion had become payable in the taxation year as an incentive payment, a rebate or a sales allowance.

Subsec. 32(5)–(8) of the said c. 19 provide:

(5) For the purposes of subssecs. (4) and (6) [of the amending legislation — ed.], an amount paid by a corporation is a qualifying payment in respect of a taxation year if

- (a) the taxation year began before March 23, 2004, and the amount is paid pursuant to a resolution that was passed by the corporation's Board of Directors before that date; and
- (b) the corporation elects, in writing filed with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the day that is three months after the day on which the amending legislation is assented to, to have this subsection apply to the payment.

(6) If a qualifying payment in respect of a taxation year was not paid within 12 months after the taxation year, but is paid on or before the day that is three months after the day on which the amending legislation is assented to [i.e. before Aug. 14/05 — ed.], for the purpose of applying the amendment to the taxpayer the amount is deemed to have been paid on March 23, 2004.

(7) If a corporation

- (a) before March 23, 2004, recorded in writing its intention to deduct under s. 135 an amount in computing its income for a taxation year the balance-due day for which is before that date,
- (b) is liable to pay an amount of tax under Part I of the Act for the taxation year that exceeds the amount to which it would be so liable if the Act were read without reference to subsec. 135(1.1), as amended, and
- (c) pays to the Receiver General that excess amount within six months after the amending legislation is assented to, the corporation is, for the purpose of determining any interest or penalty payable by it under the Act, deemed to have paid that excess amount on its balance-due day for the taxation year.

(8) If a corporation

(a) before March 23, 2004 recorded in writing its intention to deduct under s. 135 an amount in computing its income for a taxation year, and

(b) was required by Part I of the Act to pay before March 23, 2004 a part or instalment of tax that exceeds the amount it would have been so required to pay if the Act were read without reference to subsec. 135(1.1), as amended, the corporation is not liable to pay interest under subsec. 161(2), or to pay a penalty under s. 163.1, in respect of that excess.

Regulations: No prescribed payments yet for 135(1.1)(b), but see comfort letters above. The Technical Notes (Dec. 6, 2004) state: "The concept of a prescribed payment has been introduced in order to accommodate cooperative structures that would, but for non-substantive technical reasons, satisfy the definition of a cooperative corporation".

(2) Limitation where non-member customer — If a taxpayer has not made allocations in proportion to patronage in respect of all of the taxpayer's customers of the year, at the same rate, with appropriate differences for different types, classes, grades or qualities of goods, products or services, the amount that may be deducted by the taxpayer under subsection (1) is an amount equal to the lesser of

(a) the total of the payments mentioned in that subsection, and

(b) the total of

(i) the part of the income of the taxpayer for the year attributable to business done with members, and

(ii) the allocations in proportion to patronage made to non-member customers of the year.

Related Provisions: 87(2)(g.5) — Amalgamation — continuing corporation; 135(2.1) — Carryforward.

History: The opening words of subsec. 135(2) amended by 2005, c. 19, subsec. 32(3), applicable in respect of payments made by a taxpayer after March 22, 2004. The opening words formerly read:

(2) Notwithstanding subsection (1), if the taxpayer has not made allocations in proportion to patronage in respect of all the taxpayer's customers of the year at the same rate, with appropriate differences for different types or classes of goods, products or services, or classes, grades or qualities thereof, the amount that may be deducted under subsection (1) is an amount equal to the lesser of

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 135.

(2.1) Deduction carried over — Where, in a taxation year ending after 1985, all or a portion of a payment made by a taxpayer pursuant to an allocation in proportion to patronage to the taxpayer's customers who are members is not deductible in computing the taxpayer's income for the year because of the application of subsection (2) (in this subsection referred to as the "undeducted amount"), there may be deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for a subsequent taxation year, an amount equal to the lesser of

(a) the undeducted amount, except to the extent that that amount was deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for any preceding taxation year, and

(b) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the taxpayer's income for the subsequent taxation year (computed without reference to this subsection) attributable to business done with the taxpayer's customers of that year who are members

exceeds

(ii) the amount deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for the subsequent taxation year by virtue of subsection (1) in respect of payments made by the taxpayer pursuant to allocations in proportion to patronage to the taxpayer's customers of that year who are members.

Related Provisions: 87(2)(g.5) — Amalgamation — continuing corporation.

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 135.

(3) Amount to be deducted or withheld from payment to customer — Subject to subsection 135.1(6), a taxpayer who makes at any particular time in a calendar year a payment pursuant to an allocation in proportion to patronage to a person who is resident in Canada and is not exempt from tax under section 149 shall, notwithstanding any agreement or any law to the contrary, deduct or withhold from the payment an amount equal to 15% of the lesser of the amount of the payment and the amount, if any, by which

(a) the total of the amount of the payment and the amounts of all other payments pursuant to allocations in proportion to patronage made by the taxpayer to that person in the calendar year and before the particular time

exceeds

(b) $100,

and forthwith remit that amount to the Receiver General on behalf of that person on account of that person's tax under this Part.

History: The opening words of subsec. 135(3) amended by 2006, c. 4, subsec. 79(2), applicable after 2005. The opening words formerly read:

(3) Where at any particular time in a calendar year and after 1971 a payment pursuant to an allocation in proportion to patronage is made by a taxpayer to a person who is resident in Canada and is not exempt from tax under section 149, the taxpayer shall, notwithstanding any agreement or any law to the contrary, deduct or withhold therefrom an amount equal to 15% of the lesser of the amount of the payment and the amount, if any, by which

"allocation in proportion to patronage" for a taxation year means an amount credited by a taxpayer to a customer of that year on terms that the customer is entitled to or will receive payment thereof, computed at a rate in relation to the quantity, quality or value of the goods or products acquired, marketed, handled, dealt in or sold, or services rendered by the taxpayer from, on behalf of or to the customer, whether as principal or as agent of the customer or otherwise, with appropriate differences in the rate for different classes, grades or qualities thereof, if

(a) the amount was credited

(i) within the year or within 12 months thereafter, and

(ii) at the same rate in relation to quantity, quality or value aforesaid as the rate at which amounts were similarly credited to all other customers of that year who were members or to all other customers of that year, as the case may be, with appropriate differences aforesaid for different classes, grades or qualities, and

(b) the prospect that amounts would be so credited was held out by the taxpayer to the taxpayer's customers of that year who were members or non-member customers of that year, as the case may be;

Related Provisions: 135(1) — Deduction for allocations; 212(1)(g) — Withholding tax on allocations to non-residents.

"income of the taxpayer attributable to business done with members" of any taxation year means that proportion of the income of the taxpayer for the year (before making any deduction under this section) that the value of the goods or products acquired, marketed, handled, dealt in or sold or services rendered by the taxpayer from, on behalf of, or for members, is of the total value of goods or products acquired, marketed, handled, dealt in or sold or services rendered by the taxpayer from, on behalf of, or for all customers during the year;

"member" means a person who is entitled as a member or shareholder to full voting rights in the conduct of the affairs of the taxpayer (being a corporation) or of a corporation of which the taxpayer is a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation;

"non-member customer" means a customer who is not a member;

"payment" includes

(a) the issue of a certificate of indebtedness or shares of the taxpayer or of a corporation of which the taxpayer is a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation if the taxpayer or that corporation has in the year or within 12 months thereafter disbursed an amount of money equal to the total face value of all certificates or shares so issued in the course of redeeming or purchasing certificates of indebtedness or shares of the taxpayer or that corporation previously issued,

(b) the application by the taxpayer of an amount to a member's liability to the taxpayer (including, without restricting the generality of the foregoing, an amount applied in fulfilment of an obligation of the member to make a loan to the taxpayer and an amount applied on account of payment for shares issued to a member) pursuant to a by-law of the taxpayer, pursuant to statutory authority or at the request of the member, or

(c) the amount of a payment or transfer by the taxpayer that, under subsection 56(2), is required to be included in computing the income of a member.

History: The opening words of subsec. 135(4) amended by 2006, c. 4, subsec. 79(3), to add "and section 135.1", applicable after 2005.

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 135.

(5) Holding out prospect of allocations — For the purpose of this section a taxpayer shall be deemed to have held out the prospect that amounts would be credited to a customer of a taxation year by way of allocation in proportion to patronage, if

Proposed Amendment — 135.1(2)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Sept. 28, 2009:

Mr. Pierre Lessard, CA, MBA, PriceWaterhouseCoopers LLP, Montréal, QC

Dear Mr. Lessard:

I am writing in response to your letters of April 4, 2008 and April 21, 2009, and further to your discussions with members of my staff, regarding the rules relating to tax deferred patronage dividends paid by agricultural cooperative corporations and, in particular, the tax result that occurs upon a reorganization of the share capital of such an agricultural cooperative corporation.

Cooperatives can distribute earnings to their members in the form of patronage dividends, which are paid in proportion to the amount of business the member has undertaken with the cooperative. For income tax purposes, in computing its income, a cooperative may deduct such patronage dividends paid to its members, unlike regular dividends which are not deductible. In turn, the tax treatment of a patronage dividend in the hands of a cooperative member depends upon which of two separate regimes applies in respect of the dividend. The first, set out in section 135 of the Income Tax Act (Act), applies in respect of ordinary patronage dividends. Ordinary patronage dividends received (other than in respect of consumer goods and services) by a cooperative member must be included in the recipient's income and are taxable in the year they are received.

The second regime, set out in section 135.1 of the Act, applies in respect of tax deferred patronage dividends. This second regime is more generous than the first in that it allows qualifying members of certain agricultural cooperatives to defer the inclusion of the patronage dividend until the subsequent redemption, cancellation or acquisition by the cooperative of the tax deferred cooperative share in respect of which the dividend relates.

Your client, an agricultural cooperative corporation, wishes to undertake a reorganization of its share capital under which its members would receive a share that meets the criteria in paragraphs (b) to (d) of the definition of tax deferred cooperative share in subsection 135.1(1) in exchange for each tax deferred cooperative share tendered for cancellation. I understand that the purpose of the exchange is to simplify the share structure and reduce the number of classes of shares outstanding. No other consideration would be received by the member in exchange for the tax deferred cooperative shares tendered for cancellation. The rights, privileges, conditions, restrictions, limitations, paid up capital and redemption value attributable to each tax deferred cooperative share tendered for cancellation would be the same as the rights, privileges, conditions, restrictions, limitations, paid up capital and redemption value attributable to the share received in exchange for that tax deferred cooperative share.

You have concluded that, under the existing tax law, each eligible member who tenders a tax deferred cooperative share for cancellation under the terms of the reorganization will be required to include an amount in income in consequence of the disposition of the share. As a result, you have requested an amendment which would allow the tax deferral to continue until such time as the member disposes the share received on the exchange.

From a policy perspective, it appears appropriate for an eligible member of an agricultural cooperative corporation to defer the income inclusion that would otherwise be required under subsection 135.1(2) when the share capital of an agricultural cooperative is reorganized in a manner described above.

In the event that an amendment is made to accommodate such a further deferral, we further agree that it would be consistent with the underlying policy to provide an exemption from the obligation to withhold under subsection 135.1(7) of the Act on the exchange.

Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended such that subsections 135.1(2) and (7) would not apply upon the disposition of a tax deferred cooperative share where the following conditions are met:

- the disposition arises as part of a reorganization of the agricultural cooperative corporation's share capital;
- the eligible member disposes of all of their shares of a particular class as part of the reorganization;
- the only consideration received by an eligible member in the course of the reorganization in exchange for the disposition of tax deferred cooperative shares issued by an agricultural cooperative corporation are shares of the same agricultural cooperative corporation and the shares meet the criteria in paragraphs (b) to (d) of the definition of tax deferred cooperative share in subsection 135.1(1); and
- the cumulative total paid-up capital and cumulative total amount that the eligible member is entitled to receive on a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of the new shares equals the cumulative total amount of paid-up capital and the cumulative total amount that the eligible member is entitled to receive on a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of the old shares.

Furthermore, if our recommendation were to be accepted, we would also recommend that the amendment be effective in respect of redemptions, cancellations and acquisitions that occur after the date of this letter.

While I cannot offer any assurance that our recommendation in this matter will be accepted, I hope our statement of intent in this letter will be helpful in responding to your concern.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard Lalonde, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Related Provisions: 87(2)(s) — Amalgamation — continuing corporation.

(3) Deductibility limit — The amount that may be deducted under subsection 135(1) for a particular taxation year by an agricultural cooperative corporation in respect of payments, in the form of tax deferred cooperative shares, made pursuant to allocations in proportion to patronage shall not exceed 85% of the agricultural cooperative corporation's income of the taxation year attributable to business done with members.

(4) Deemed disposition — A taxpayer who holds a tax deferred cooperative share is deemed to have disposed of the share, for proceeds of disposition equal to the amount that would, if this Act were read without reference to this section, have been included under subsection 135(7), in respect of the share, in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxation year in which the share was issued, at the earliest time at which

(a) the paid-up capital of the share is reduced otherwise than by way of a redemption of the share; or

(b) the taxpayer pledges, or for civil law hypothecates, assigns or in any way alienates the share as security for indebtedness of any kind.

Related Provisions: 135.1(5) — Reacquisition.

(5) Reacquisition — A taxpayer who is deemed by subsection (4) to have disposed at any time of a tax deferred cooperative share is deemed to have reacquired the share, immediately after that time, at a cost equal to the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition from that disposition.

(6) Exclusion from withholding obligation — Subsection 135(3) does not apply to a payment pursuant to an allocation in proportion to patronage that is paid by an agricultural cooperative corporation through the issuance of a tax deferred cooperative share.

(7) Withholding on redemption — If a share that was, at the time it was issued, a tax deferred cooperative share of an agricultural cooperative corporation is redeemed, acquired or cancelled by the agricultural cooperative corporation, or by a person or partnership with whom the agricultural cooperative corporation does not deal at arm's length, the agricultural cooperative corporation or the person or partnership, as the case may be, shall withhold and forthwith remit to the Receiver General, on account of the shareholder's tax liability, 15% from the amount otherwise payable on the redemption, acquisition or cancellation.

Proposed Amendment — 135.1(7)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, March 4, 2008:

Mr. Benoit Gagnon, Chief Financial Officer, Agropur coopérative

Dear Mr. Gagnon:

I am writing further to this Division's letter to you of April 25, 2007, and Jocelyn Losiers' subsequent discussions with members of my staff, regarding the rules relating to tax-deferred patronage dividends paid by agricultural cooperative corporations and, in particular, the obligation to withhold 15% on the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of a tax-deferred cooperative share.

Cooperatives can distribute earnings to their members in the form of patronage dividends, which are paid in proportion to the amount of business the member has undertaken with the cooperative. For income tax purposes, in computing its income, a cooperative may deduct such patronage dividends paid to its members, unlike regular dividends which are not deductible. In turn, the tax treatment of a patronage dividend in the hands of a cooperative member depends upon which of two separate regimes applies in respect of the dividend.

The first, set out in section 135 of the Income Tax Act (Act), applies in respect of ordinary patronage dividends. Ordinary patronage dividends received (other than in respect of consumer goods and services) by a cooperative member must be included in the recipient's income and are taxable in the year they are received.

The second regime, set out in section 135.1 of the Act, applies in respect of tax-deferred patronage dividends. This second regime is more generous than the first in that it allows qualifying members of certain agricultural cooperatives to defer the inclusion of the patronage dividend until the subsequent redemption, cancellation or acquisition by the cooperative of the tax-deferred cooperative share in respect of which the dividend relates.

Under the ordinary patronage dividend regime the cooperative is generally required to withhold and remit to the government an amount on behalf of the member's tax liability in respect of the patronage dividend. However, an exemption from this withholding requirement is provided when an ordinary patronage dividend is made to a person who is exempt from tax on its taxable income under section 149 of the Act. A requirement to withhold taxes is also imposed under the tax-deferred patronage dividend regime at the time of the redemption, cancellation or acquisition by the cooperative of the tax-deferred cooperative share, but, as you note, a similar exemption from the withholding requirements is not currently provided in respect of the redemption, cancellation or acquisition of shares held by a person who is exempt from tax on its taxable income under section 149 of the Act.

In an earlier letter to this Department, you indicated that agricultural cooperative members may prefer to hold their tax-deferred cooperative shares inside their RRSPs (and, I would gather by extension, an RRIF). To do so, these members would have to transfer the share to the RRSP or RRIF after having acquired it from cooperative. This is because a share will only qualify as a tax-deferred cooperative share if it issued to an eligible member, which does not include RRSPs or RRIFs. As a result, I would expect that an RRSP would be unlikely to hold tax-deferred cooperative shares given that the transfer of the share to an RRSP or an RRIF would be a taxable disposition, negating any tax advantage of the deferral provided for by the tax-deferred patronage dividend rules. However, I understand from the discussions you have had with my staff that some members may nonetheless wish to make such a transfer to their RRSPs or RRIFs.

You have, therefore, recommended that subsection 135.1(7) of the Act be amended to provide for an exemption from the obligation to withhold in respect of a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of a tax-deferred cooperative share when the amount is paid to a trust governed by an RRSP or RRIF that is exempt from tax under section 149 of the Act. While, as indicated above, we believe that it will be rare for this situation to occur, we consider the requested amendment to be consistent with the underlying policy objective of the provision. As a result, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended to provide such an exemption. Furthermore, if our recommendation were accepted, we would also recommend that the amendment be effective in respect of redemptions, cancellations and acquisitions that occur after 2007.

While I cannot offer any assurance that our recommendation in this matter will be accepted, I hope our statement of intent in this letter will be helpful in responding to your concern.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard Lalonde, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — 136(1)

136. (1) Cooperative not private corporation — Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, a cooperative corporation that would, if this Act were read without reference to this section, be a private corporation is deemed not to be a private corporation except for the purposes of sections 15.1, 123.4, 125, 125.1, 127, 127.1, 152 and 157, the definition "mark-to-market property" in subsection 142.2(1) and the definition "small business corporation" in subsection 248(1) as it applies for the purpose of paragraph 39(1)(c).

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 132(1), will amend subsec. 136(1) to read as above, applicable to 2001 et seq.

Technical Notes: Subsection 136(1) provides that a cooperative corporation that would otherwise be a private corporation is treated as a private corporation for the purposes of specified provisions. The subsection is amended to include among those provisions section 123.4, which in effect provides reductions in corporate tax rates. This subsection is amended, for the 2001 and subsequent taxation years, to provide that a cooperative corporation that otherwise qualifies as a Canadian-controlled private corporation (CCPC) may use the special rate reduction provided for CCPCs.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, March 20, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

Thank you for your letter of February 26, 2001, regarding the application of proposed section 123.4 of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") to co-operative corporations.

If it is enacted as proposed, section 123.4 will provide both a general deduction from tax otherwise payable, available to most types of corporation, and a special deduction for Canadian-controlled private corporations (CCPCs). You have asked whether a co-operative corporation could also be a CCPC for the purposes of these new deductions. You identify two important results that follow from the answer to that question. First, a co-operative corporation that is a CCPC will determine its "full rate taxable income" using paragraph (b) of the definition of that term in proposed subsection 123.4(1); one that is not a CCPC will use paragraph (a). Second, a co-operative corporation that is a CCPC may be able to use the proposed 7% deduction from tax on up to $100,000 of active business income in excess of the $200,000 limit for the section 125 "small business deduction".

As you point out, although subsection 136(1) of the Act deems co-operative corporations not to be private corporations for most purposes, that deeming rule does not apply for the purposes of a number of specified provisions, including section 125 of the Act. A co-operative corporation that meets the other relevant requirements is thus not precluded from being a CCPC under the definition in subsection 125(7), nor from taking advantage of the small business deduction itself.

Given the close connection between the new special deduction for CCPCs and the existing small business deduction, in policy terms it seems clear that a co-operative corporation that is a CCPC under section 125 ought also to be treated as such for the purposes of proposed section 123.4. I agree, however, that it may not be obvious from the current version of subsection 136(1) that this is indeed the case.

To avoid any possible confusion, we are therefore prepared to recommend the addition, to the list in subsection 136(1), of a reference to proposed section 123.4. This change, if approved by the Minister of Finance, would be included in a package of draft technical amendments scheduled for release in the coming months.

Thank you for bringing this matter to our attention.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — 136(1)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, March 16, 2009:

Ms. Gail Ellis, Corporate Treasurer, Amalgamated Dairies Limited, Summerside, P.E.I.

Dear Ms. Ellis:

Thank you for your correspondence of February 23, 2007 in which you recommend that cooperative corporations be treated as Canadian-controlled private corporations (CCPCs) for the purposes of the enhanced dividend tax credit under subsection 89(1) of the Income Tax Act (Act). I apologize for the delay of this reply.

From a policy perspective, it is intended that cooperative corporations be permitted to be private corporations (and thus in some cases, CCPCs) for the purposes of subsection 89(1). By way of background, one of the policy reasons for the enhanced dividend tax credit is to minimize the effect of double taxation in our existing corporate tax system. Under the enhanced dividend tax credit for eligible dividends, subsection 89(1) allows a CCPC's income that was taxed at the full corporate income tax rate to be included in its general rate income pool (GRIP) at the end of a taxation year. Generally, a positive balance in a CCPC's GRIP at the end of a taxation year reflects the amount available for eligible dividend designation by the CCPC.

Subsection 136(1) of the Act deems a cooperative corporation not to be a private corporation, except for certain purposes, including for the purposes of the small business deduction. You have indicated that a cooperative corporation that is in a position to benefit from the small business deduction (pursuant to one of the exceptions under subsection 136(1)) should also be in a position to benefit from having a GRIP.

We agree with this view and are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance the addition, to the list of exceptions in subsection 136(1), of a reference to subsection 89(1). If our recommendation is acted upon, we anticipate that the amendments would be included in a future technical bill. While I cannot offer any assurance that the Minister will agree with our recommendation, I hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard Lalonde, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(a) the statute by or under which it was incorporated, its charter, articles of association or by-laws or its contracts with its members or its members and customers held out the prospect that payments would be made to them in proportion to patronage;

(b) none of its members (except other cooperative corporations) have more than one vote in the conduct of the affairs of the corporation; and

(c) at least 90% of its members are individuals, other cooperative corporations, or corporations or partnerships that carry on the business of farming, and at least 90% of its shares, if any, are held by those persons or partnerships.

Proposed Amendment — 136(2)(c), (d) [temporary]

(c) at least 90% of its members are individuals, other cooperative corporations, or corporations or partnerships that carry on the business of farming; and

(d) at least 90% of its shares, if any, are held by members described in paragraph (c) or by trusts governed by registered retirement savings plans, registered retirement income funds or registered education savings plans, the annuitants or subscribers under which are members described in that paragraph.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 132(2), will amend para. 136(2)(c) to read as above and add para. (d), applicable to 1998 et seq.

Technical Notes: Subsection 136(2) sets out conditions that a corporation must meet in order to be a cooperative corporation. The condition in current paragraph 136(2)(c) has two parts: at least 90% of its members must be individuals, other cooperative corporations, or corporations or partnerships that carry on the business of farming; and at least 90% of its shares, if any, must be held by those persons or partnerships.

The second part of this condition is modified to accommodate cases where the shares of a cooperative are held not only by the members themselves, but also by their registered plans (RRSPs, RRIAs, or RESPs). If shares are held by a trust that is governed by such a plan, provided a member of the cooperative is the plan's subscriber or annuitant, as the case may be, those shares will be counted in the same way as if they were held by a member personally.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 11, 1999:

Dear [xxx]:

This is in response to your letter dated June 4, 1999 to Len Farber respecting paragraph 136(2)(c) of the Income Tax Act and subsection 4900(12) of the Income Tax Regulations. Paragraph 136(2)(c) of the Act provides, as part of the definition of "cooperative corporation" in section 136, that at least 90% of a cooperative's shares must be held by members who are individuals, other cooperative corporations or corporations or partnerships that carry on the business of farming. Subsection 4900(12) of the Regulations provides that shares of specified cooperative corporations are qualified investments that may be held in an RRSP. You are concerned that the ability of a cooperative's members to hold their shares in RRSPs could, because the RRSPs may not be "members", cause the corporation to lose its cooperative status under section 136.

You have been advised by officials of the Tax Legislation Division that an amendment to paragraph 136(2)(c) is anticipated which would ensure that a cooperative does not lose its status as a consequence of its members contributing their shares to their RRSPs. You are seeking confirmation in writing of this information.

I can confirm that we intend to recommend that paragraph 136(2)(c) of the Act be amended to enable individual members of a cooperative to contribute their shares to their own RRSPs without any adverse consequences to the cooperative under the Act. The details of the amendment to be recommended remain to be developed. In general terms, however, I would foresee it being structured either as a rule which attributed the shares held by an RRSP to the annuitant, or which reformed paragraph 136(2)(c) to provide that shares contributed to an RRSP by a cooperative member would be treated as shares held by individuals who are members of a cooperative. We will recommend that this amendment apply to the 1998 and subsequent taxation years.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Emeweine, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — 136(2)(d)

(d) at least 90% of its shares, if any, are held by members described in paragraph (c) or by trusts governed by registered retirement savings plans, registered retirement income funds, registered education savings plans or TFSAs, the annuitants, holders or subscribers under which are members described in that paragraph.

Application: The July 14, 2008 draft legislation, s. 24, will amend para. 136(2)(d) to read as above, applicable to 2009 et seq.

Technical Notes: Subsection 136(2) sets out conditions that a corporation must meet in order to be a cooperative corporation. The condition in paragraph 136(2)(d) requires at least 90% of the corporation's shares, if any, to be held by its members who are individuals, other cooperative corporations, or corporations or partnerships that carry on the business of farming. For this purpose, any shares that are held by the members indirectly through their RRSPs, RRIAs or registered education savings plans (RESPs) are counted in the same way as though held by the members directly.

Paragraph 136(2)(d) is amended to extend the special rule for indirect shareholdings so that it applies to shares held in TFSAs.

History: The opening words of subsec. 136(2) amended by 2006, c. 4, s. 81, applicable after June 2005. The opening words formerly read:

(a) there shall be deducted from the amount that would, but for this subsection, be deductible under section 112 in computing a payer's taxable income for a taxation year such portion of the total referred to in paragraph (5.1)(a) as the payer allocated to its members under subsection (5.1) in respect of the year;

(b) there shall be included in computing the income of a payer for a taxation year an amount equal to that portion of the amount referred to in paragraphs (5.1)(b) and (c) that the payer allocated under subsection (5.1) in respect of the year to its members; and

(c) each amount allocated under subsection (5.1) to a member may be deducted by that member in computing the member's taxable income for its taxation year that includes the last day of the payer's taxation year in respect of which the amount was so allocated.

(6) Definitions — In this section,

"allocation in proportion to borrowing" for a taxation year means an amount credited by a credit union to a person who was a member of the credit union in the year on terms that the member is entitled to or will receive payment thereof, computed at a rate in relation to

(a) the amount of interest payable by the member on money borrowed from the credit union, or

(b) the amount of money borrowed by the member from the credit union,

A is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of any debt owing by the credit union to a member thereof or of any other obligation of the credit union to pay an amount to a member thereof, that was outstanding at the end of the year, including, for greater certainty, the amount of any deposit standing to the credit of a member of the credit union in the records of the credit union, but excluding, for greater certainty, any share in the credit union of any member thereof, and

B is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, as of the end of the year, of any share in the credit union of any member thereof;

I.T. Application Rules: 58(3.2) (reduction in maximum cumulative reserve to reflect level at end of 1971).

"member" of a credit union means a person who is recorded as a member on the records of the credit union and is entitled to participate in and use the services of the credit union.

Proposed Amendment — 137(6)"member"

"member", of a credit union, means

(a) a person who is recorded as a member on the records of the credit union and is entitled to participate in and use the services of the credit union, and

(b) a registered retirement savings plan, a registered retirement income fund or a registered education savings plan, the annuitant or subscriber under which is a person described in paragraph (a).

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 133(1), will amend the definition "member" in subsec. 137(6) to read as above, applicable to 1996 et seq.

Technical Notes: Section 137 provides rules that apply to credit unions. Among the definitions set out in subsection 137(1) is "member," meaning essentially a member of record who is entitled to the services of the credit union. This definition is amended, for the 1996 and subsequent taxation years, to treat as a member a registered retirement savings plan, registered retirement income fund, or registered education savings plan, provided that the annuitant or subscriber under the plan is a person who meets the existing definition of "member".

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 11, 1999: See under 136(2)(c), (d).

Related Provisions: Reg. 1404(2)"acquisition costs"(a)(iii.1) — Insurer established to provide insurance to credit union members — policy reserves.

(7) Credit union not private corporation — Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, a credit union that would, but for this section, be a private corporation shall be deemed not to be a private corporation except for the purposes of sections 123.1, 125, 127, 127.1, 152 and 157 and the definition "small business corporation" in subsection 248(1) as it applies for the purposes of paragraph 39(1)(c).

Proposed Amendment — 137(7)

(7) Credit union not private corporation — Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, a credit union that would, if this Act were read without reference to this section, be a private corporation is deemed not to be a private corporation except for the purposes of sections 123.1, 123.4, 125, 127, 127.1, 152 and 157 and the definition “small business corporation” in subsection 248(1) as it applies for the purpose of paragraph 39(1)(c).

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 133(2), will amend subsec. 137(7) to read as above, applicable to 2001 et seq.

Technical Notes: Subsection 137(7) provides that a credit union that would otherwise be a private corporation is treated as a private corporation for the purposes of specified provisions of the Act. The subsection is amended to include among those provisions section 123.4, which in effect provides reductions in corporate tax rates. This amendment, which applies to the 2001 and subsequent taxation years, provides that a credit union that otherwise qualifies as a Canadian-controlled private corporation (CCPC) may use the special rate reduction provided for CCPCs.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 20, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

I am writing, with the concurrence of Mr. Roger Champagne of the Fédération des caisses Desjardins du Québec, to provide you with the enclosed copy of my response to a recent letter from Mr. Champagne. In my response, I agree to recommend an Income Tax Act amendment to allow a credit union to be treated as a private corporation for purposes of the new deductions from tax otherwise payable, found in section 123.4 of the Act.

As this is a matter that may be of interest to many of your members, it seemed appropriate that you be advised of our intentions in this regard.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Emeweine, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 20, 2001:

Monsieur,

La présente fait suite à votre lettre du 5 novembre dernier au sujet de l'application [xxx] du nouvel article 123.4 de la Loi de l'impôt sur le revenu (« Loi »). Cet article, qui a pour effet de réduire l'impôt que doit payer une société sur une partie de son revenu, que l'on appelle « revenu imposable au taux complet », s'applique différemment aux sociétés privées sous contrôle canadien (SPCC) qu'aux autres sociétés. En particulier, il prévoit une déduction accélérée de l'impôt par ailleurs payable par une SPCC sur un certain montant de son revenu tiré d'une entreprise exploitée activement.

Comme vous l'indiquiez, le paragraphe [xxx] de la Loi traite une [xxx] comme une société privée à certaines fins, notamment en ce qui concerne la déduction accordée aux petites entreprises prévue à l'article 125. Le paragraphe [xxx] ne s'applique cependant pas explicitement aux fins prévues au paragraphe 123.4. Vous avez donc demandé que nous recommandions une modification pour assurer qu'[xxx] est considérée comme une société privée aux fins de l'article 123.4 et qu'elle peut donc, en supposant que les autres critères pertinents sont respectés, profiter de la déduction accélérée consentie aux SPCC.

Selon moi, une telle mesure serait appropriée sur le plan de la politique, et nous recommanderons qu'elle soit incluse dans les prochaines modifications techniques. Le changement s'appliquerait aux années d'imposition 2001 et suivantes, de manière à coïncider avec l'instauration de l'article 123.4. Je vous soulignerai aussi que le « revenu imposable au taux complet » [xxx], au sens de l'article 123.4, exclut les montants visés par la déduction additionnelle prévue au paragraphe [xxx] de la Loi, et que nous ne proposerons donc aucun changement à cet égard.

Directeur, Division de la législation de l'impôt, Direction de la politique de l'impôt, Brian Emeweine

137.1 (1) Amounts included in income of deposit insurance corporation — For the purpose of computing the income for a taxation year of a taxpayer that is a deposit insurance corporation, the following rules apply:

(a) the corporation's income shall, except as otherwise provided in this section, be computed in accordance with the rules applicable in computing income for the purposes of this Part; and

(b) there shall be included in computing the corporation's income such of the following amounts as are applicable:

(i) the total of profits or gains made in the year by the corporation in respect of bonds, debentures, mortgages, hypothecary claims, notes or other similar obligations owned by it that were disposed of by it in the year, and

(ii) the total of each such portion of each amount, if any, by which the principal amount, at the time it was acquired by the corporation, of a bond, debenture, mortgage, hypothecary claim, note or other similar obligation owned by the corporation at the end of the year exceeds the cost to the corporation of acquiring it as was included by the corporation in computing its profit for the year.

(2) Amounts not included in income — The amount of any premiums or assessments received or receivable by a taxpayer that is a deposit insurance corporation from its member institutions in a taxation year shall not be included in computing its income.

Proposed Amendment — 137.1(2)

(2) Amounts not included in income — The following amounts shall not be included in computing the income of a deposit insurance corporation for a taxation year:

(a) any premium or assessment received, or receivable, by the corporation in the year from a member institution; and

(b) any amount received by the corporation in the year from another deposit insurance corporation to the extent that that amount can reasonably be considered to have been paid out of amounts referred to in paragraph (a) received by that other deposit insurance corporation in any taxation year.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 134(1), will amend subsec. 137.1(2) to read as above, applicable to 1998 et seq.

Technical Notes: Section 137.1 provides rules for the taxation of deposit insurance corporations (DICs), including rules that affect the computation of income. In general terms, the premiums that a member institution pays to a DIC are deductible in computing the member's income and are not included in computing the income of the DIC, while any assistance that the DIC provides to the member or the member's depositors is not deductible for the DIC and is included in computing the member's income.

In certain circumstances, two or more DICs may share responsibilities toward a group of members. In such a case, it may be necessary for one DIC to pay to another an amount in respect of premiums. To ensure the appropriate tax consequences of such a payment, subsections 137.1(2) and (4) are amended. New paragraph 137.1(2)(b) excludes from the income of a DIC any amount it receives from another DIC, to the extent the amount can reasonably be considered to have been paid out of premiums or assessments received or receivable by the other DIC from its member institutions. New paragraph 137.1(4)(d), on the other hand, precludes the paying DIC from deducting the amount in computing its own income.

Related Provisions: 137.1(4) — Limitation on deduction; 137.1(11) — Deductions for payments by member institution.

(b) the total of each such portion of each amount, if any, by which the cost to the corporation of acquiring a bond, debenture, mortgage, hypothecary claim, note or other similar obligation owned by the corporation at the end of the year exceeds the principal amount of the bond, debenture, mortgage, hypothecary claim, note or other similar obligation, as the case may be, at the time it was so acquired as was deducted by the corporation in computing its profit for the year;

(c) [Repealed under former Act]

(d) the total of all expenses incurred by the taxpayer in collecting premiums or assessments from member institutions;

(e) the total of all expenses incurred by the taxpayer

(i) in the performance of its duties as curator of a bank, or as liquidator or receiver of a member institution when duly appointed as such a curator, liquidator or receiver,

(ii) in the course of making or causing to be made such inspections as may reasonably be considered to be appropriate for the purposes of assessing the solvency or financial stability of a member institution, and

(iii) in supervising or administering a member institution in financial difficulty; and

(f) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount that is not otherwise deductible by the taxpayer for the year or any other taxation year and that is

(i) an amount paid by the taxpayer in the year pursuant to a legal obligation to pay interest on borrowed money used

(A) to lend money to, or otherwise provide assistance to, a member institution in financial difficulty,

(B) to assist in the payment of any losses suffered by members or depositors of a member institution in financial difficulty,

(D) to acquire property from a member institution in financial difficulty, or

(E) to acquire shares of the capital stock of a member institution in financial difficulty, or

(ii) an amount paid by the taxpayer in the year pursuant to a legal obligation to pay interest on an amount that would be deductible under subparagraph (i) if it were paid in the year.

(4) Limitation on deduction — No deduction shall be made in computing the income for a taxation year of a taxpayer that is a deposit insurance corporation in respect of

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 135(1), will amend subsec. 138(2) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after 1999.

Technical Notes: Subsection 138(2) provides rules for the purpose of computing the income of a life insurer resident in Canada where the life insurer carries on an insurance business in Canada and in a country other than Canada. The subsection provides that the insurer's income from carrying on an insurance business is the amount of its income from carrying in the insurance business in Canada computed in accordance with the Act. As well, the subsection provides that the insurer's taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses from property used or held in the course of carrying on an insurance business is the insurer's taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses from designated insurance property.

Subsection 138(2) is being amended to extend its application to non-resident insurer's that carry on an insurance business in Canada. As well, it is being amended to provide, for greater certainty, the following:

1. In computing a multinational insurer's income from an insurance business carried on by it in Canada, no amount is to be included in respect of the insurer's gross investment revenue for a taxation year derived from property used or held in the course of carrying on an insurance business that is not designated insurance property of the insurer. Subsection 138(9) provides that in computing a multinational insurer's income from an insurance business carried on by it in Canada the insurer must include its gross investment revenue for the year from its designated insurance property for the year plus the amount prescribed in respect of the insurer for the year. Designated insurance property is defined in section 2400 of the Income Tax Regulations.

2. In computing a multinational insurer's taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses for the year from the disposition of property used or held in the course of carrying on an insurance business there is to be included the insurer's taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses from dispositions of its designated insurance property for the year. It also provides that the insurer's taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses for the year from the disposition of property used or held in the course of carrying on an insurance business that is its designated insurance property for the year are not to be included in computing a multinational insurer's taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses for the year.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 7, 2001:

Dear [xxx]

We are responding to your letter of March 23, 2001 seeking confirmation that we are intending to recommend to the Minister of Finance (the "Minister") amendments to the Income Tax Act (the "Act") to ensure that gross investment revenue is included in computing the income of multinational life insurers resident in Canada (and non-resident multinational insurers) from carrying on an insurance business in Canada only to the extent such gross investment revenue is derived from "designated insurance property", as defined in the Act.

We can confirm that we are intending to recommend to the Minister that subsections 138(2) and (9) of the Act be amended. The amendment will clarify that only the gross investment revenue derived by the insurer from "designated insurance property" of the insurer in respect of the insurance business carried on in Canada will be included in the income of the insurer from that insurance business. If adopted it will be recommended that the amendments be effective for taxation years ending after 1999.

We hope this addresses your concerns.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Jan. 8, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

We are responding to your letter of October 11th, 2000, to Mr. Wally Conway concerning sections 95 and 138 of the Income Tax Act (the Act).

In your letter you expressed concern about the recent decision of the Tax Court of Canada in Munich Reinsurance Company (Canada Branch) v. The Queen [affirmed by the Federal Court of Appeal, [2002] 1 C.T.C. 199 — ed.], where it interpreted subsection 138(9) as not being a complete code with respect to the inclusion of investment income in a multinational insurer's income from carrying on an insurance business in Canada. Instead the court applied the general rules in the Act in determining whether income from a property was income of the insurer from its insurance business carried on in Canada.

You are concerned that, as a result of this decision, the intent of subsections 138(2) and (9) will be ignored and a multinational insurer will be required to include in its income from an insurance business carried on in Canada, its gross investment revenue from investment property that is not designated insurance property in respect of that business but is property factually used or held in that business. Consequently, you are requesting clarifying amendments to subsections 138(2) and (9) of the Act.

We are sympathetic to this request and will recommend to the Minister of Finance that subsections 138(2) and (9) be amended. The amendment will clarify that only the gross investment revenue derived by the insurer from "designated insurance property" of the insurer in respect of the insurance business carried on in Canada will be included in the income of the insurer from that insurance business. The amendments will be effective for taxation years ending after 1999.

Thank you for bringing these matters to our attention.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Repeal — 138(11.91)(f)

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 135(3), will repeal para. 138(11.91)(f), applicable to taxation years that end after 1999.

Technical Notes: Subsection 138(11.91) provides rules for the purpose of computing the income of a non-resident insurer that at any time in a particular taxation year commences to carry on business in Canada or that ceases to be exempt from tax under Part I of the Act.

Paragraph 138(11.91)(f) of the English Version of the Act applies where the non-resident insurer's capital cost of a depreciable property exceeds the property's fair market value immediately before the commencement of the particular taxation year. To ensure that on a later disposition of the property the non-resident insurer is subject to recapture of any excess capital cost allowance claimed before the particular taxation year, this paragraph preserves the property's capital cost, and treats the excess as having been allowed as capital cost allowance.

Since it is inappropriate to provide for the recapture of capital cost allowance that was claimed when the business was not carried on in Canada or when the non-resident insurer was exempt from tax under Part I, paragraph 138(11.91)(f) of the English version of the Act is repealed.

138.1 (1) Rules relating to segregated funds — In respect of life insurance policies for which all or any portion of an insurer’s reserves vary in amount depending on the fair market value of a specified group of properties (in this section referred to as a “segregated fund”), for the purposes of this Part, the following rules apply:

(a) an inter vivos trust (in this section referred to as the “related segregated fund trust”) is deemed to be created at the time that is the later of

(i) the day that the segregated fund is created, and

(ii) the day on which the insurer’s 1978 taxation year commences, and to continue in existence throughout the period during which the fund determines any portion of the benefits under those policies that vary in amount depending on the fair market value of the property in the segregated fund (in this section referred to as “segregated fund policies”);

(b) property that has been allocated to and that remains a part of the segregated fund, and any income that has accrued on that property is deemed to be the property and income of the related segregated fund trust and not to be the property and income of the insurer;

(c) the insurer is deemed to be

(i) the trustee who has ownership or control of the related segregated fund trust property,

(ii) a resident of Canada in respect of the related segregated fund trust property used or held by it in the course of carrying on the insurer’s life insurance business in Canada, and

(iii) a non-resident of Canada in respect of the related segregated fund trust property not used or held by it in the course of carrying on the insurer’s life insurance business in Canada;

(d) where at a particular time there is property in the segregated fund that was not funded with premiums paid under a segregated fund policy,

(i) the insurer is deemed to have an interest in the related segregated fund trust that is not in respect of any particular property or source of income, and

(ii) the cost at any time of that interest to the insurer is deemed to be the total of

(A) for property of the trust at that time allocated by the insurer to the segregated fund prior to 1978, the amount that would be its adjusted cost base to the insurer if the interest had been a capital property at all relevant times

prior to 1978 and if the rules in this section had been applicable for the taxation years after 1971 and before 1978, and

(B) for property of the trust at that time allocated by the insurer to the segregated fund after 1977, the fair market value of the property at the time it was last allocated to the segregated fund by the insurer;

(e) where at any particular time there is property in the segregated fund that was funded with a portion of the premiums paid before that time under a segregated fund policy,

(i) the respective segregated fund policyholder is deemed to have an interest in the related segregated fund trust that is not in respect of any particular property or source of income,

(ii) the cost of that interest is deemed to be the amount that is the total of

(A) the amount that would be its adjusted cost base to the insurer at December 31, 1977 if the interest had been a capital property at all relevant times prior to 1978 and if the rules in this section (if subsection (3) were read without reference to the expressions “or capital loss” and “or loss”) had been applicable for taxation years after 1971 and before 1978, and

(B) the total of amounts each of which is that portion of a premium paid before that time and after the day referred to in subparagraph (a)(ii) under a segregated fund policy that was or is to be used by the insurer to fund property allocated to the segregated fund (other than the portion of the premium that is an acquisition fee), and

(iii) the portion of a premium included in a segregated fund is deemed not to be an amount paid in respect of a premium under the policy;

(f) the income of the related segregated fund trust is deemed for the purposes of subsections 104(6), (13) and (24) to be an amount that has become payable in the year to the beneficiaries under the segregated fund trust and the amount therefor in respect of any particular beneficiary is equal to the amount determined by reference to the terms and conditions of the segregated fund policy;

(g) where at a particular time the fair market value of property transferred by the insurer to the segregated fund results in an increase at that time in the portion of the insurer's reserves for a segregated fund policy held by a policyholder that vary with the fair market value of the segregated fund and a decrease in the portion of its reserves for the policy that do not so vary, the amount of that increase shall,

(i) for the purpose of the determination of H in the definition “adjusted cost basis” in subsection 148(9), be deemed to be proceeds of disposition that the policyholder became entitled to receive at that time,

(ii) for the purpose of computing the adjusted cost base to the policyholder of the policyholder's interest in the related segregated fund trust, be added at that time to the cost to the policyholder of that interest, and

(iii) for the purpose of computing the insurer's income, be deemed to be a payment under the terms and conditions of the policy at that time;

(h) where at a particular time the fair market value of property transferred by the insurer from the segregated fund results in an increase at that time in the portion of the insurer's reserves for a segregated fund policy that do not vary with the fair market value of the segregated fund and a decrease in the portion of its reserves for the policy that so vary, the amount of that increase shall, for the purpose of calculating the insurer's income, be deemed to be a premium received by the insurer at that time;

(i) where at a particular time the policyholder of a segregated fund policy disposes of all or a portion of the policyholder's interest in the related segregated fund trust, that proportion of the amount, if any, by which the acquisition fee with respect to the particular policy exceeds the total of amounts each of which is an amount determined under this paragraph with respect to the particular policy before that time, that

(i) the fair market value of the interest disposed of at that time

is of

is deemed to be a capital loss of the related segregated fund trust that reduces the policyholder's benefits under the particular policy by that amount for the purposes of subsection (3);

(j) the obligations of an insurer in respect of a benefit that is payable under a segregated fund policy, the amount of which benefit varies with the fair market value of the segregated fund at the time the benefit becomes payable, are deemed to be obligations of the trustee under the related segregated fund trust and not of the insurer and any amount received by the policyholder or that the policyholder became entitled to receive at any particular time in a year in respect of those obligations is deemed to be proceeds from the disposition of an interest in the related segregated fund trust;

(k) a reference to “the terms and conditions of the trust arrangement” in section 104 or subsection 127.2(3) is deemed to include a reference to the terms and conditions of the related segregated fund policy and the trustee is deemed to have designated the amounts referred to in that section in accordance with those terms and conditions; and

(l) where at any time an insurer acquires a share as a first registered holder thereof and allocates the share to a related segregated fund trust, the trust shall be deemed to have acquired the share at that time as the first registered holder thereof for the purpose of computing its share-purchase tax credit and the insurer shall be deemed not to have acquired the share for the purpose of computing its share-purchase tax credit.

(a) the property is deemed to have been acquired by the related segregated fund trust on the day determined under paragraph (1)(a) at a cost equal to the adjusted cost base of the property to the insurer on that day and that transaction is deemed to be a transaction between persons not dealing at arm's length;

(b) the property is deemed to have been disposed of by the insurer on the day referred to in paragraph (a) for proceeds equal to the adjusted cost base of the property to the insurer on that day; and

(e) where the taxpayer would, but for this paragraph, have a taxable capital gain for the particular year from the disposition of the property, the part of the taxable capital gain that can reasonably be considered to have arisen while the property was held by a person described in paragraph (b) shall be deemed to be a taxable capital gain of the taxpayer from the disposition of the property for the taxation year in which the taxpayer disposes of the property otherwise than because of subsection (2), and not to be a taxable capital gain for the particular year, and

(f) where the taxpayer has a profit (other than a capital gain) from the disposition of the property, the part of the profit that can reasonably be considered to have arisen while the property was held by a person described in paragraph (b) shall be included in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxation year in which the taxpayer disposes of the property otherwise than because of subsection (2), and shall not be included in computing the taxpayer's income for the particular year.

(5) Transition — inclusion re non-capital amounts — Where a taxpayer deducts an amount under subsection (4), there shall be included in computing the taxpayer's income for each taxation year that begins before 1999 and ends after October 30, 1994, the prescribed portion for the year of the amount so deducted.

(6) Transition — deduction re net capital gains — Such amount as a taxpayer elects, not exceeding a prescribed amount in respect of capital properties disposed of by the taxpayer because of subsection (2), shall be deemed to be an allowable capital loss of the taxpayer for its taxation year that includes October 31, 1994 from the disposition of property.

(7) Transition — inclusion re net capital gains — Where a taxpayer elects an amount under subsection (6), the taxpayer shall be deemed, for each taxation year that begins before 1999 and ends after October 30, 1994, to have a taxable capital gain for the year from the disposition of property equal to the prescribed portion for the year of the amount so elected.

142.51 [Financial institutions — changes in accounting rules] — (1) Definitions — The following definitions apply for the purposes of this section and subsections 142.5(8.1) and (8.2).

"base year" of a taxpayer means the taxpayer's taxation year that immediately precedes its transition year.

"transition amount" of a taxpayer for the taxpayer's transition year is the positive or negative amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at the end of the taxpayer's base year, of a transition property of the taxpayer; and

B is the total of all amounts each of which is the cost amount to the taxpayer, at the end of the taxpayer's base year, of a transition property of the taxpayer.

"transition property" of a taxpayer means a property that

(a) was a specified debt obligation held by the taxpayer at the end of the taxpayer's base year;

(b) was not a mark-to-market property of the taxpayer for the taxpayer's base year, but would have been a mark-to-market property of the taxpayer for the taxpayer's base year if the property had been carried at the property's fair market value in the taxpayer's balance sheet as at the end of each taxation year of the taxpayer that ends after the taxpayer last acquired the property (otherwise than by reason of a reacquisition under subsection 142.5(2)) and before the commencement of the taxpayer's transition year; and

(c) was a mark-to-market property of the taxpayer for the transition year of the taxpayer.

"transition year" of a taxpayer means the taxpayer's first taxation year that begins after September 2006.

(2) Transition year income inclusion — If a taxpayer is a financial institution in its transition year, there shall be included in computing the taxpayer's income for its transition year the absolute value of the negative amount, if any, of the taxpayer's transition amount.

(3) Transition year income deduction — If a taxpayer is a financial institution in its transition year, there shall be deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for its transition year the positive amount, if any, of the taxpayer's transition amount.

Related Provisions: 20.4(2) — Parallel rule for non-life insurer; 138(10) — Application to insurance corporation; 138(17) — Parallel rule for life insurer; 142.51(5) — Deduction reversal in subsequent 5 years; 142.51(8), (9) — Effect of rollover of insurance business.

(4) Transition year income inclusion reversal — If an amount has been included under subsection (2) in computing a taxpayer's income for its transition year there shall be deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for each particular taxation year of the taxpayer that ends after the beginning of the transition year, and in which particular taxation year the taxpayer is a financial institution, the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount included under subsection (2) in computing the taxpayer's income for the transition year; and

B is the number of days in the particular taxation year that are before the day that is 1825 days after the first day of the transition year.

Related Provisions: 20.4(3) — Parallel rule for non-life insurer; 138(18) — Parallel rule for life insurer; 142.51(6), (12) — Effect of windup of institution; 142.51(7) — Effect of amalgamation; 142.51(8), (9) — Effect of transfer of business.

(5) Transition year income deduction reversal — If an amount has been deducted under subsection (3) in computing a taxpayer's income for its transition year, there shall be included in computing the taxpayer's income, for each particular taxation year of the taxpayer ending after the beginning of the transition year, and in which particular taxation year the taxpayer is a financial institution, the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount deducted under subsection (3) in computing the taxpayer's income for the transition year; and

B is the number of days in the particular taxation year that are before the day that is 1825 days after the first day of the transition year.

Related Provisions: 12.5(3) — Parallel rule for non-life insurer; 138(19) — Parallel rule for life insurer; 142.51(6), (12) — Effect of windup of institution; 142.51(7) — Effect of amalgamation; 142.51(8), (9) — Effect of transfer of business; 142.51(10) — Effect of continuing partnership; 142.51(11) — Effect of ceasing to carry on business.

(6) Winding-up — If a taxpayer has, in a winding-up to which subsection 88(1) has applied, been wound-up into another corporation (referred to in this subsection as the "parent"), and immediately after the winding-up the parent is a financial institution, in applying subsections (4) and (5) in computing the income of the taxpayer and of the parent for particular taxation years that end on or after the first day (referred to in this subsection as the "start day") on which assets of the taxpayer were distributed to the parent on the winding-up,

(a) the parent is, on and after the start day, deemed to be the same corporation as and a continuation of the taxpayer in respect of

(i) any amount included under subsection (2) or deducted under subsection (3) by the taxpayer in computing the taxpayer's income for its transition year,

(ii) any amount deducted under subsection (4) or included under subsection (5) in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year of the taxpayer that begins before the start day, and

(iii) any amount that would — in the absence of this subsection and if the taxpayer existed and was a financial institution on each day that is the start day or a subsequent day and on which the parent is a financial institution — be required to be deducted or included, in respect of any of those days, under subsection (4) or (5) in computing the taxpayer's income for its transition year; and

(b) the taxpayer is, in respect of each of its particular taxation years, to determine the value for B in the formulas in subsections (4) and (5) without reference to the start day and days after the start day.

Related Provisions: 12.5(4) — Parallel rule for non-life insurer; 138(20) — Parallel rule for life insurer.

(7) Amalgamations — If there is an amalgamation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(1)) of a taxpayer with one or more other corporations to form one corporation (referred to in this subsection as the “new corporation”), and immediately after the amalgamation the new corporation is a financial institution, in applying subsections (4) and (5) in computing the income of the new corporation for particular taxation years of the new corporation that begin on or after the day on which the amalgamation occurred, the new corporation is, on and after that day, deemed to be the same corporation as and a continuation of the taxpayer in respect of

(a) any amount included under subsection (2) or deducted under subsection (3) in computing the taxpayer's income for its transition year of the taxpayer;

(b) any amount deducted under subsection (4) or included under subsection (5) in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year of the taxpayer that begins before the day on which the amalgamation occurred; and

(c) any amount that would — in the absence of this subsection and if the taxpayer existed and was a financial institution on each day that is the day on which the amalgamation occurred or a subsequent day and on which the new corporation is a financial institution — be required to be deducted or included, in respect of any of those days, under subsection (4) or (5) in computing the taxpayer's income.

Related Provisions: 12.5(5) — Parallel rule for non-life insurer; 138(21) — Parallel rule for life insurer.

(9) — Subsection (9) applies if, at any time, a taxpayer (referred to in this subsection and subsection (9) as the “transferor”) transfers, to a corporation (referred to in this subsection and subsection (9) as the “transferee”) that is related to the transferor, property in respect of a business carried on by the transferor in Canada (referred to in this subsection and subsection (9) as the “transferred business”) and

(a) subsection 138(11.5) or (11.94) applies to the transfer; or

(b) subsection 85(1) applies to the transfer, the transfer includes all or substantially all of the property and liabilities of the transferred business and, immediately after the transfer, the transferee is a financial institution.

(9) Transfer of a business — If this subsection applies in respect of the transfer, at any time, of property

(a) the transferee is, at and after that time, deemed to be the same corporation as and a continuation of the transferor in respect of

(i) any amount included under subsection (2) or deducted under subsection (3) in computing the transferor's income for its transition year that can reasonably be attributed to the transferred business,

(ii) any amount deducted under subsection (4) or included under subsection (5) in computing the transferor's income for a taxation year of the transferor that begins before that time that can reasonably be attributed to the transferred business, and

(iii) any amount that would — in the absence of this subsection and if the transferor existed and was a financial institution on each day that includes that time or is a subsequent day and on which the transferee is a financial institution — be required to be deducted or included, in respect of any of those days, under subsection (4) or (5) in computing the transferor's income that can reasonably be attributed to the transferred business; and

(b) in determining, in respect of the day that includes that time or any subsequent day, any amount that is required under subsection (4) or (5) to be deducted or included in computing the transferor's income for each particular taxation year from the transferred business, the description of A in the formulas in those subsections is deemed to be nil.

(a) any amount included under subsection (2) or deducted under subsection (3) in computing the predecessor partnership's income for its transition year;

(b) any amount deducted under subsection (4) or included under subsection (5) in computing the predecessor partnership's income for a taxation year of the predecessor partnership that begins before the day on which the new partnership comes into existence; and

(c) any amount that would — in the absence of this subsection and if the predecessor partnership existed and was a financial institution on each day that is the day on which the new partnership comes into existence or a subsequent day and on which the new partnership is a financial institution — be required to be deducted or included, in respect of any of those days, under subsection (4) or (5) in computing the predecessor partnership's income.

(11) Ceasing to carry on a business [Ceasing to be a financial institution] — If at any time, a taxpayer ceases to be a financial institution

(a) there shall be deducted, in computing the income of the taxpayer for the taxation year of the taxpayer that includes the time that is immediately before that time, the amount determined by the formula

$$A - B$$

B is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount deducted under subsection (4) in computing the income of the taxpayer for a taxation year that began before that time; and

(b) there shall be included, in computing the income of the taxpayer for the taxation year of the taxpayer that includes the time that is immediately before that time, the amount determined by the formula

where

C is the amount deducted under subsection (3) in computing the taxpayer's income for its transition year, and

D is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount included under subsection (5) in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year that began before that time.

Additional Rules

142.6 (1) Becoming or ceasing to be a financial institution — Where, at a particular time after February 22, 1994, a taxpayer becomes or ceases to be a financial institution,

- (a) where a taxation year of the taxpayer would not, but for this paragraph, end immediately before the particular time,
 - (i) except for the purpose of subsection 132(6.1), the taxpayer’s taxation year that would otherwise have included the particular time is deemed to have ended immediately before that time and a new taxation year of the taxpayer is deemed to have begun at that time, and
 - (ii) for the purpose of determining the taxpayer’s fiscal period after the particular time, the taxpayer shall be deemed not to have established a fiscal period before that time;
- (b) where the taxpayer becomes a financial institution, the taxpayer shall be deemed to have disposed, immediately before the end of its taxation year that ends immediately before the particular time, of each property held by the taxpayer that is
 - (i) a specified debt obligation (other than a mark-to-market property for the year), or
 - (ii) where the year ends after October 30, 1994, a mark-to-market property for the year for proceeds equal to its fair market value at the time of disposition;

Proposed Amendment — 142.6(1)(b)

(b) if the taxpayer becomes a financial institution, the taxpayer is deemed to have disposed, immediately before the end of its particular taxation year that ends immediately before the particular time, of each of the following properties held by the taxpayer for proceeds equal to the property’s fair market value at the time of that disposition:

- (i) a specified debt obligation, or
- (ii) a mark-to-market property of the taxpayer for the particular taxation year or for the taxpayer’s taxation year that includes the particular time;

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 136(1), will amend para. 142.6(1)(b) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after 1998.

Technical Notes: Subsection 142.6(1) contains rules that apply where a taxpayer becomes (or ceases to be) a financial institution. This is most likely to happen where the change of status occurs because the taxpayer becomes (or ceases to be) controlled by a financial institution.

If a taxation year of the taxpayer does not end immediately before the time at which its status as a financial institution changes, subparagraph 142.6(1)(a)(i) deems the taxpayer’s taxation year that would otherwise have included that time to end immediately before that time. A new taxation year begins at that time, and the taxpayer is permitted to adopt a new fiscal period. One purpose for the deemed year-end is to ensure the proper application, in taxation years in which the taxpayer is a financial institution, of the rules, commonly known as the mark-to-market rules,

- in section 142.3 for specified debt obligations, and
- in section 142.5 for mark-to-market properties.

The expressions “financial institution”, “specified debt obligation” and “mark-to-market property” are defined in section 142.2.

Paragraph 142.6(1)(b) applies where a taxpayer becomes a financial institution. This paragraph generally provides for a deemed disposition at fair market value of each property held by the taxpayer that is:

- a specified debt obligation (other than a specified debt obligation that is a mark-to-market property to which subparagraph 142.6(1)(b)(ii) applies [142.6(1)(b)(i) — ed.], or
- a mark-to-market property for the taxpayer’s taxation year that ends immediately before the time of the change of status [142.6(1)(b)(ii) — ed.].

This deemed disposition under paragraph 142.6(1)(b) is intended to ensure that amounts brought, because of the mark-to-market rules in sections 142.3 and 142.5, into the taxpayer’s income for the taxpayer’s subsequent taxation year (i.e., the taxation year that includes the time of the change of status) do not include gains or losses accrued before the beginning of that subsequent taxation year.

Paragraph 142.6(1)(b) is amended to ensure that this is achieved in connection with mark-to-market properties. Amended paragraph 142.6(1)(b) results in the taxpayer being deemed to have disposed of, immediately before the end of its particular taxation year that ends immediately before the time of the change of status, and for proceeds equal to its fair market value at the time of that disposition, a mark-to-market property of the taxpayer

- for the particular taxation year, or
- for the subsequent taxation year.

(c) where the taxpayer ceases to be a financial institution, the taxpayer shall be deemed to have disposed, immediately before the end of its taxation year that ends immediately before the particular time, of each property held by the taxpayer that is a specified debt obligation (other than a mark-to-market property of the taxpayer for the year), for proceeds equal to its fair market value at the time of disposition; and

(d) the taxpayer shall be deemed to have reacquired, at the end of the taxation year referred to in paragraph (b) or (c), each property deemed by that paragraph to have been disposed of by the taxpayer, at a cost equal to the proceeds of disposition of the property.

Proposed Amendment — 142.6(1)(d)

(d) the taxpayer is deemed to have reacquired, at the end of its taxation year that ends immediately before the particular time, each property deemed by paragraph (b) or (c) to have been disposed of by the taxpayer, at a cost equal to the proceeds of disposition of the property.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 136(2), will amend para. 142.6(1)(d) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after 1998.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 142.6(1)(c) provides for a deemed disposition of specified debt obligations (other than mark-to-market property) in the opposite situation of change of status, i.e., where the taxpayer ceases to be a financial institution. Paragraph 142.6(1)(d) provides that the taxpayer is deemed to have reacquired, at the end of the taxation year referred to in paragraph 142.6(1)(b) or (c), each property deemed by that paragraph to have been disposed of by the taxpayer, at a cost equal to the proceeds of disposition of the property.

Consequential to the amendments to paragraph 142.6(1)(b), paragraph 142.6(1)(d) is amended to provide that the taxpayer is deemed to have reacquired, at the end of its taxation year that ends immediately before the time of the change of status, each property deemed by paragraph 142.6(1)(b) or (c) to have been disposed of by the taxpayer, at a cost equal to the proceeds of disposition of the property.

History: Subpara. 142.6(1)(a)(i) amended by 1999, c. 22, s. 58, applicable after 1997. It formerly read:

- (i) the taxation year of the taxpayer that would otherwise have included the particular time shall be deemed to have ended immediately before that time and a new taxation year of the taxpayer shall be deemed to have begun at that time, and

Subsecs. 142.6(8) to (10) added by 1998, c. 19, s. 167, applicable to 1993 et seq.

S. 142.6 added by 1995, c. 21, s. 58; subsec. 142.6(1) applicable after February 22, 1994; subsecs. 142.6(2) to (6) applicable to taxation years that end after February 22, 1994; and subsec. 142.6(7) applicable to dispositions occurring after October 30, 1994, except the disposition of a debt obligation before July 1995 where

- (a) the disposition is part of a series of transactions or events that began before October 31, 1994;
- (b) as part of the series of transactions or events, the taxpayer who acquired the debt obligation disposed of property before October 31, 1994; and
- (c) it is reasonable to consider that one of the main reasons for the acquisition of the debt obligation by the taxpayer was to obtain a deduction because, as a consequence of the disposition referred to in paragraph (b),
 - (i) an amount was included in the taxpayer's income for any taxation year, or
 - (ii) an amount was subtracted from a balance of undeducted outlays, expenses or other amounts of the taxpayer and the subtracted amount exceeded the portion, if any, of the balance that could reasonably be considered to be in respect of the property.

(1.1) Ceasing to use property in Canadian business — If at a particular time in a taxation year a taxpayer that is a non-resident financial institution (other than a life insurance corporation) ceases to use, in connection with a business or part of a business carried on by the taxpayer in Canada immediately before the particular time, a property that is a mark-to-market property of the taxpayer for the year or a specified debt obligation, but that is not a property that was disposed of by the taxpayer at the particular time,

(a) the taxpayer is deemed

- (i) to have disposed of the property immediately before the time that was immediately before the particular time for proceeds equal to its fair market value at the time of disposition and to have received those proceeds at the time of disposition in the course of carrying on the business or the part of the business, as the case may be, and

- (ii) to have reacquired the property at the particular time at a cost equal to those proceeds; and

(b) in determining the consequences of the disposition in subparagraph (a)(i), subsection 142.4(11) does not apply to any payment received by the taxpayer after the particular time.

(1.2) Beginning to use property in a Canadian business — If at a particular time a taxpayer that is a non-resident financial institution (other than a life insurance corporation) begins to use, in connection with a business or part of a business carried on by the taxpayer in Canada, a property that is a mark-to-market property of the taxpayer for the year that includes the particular time or a specified debt obligation, but that is not a property that was acquired by the taxpayer at the particular time, the taxpayer is deemed

- (a) to have disposed of the property immediately before the time that was immediately before the particular time for proceeds equal to its fair market value at the time of disposition; and

- (b) to have reacquired the property at the particular time at a cost equal to those proceeds.

(1.3) Specified debt obligation marked to market — In applying subsection (1.1) to a taxpayer in respect of a property in a taxation year,

- (a) the definition "mark-to-market property" in subsection 142.2(1) shall be applied as if the year ended immediately before the particular time referred to in subsection (1.1); and

- (b) if the taxpayer does not have financial statements for the period ending immediately before the particular time referred to in subsection (1.1), references in the definition to financial statements for the year shall be read as references to the financial statements that it is reasonable to expect would have been prepared if the year had ended immediately before the particular time.

(1.4) Change in status — prescribed payment card corporation share — If, at any particular time in a taxation year of a taxpayer that is a financial institution for the taxation year, a property becomes a mark-to-market property of the taxpayer for the taxation year because it ceased, at the particular time, to be a prescribed payment card corporation share of the taxpayer,

(a) the taxpayer is deemed

- (i) to have disposed of the property immediately before the particular time for proceeds of disposition equal to its fair market value immediately before the particular time, and
- (ii) to have acquired the property, at the particular time, at a cost equal to those proceeds; and

(b) subsection 142.5(1) does not apply to the disposition under subparagraph (a)(i).

(i) the amount that would be the taxpayer's taxable capital gains for the taxpayer's last taxation year that ended before February 23, 1994 from dispositions of property if no election were made under subsection (8)

exceeds the total of

(ii) the amount that would be the taxpayer's allowable capital losses for the year from dispositions of property if no election were made under subsection (8); and

(iii) the maximum amount that would have been deductible in computing the taxpayer's taxable income for the year in respect of the taxpayer's net capital losses for preceding taxation years if no election were made under subsection (8).

(a) the total of the amounts determined under paragraphs (9)(b) and (c) in respect of the taxpayer exceeds the amount determined under paragraph (9)(a) in respect of the taxpayer; or

(b) the total of all amounts each of which would, if this subsection did not apply, be the taxpayer's allowable capital loss for the taxpayer's last taxation year that ended before February 23, 1994 from the disposition of a property deemed to have been disposed of under paragraph (8)(b) exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is the taxpayer's taxable capital gain for the year from the disposition of a property deemed to have been disposed of under paragraph (8)(a).

(b) as part of the series of transactions or events, the taxpayer who acquired the debt obligation disposed of property before October 31, 1994; and

(c) it is reasonable to consider that one of the main reasons for the acquisition of the debt obligation by the taxpayer was to obtain a deduction because, as a consequence of the disposition referred to in paragraph (b),

(i) an amount was included in the taxpayer's income for any taxation year, or

(ii) an amount was subtracted from a balance of undeducted outlays, expenses or other amounts of the taxpayer and the subtracted amount exceeded the portion, if any, of the balance that could reasonably be considered to be in respect of the property.

(a) affiliated with either

(i) the entrant bank, or

(ii) a foreign bank (within the meaning assigned by section 2 of the Bank Act) that is affiliated with the entrant bank at the particular time; and

(b) either

(i) a bank,

(ii) a corporation authorized under the Trust and Loan Companies Act to carry on the business of offering to the public its services as trustee, or Related Provisions: 142.7(2)(a) — Effect of qualifying foreign merger.

"eligible property" of a Canadian affiliate at any time means a property described in any of paragraphs 85(1.1)(a) to (g.1) that is, immediately before that time, used or held by it in carrying on its business in Canada.

"entrant bank" means a non-resident corporation that is, or has applied to the Superintendent of Financial Institutions to become, an authorized foreign bank.

"qualifying foreign merger" means a merger or combination of two or more corporations that would be a "foreign merger" within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(8.1) if that subsection were read without reference to the words "and otherwise than as a result of the distribution of property to one corporation on the winding-up of another corporation."

(2) Qualifying foreign merger — Where an entrant bank was formed as the result of a qualifying foreign merger, after February 11, 1999, of two or more corporations (referred to in this subsection as "predecessors"), and at the time immediately before the merger, there were one or more Canadian corporations (referred to in this subsection as "predecessor affiliates"), each of which at that time would have been a Canadian affiliate of a predecessor if the predecessor were an entrant bank at that time,

(a) for the purpose of the definition "Canadian affiliate" in subsection (1),

(i) each predecessor affiliate is deemed to have been affiliated with the entrant bank throughout the period that began on February 11, 1999 and ended at the time of the merger,

(ii) the expression “entrant bank” in subparagraph (b)(iii) of the definition is deemed to include a predecessor, and

(iii) if two or more of the predecessor affiliates are amalgamated or merged at any time after February 11, 1999 to form a new corporation, the new corporation is deemed to have been affiliated with the entrant bank throughout the period that began on February 11, 1999 and ended at the time of the amalgamation or merger of the predecessor affiliates; and

(b) if at least one of the predecessors complied with the terms of subsection⁴⁸ (11)(a), the entrant bank is deemed to have complied with those terms.

(3) Branch-establishment rollover — If a Canadian affiliate of an entrant bank transfers an eligible property to the entrant bank, the entrant bank begins immediately after the transfer to use or hold the transferred property in its Canadian banking business and the Canadian affiliate and the entrant bank jointly elect, in accordance with subsection (11), to have this subsection apply in respect of the transfer, subsections 85(1) (other than paragraph (e.2)), (1.1), (1.4) and (5) apply, with any modifications that the circumstances require, in respect of the transfer, except that the portion of subsection 85(1) before paragraph (a) shall be read as follows:

“85. (1) Where a taxpayer that is a Canadian affiliate of an entrant bank (within the meanings assigned by subsection 142.7(1)) has, in a taxation year, disposed of any of the taxpayer’s property to the entrant bank (referred to in this subsection as the “corporation”), if the taxpayer and the corporation have jointly elected under subsection 142.7(3), the following rules apply:”.

Related Provisions: 142.7(4) — Deemed fair market value; 142.7(5) — Transfers of specified debt obligations; 142.7(11) — Requirements for election; 142.7(13) — Stop-loss rule on windup of affiliate; Reg. 5301(8) — Effect of transfer on instalment base of transferee.

(4) Deemed fair market value — If a Canadian affiliate of an entrant bank and the entrant bank make an election under subsection (3) in respect of a transfer of property by the Canadian affiliate to the entrant bank, for the purposes of subsections 15(1), 52(2), 69(1), (4) and (5), 246(1) and 247(2) in respect of the transfer, the fair market value of the property is deemed to be the amount agreed by the Canadian affiliate and the entrant bank in their election.

(5) Specified debt obligations — If a Canadian affiliate of an entrant bank transfers a specified debt obligation to the entrant bank in a transaction in respect of which an election is made under subsection (3), the Canadian affiliate is a financial institution in its taxation year in which the transfer is made, and the amount that the Canadian affiliate and the entrant bank agree on in their election in respect of the obligation is equal to the tax basis of the obligation within the meaning assigned by subsection 142.4(1), the entrant bank is deemed, in respect of the obligation, for the purposes of sections 142.2 to 142.4 and 142.6, to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, the Canadian affiliate.

(6) Mark-to-market property — If a Canadian affiliate of an entrant bank described in paragraph (11)(a) transfers at any time within the period described in paragraph (11)(c) to the entrant bank a property that is, for the Canadian affiliate’s taxation year in which the property is transferred, a mark-to-market property of the Canadian affiliate,

(a) for the purposes of subsections 112(5) to (5.21) and (5.4), the definition “mark-to-market property” in subsection 142.2(1) and subsection 142.5(9), the entrant bank is deemed, in respect of the property, to be the same corporation as and a continuation of, the Canadian affiliate; and

(b) for the purpose of applying subsection 142.5(2) in respect of the property, the Canadian affiliate’s taxation year in which the property is transferred is deemed to have ended immediately before the time the property was transferred.

Related Provisions: 87(2)(e.5) — Parallel rule on amalgamations.

(7) Reserves — If

(a) at a particular time,

(i) a Canadian affiliate of an entrant bank transfers to the entrant bank property that is a loan or lending asset, or a right to receive an unpaid amount in respect of a disposition before the particular time of property by the affiliate, or

(ii) the entrant bank assumes an obligation of the Canadian affiliate that is an instrument or commitment described in paragraph 20(1)(l.1) or an obligation in respect of goods, services, lands or chattels described in subparagraph 20(1)(m)(i), (ii) or (iii),

Technical Notes: See under 12(4).

(b) the property is transferred or the obligation is assumed for an amount equal to its fair market value at the particular time,

(c) the entrant bank begins immediately after the particular time to use or hold the property or owe the obligation in its Canadian banking business, and

(d) the Canadian affiliate and the entrant bank jointly elect in accordance with subsection (11) to have this subsection apply in respect of the transfer or assumption,

then

(e) in applying paragraphs 20(1)(l), (1.1), (m), (n) and (p) in respect of the obligation or property, the taxation year of the affiliate that would, but for this paragraph, include the particular time is deemed to end immediately before the particular time, and

(f) in computing the income of the Canadian affiliate and the entrant bank for taxation years that end on or after the particular time,

(i) any amount deducted under paragraph 20(1)(l), (1.1), (m) or (n) by the Canadian affiliate in respect of the property or obligation in computing its income for its taxation year that ended immediately before the particular time, or under paragraph 20(1)(p) in computing its income for that year or for a preceding taxation year (to the extent that the amount has not been included in the affiliate’s income under paragraph 12(1)(i)), is deemed to have been so deducted by the entrant bank in computing its income for its last taxation year that ended before the particular time and not to have been deducted by the Canadian affiliate,

(ii) in applying paragraph 20(1)(m), an amount in respect of the goods, services, land or chattels that was included under paragraph 12(1)(a) in computing the Canadian affiliate’s income from a business is deemed to have been so included in computing the entrant bank’s income from its Canadian banking business for a preceding taxation year,

Proposed Amendment — 142.7(7)(f)(ii)

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 3 — bijuralism), subsec. 247(2), will amend subpara. 142.7(7)(f)(ii) by substituting “, or chattels or movable property,” for “or chattels”, to come into force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes: See under 12(4).

(iii) in applying paragraph 20(1)(n) in respect of a property described in subparagraph (a)(i) and paragraphs (b), (c) and (d) sold by the Canadian affiliate in the course of a business, the property is deemed to have been disposed of by the entrant bank (and not by the Canadian affiliate) at the time it was disposed of by the Canadian affiliate, and the amount in respect of the sale that was included in computing the Canadian affiliate’s income from a business is deemed to have been included in computing the entrant bank's income from its Canadian banking business for its taxation year that includes the time at which the property was so disposed of, and

⁴⁸Sic. Should be “paragraph” — ed.

(iv) in applying paragraph 40(1)(a) or 44(1)(e) in respect of a property described in subparagraph (a)(i) and paragraphs (b), (c) and (d) disposed of by the Canadian affiliate, the property is deemed to have been disposed of by the entrant bank (and not by the Canadian affiliate) at the time it was disposed of by the Canadian affiliate, the amount determined under subparagraph 40(1)(a)(i) or 44(1)(e)(i) in respect of the Canadian affiliate is deemed to be the amount determined under that subparagraph in respect of the entrant bank, and any amount claimed by the Canadian affiliate under subparagraph 40(1)(a)(iii) or 44(1)(e)(iii) in computing its gain from the disposition of the property for its last taxation year that ended before the particular time is deemed to have been so claimed by the entrant bank for its last taxation year that ended before the particular time.

Related Provisions: 142.7(11) — Requirements for election.

(8) Assumption of debt obligation — If a Canadian affiliate of an entrant bank described in paragraph (11)(a) transfers at any time within the period described in paragraph (11)(c) property to the entrant bank, and any part of the consideration for the transfer is the assumption by the entrant bank in respect of its Canadian banking business of a debt obligation of the Canadian affiliate,

(a) where the Canadian affiliate and the entrant bank jointly elect in accordance with subsection (11) to have this paragraph apply,

(i) both

(A) the value of that part of the consideration for the transfer of the property, and

(B) for the purpose of determining the consequences of the assumption of the obligation and any subsequent settlement or extinguishment of it, the value of the consideration given to the entrant bank for the assumption of the obligation, are deemed to be an amount (in this paragraph referred to as the "assumption amount") equal to the amount outstanding on account of the principal amount of the obligation at that time, and

(ii) the assumption amount shall not be considered a term of the transaction that differs from that which would have been made between persons dealing at arm's length solely because it is not equal to the fair market value of the obligation at that time;

(b) where the obligation is denominated in a foreign currency, and the Canadian affiliate and the entrant bank jointly elect in accordance with subsection (11) to have this paragraph apply,

(i) the amount of any income, loss, capital gain or capital loss in respect of the obligation due to the fluctuation in the value of the foreign currency relative to Canadian currency realized by

(A) the Canadian affiliate on the assumption of the obligation is deemed to be nil, and

(B) the entrant bank on the settlement or extinguishment of the obligation shall be determined based on the amount of the obligation in Canadian currency at the time it became an obligation of the Canadian affiliate, and

(ii) for the purpose of an election made in respect of the obligation under paragraph (a), the amount outstanding on account of the principal amount of the obligation at that time is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount that was advanced to the Canadian affiliate on account of principal, that remains outstanding at that time, and that is determined using the exchange rate that applied between the foreign currency and Canadian currency at the time of the advance; and

(c) for the purpose of applying paragraphs 20(1)(e) and (f) in respect of the debt obligation, the obligation is deemed not to have been settled or extinguished by virtue of its assumption by the entrant bank and the entrant bank is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, the Canadian affiliate.

Proposed Addition — 142.7(8)(d)

(d) for the purpose of applying subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii) in respect of the debt obligation, the obligation is deemed to have been issued by the entrant bank at the time that the obligation was issued by the Canadian affiliate.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), s. 137, will add para. 142.7(8)(d), applicable after June 27, 1999.

Technical Notes: Section 142.7 provides time-limited rules to facilitate foreign banks' transformation of certain Canadian operations, currently carried out through subsidiaries, into Canadian branches (known as "authorized foreign banks") of the foreign banks themselves.

When an authorized foreign bank assumes certain debt obligations of its Canadian affiliates, subsection 142.7(8) applies to govern the tax consequences of the assumption.

Subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii) provides an exemption from Part XIII tax in respect of interest payments on certain long- and medium-term corporate debt. The exemption can depend upon, among other things, the time at which a debt is issued. New paragraph 142.7(8)(d) is added to treat, for the purpose of subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii), a debt obligation assumed by an authorized foreign bank from its Canadian affiliate as having been issued at the time that the debt was issued by the Canadian affiliate.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 18, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

I am writing in reply to your letter of October 24, 2001, regarding the conversion rules of foreign bank branches, particularly subsection 142.7(8) and subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii) of the Income Tax Act, as well as your letter of November 13, 2001 regarding the application of section 116 of the Act where an authorized foreign bank disposes of its property to a Canadian resident.

Conversion Rules

Subsection 142.7(8) provides the conversion rules for debt obligations assumed by an authorized foreign bank from its Canadian subsidiary, and subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii) exempts from Part XIII non-resident withholding tax the interest paid to a non-resident by a corporation resident in Canada on certain long-term debts. Subsection 212(13.3), meanwhile, treats the branch as a resident of Canada for the purposes of Part XIII.

In your October letter, you note that paragraph 142.7(8)(c) deems the assumed debt not to have been settled or extinguished for the purposes of paragraphs 20(1)(e) and (f), but it does not do the same for the purposes of subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii). You also suggest that the assumption of debt by an authorized foreign bank would result in a novation of that debt as the Canadian affiliate would have been totally discharged from it. In your opinion, when the novation took place there would be a new debt, which would not qualify for the exemption in subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii) if there were less than 5 years left on the debt.

You consider this to be an inappropriate result, and you request an amendment to subsection 142.7(8) to provide specifically that the above-described debt be deemed to continue in order to qualify for the subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii) exemption.

We agree with your views on this point and are prepared to recommend amendments to ensure that, where an authorized foreign bank assumes the debts of its subsidiary, such debt will be deemed for the purposes of the subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii) exemption to have been issued by the entrant bank at the same time that it was issued by the Canadian affiliate under the original terms and conditions.

I trust that the above will satisfy your requirements.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

ship, with each member of the partnership) under which the taxpayer is insured against any claim arising as a result of a liability incurred in the ordinary course of carrying on the business of the taxpayer or the partnership,

(ii) as a consequence of the death of the taxpayer,

(iii) in respect of an amount not included in the expenditure, determined without reference to subparagraph (6)(b)(ii), or

(5) Amount or benefit — For the purposes of subsections (2) and (3), where the amount or benefit to which a taxpayer is entitled at any time is provided by way of a guarantee, security or similar indemnity or covenant in respect of any loan or other obligation of the taxpayer, for greater certainty the amount or benefit to which the taxpayer is entitled under the guarantee or indemnity at any particular time is considered to be not less than the total of the unpaid amount of the loan or obligation at that time and all other amounts outstanding in respect of the loan or obligation at that time.

Proposed Addition — 143.2(6.1)

(6.1) Limited-recourse debt in respect of a gift or monetary contribution — The limited-recourse debt in respect of a gift or monetary contribution of a taxpayer, at the time the gift or monetary contribution is made, is the total of

(a) each limited-recourse amount at that time, of the taxpayer and of all other taxpayers not dealing at arm's length with the taxpayer, that can reasonably be considered to relate to the gift or monetary contribution,

(b) each limited-recourse amount at that time, determined under this section when this section is applied to each other taxpayer who deals at arm's length with and holds, directly or indirectly, an interest in the taxpayer, that can reasonably be considered to relate to the gift or monetary contribution, and

(c) each amount that is the unpaid amount at that time of any other indebtedness, of any taxpayer referred to in paragraph (a) or (b), that can reasonably be considered to relate to the gift or monetary contribution if there is a guarantee, security or similar indemnity or covenant in respect of that or any other indebtedness.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 139(2), will add subsec. 143.2(6.1), applicable in respect of expenditures, gifts and monetary contributions made after February 18, 2003.

Technical Notes: New subsection 143.2(6.1) describes limited-recourse debt in respect of a gift or monetary contribution made after February 18, 2003. Such an amount is an advantage under subsection 248(32), such that it reduces the eligible amount of a gift or political contribution determined under subsection 248(31). For additional details regarding the amount of an advantage, see the commentary to new subsection 248(32).

A limited-recourse debt includes the unpaid principal of any indebtedness for which recourse is limited, even if that limitation applies only in the future or contingently. It also includes any other indebtedness of the taxpayer, related to the gift or contribution, if there is a guarantee, security or similar indemnity or covenant in respect of that or any other indebtedness. For example, if a donor (or any other person mentioned below) enters into a contract of insurance whereby all or part of a debt will be paid upon the occurrence of either a certain or contingent event, the debt is a limited-recourse debt in respect of a gift if it is in any way related to the gift.

Such an indebtedness is also a limited-recourse debt if it is owed by a person dealing non-arm's length with the taxpayer or by a person who holds an interest in the taxpayer.

Dept. of Finance news release 2003-061, Dec. 5, 2003: These measures implement proposals introduced in Budget 2003 that address charitable donation arrangements that were promoted in recent years involving the use of limited-recourse debt. [See under 248(35)–(41) for full text of news release — ed.]

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, Feb. 18, 2003: (17) That, after February 18, 2003, ...

(c) in respect of gifts and contributions, and representations, made after that date, an arrangement in respect of the making of a gift referred to in section 110.1 or 118.1 of the Act or a contribution referred to in subsection 127(4.1) of the Act be deemed to be a tax shelter if it may reasonably be considered that, having regard to representations made concerning the arrangement, a person will incur an indebtedness in respect of which recourse is limited; and

(d) for gifts and contributions made after that date pursuant to an arrangement described in subparagraph (c), the amount of the gift or contribution be reduced by the amount of any associated indebtedness in respect of which recourse is limited, and the value of any repayment of the limited recourse debt be treated as a gift or contribution in the year the repayment is made.

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, Feb. 18, 2003: Tax Shelter Definition

Generally, a tax shelter is any property in respect of which it is represented, that a potential purchaser will be able to claim, within four years, deductions from income or taxable income which equal or exceed the net cost of the property to the purchaser (that is, net of certain prescribed benefits such as limited-recourse debt).

Promoters of tax shelter properties are not permitted to sell a tax shelter without first obtaining an identification number from the Canada Customs and Revenue Agency (CCRA). This identification number does not constitute confirmation by the CCRA of entitlement to any tax benefits that may have been described to potential purchasers; rather, the CCRA uses the number for administrative purposes such as identifying tax shelters for audit.

If an identification number is not obtained in advance, no person may claim any deduction in respect of the tax shelter until the number is obtained.

While the existing definition of "tax shelter" in the Income Tax Act applies to arrangements promoted as providing deductions in computing income or taxable income, it may not currently apply to those that are promoted as providing only the deduction of tax credits. The budget proposes to eliminate this technical distinction so that promoters will be required to register a property as a tax shelter if representations are made that a potential purchaser will be able to claim, within four years, any combination of deductions in computing income or taxable income and federal tax credits which in total equal or exceed the purchaser's net cost of the property. The definition of tax shelter will also be amended to clarify its application to property acquired under an arrangement in respect of which it is represented that a donation or contribution of the property would generate tax credits or deductions (such as charitable donations tax credits or deductions) equal to or exceeding the net cost to the donor of the property.

In order to avoid a double counting of tax credits in the formula used to determine if a property or an arrangement is a tax shelter, it is proposed that the definition of "prescribed benefits" in paragraph 231(6)(b) of the Income Tax Regulations be amended to exclude any federal tax credit already taken into account in determining whether tax credits and deductions exceed net cost. Provincial tax credits would continue to be considered prescribed benefits.

Further, the budget proposes to treat as a tax shelter any arrangement that involves a transfer of property in respect of which it is represented that a donation or contribution of the property would generate tax credits or deductions, if it may reasonably be considered that a person will incur limited-recourse debt in connection with the arrangement. If the transfer otherwise qualifies for a tax credit or deduction, the amount of the donation or contribution will be reduced for the purposes of calculating the amount of the credit or deduction to the extent of the associated limited-recourse debt. A repayment of the limited-recourse debt will be treated as a donation or contribution in the year it is repaid.

These amendments will generally apply in respect of property acquired, and gifts, contributions and representations made, after February 18, 2003.

Related Provisions: 237.1(1) ("gifting arrangement") (b) — Incurring limited-recourse debt may require tax shelter registration; 248(32)(b) — Limited-recourse debt reduces value of donation; 248(34) — Repayment of limited-recourse debt.

(7) Repayment of indebtedness — For the purpose of this section, the unpaid principal of an indebtedness is deemed to be a limited-recourse amount unless

(a) bona fide arrangements, evidenced in writing, were made, at the time the indebtedness arose, for repayment by the debtor of the indebtedness and all interest on the indebtedness within a reasonable period not exceeding 10 years; and

(b) interest is payable at least annually, at a rate equal to or greater than the lesser of

(i) the prescribed rate of interest in effect at the time the indebtedness arose, and

(ii) the prescribed rate of interest applicable from time to time during the term of the indebtedness, and is paid in respect of the indebtedness by the debtor no later than 60 days after the end of each taxation year of the debtor that ends in the period.

Related Provisions: 143.2(12) — Series of loans or repayments; Reg. 4301(c) (prescribed rate of interest).

(8) Limited-recourse amount — For the purpose of this section, the unpaid principal of an indebtedness is deemed to be a limited-recourse amount of a taxpayer where the taxpayer is a partnership and recourse against any member of the partnership in respect of the indebtedness is limited, either immediately or in the future and either absolutely or contingently.

(9) Timing — Where at any time a taxpayer has paid an amount (in this subsection referred to as the "repaid amount") on account of the principal amount of an indebtedness that was, before that time, the unpaid principal amount of a loan or any other form of indebtedness to which subsection (2) applies (in this subsection referred to as the "former amount or benefit") relating to an expenditure of the taxpayer,

(a) the former amount or benefit is considered to have been an amount or benefit under subsection (2) in respect of the taxpayer at all times before that time; and

(b) the expenditure is, subject to subsection (6), deemed to have been made or incurred at that time to the extent of, and by the payment of, the repaid amount.

(10) Timing — Where at any time a taxpayer has paid an amount (in this subsection referred to as the "repaid amount") on account of the principal amount of an indebtedness which was, before that time, an unpaid principal amount that was a limited-recourse amount (in this subsection referred to as the "former limited-recourse indebtedness") relating to an expenditure of the taxpayer,

(a) the former limited-recourse indebtedness is considered to have been a limited-recourse amount at all times before that time; and

(b) the expenditure is, subject to subsection (6), deemed to have been made or incurred at that time to the extent of, and by the amount of, the repaid amount.

Related Provisions: 231.6 — Foreign-based information.

(11) Short-term debt — Where a taxpayer pays all of the principal of an indebtedness no later than 60 days after that indebtedness arose and the indebtedness would otherwise be considered to be a limited-recourse amount solely because of the application of subsection (7) or (8), that subsection does not apply to the indebtedness unless

(a) any portion of the repayment is made with a limited-recourse amount; or

(b) the repayment can reasonably be considered to be part of a series of loans or other indebtedness and repayments that ends more than 60 days after the indebtedness arose.

Related Provisions: 231.6 — Foreign-based information; 251(1) — Arm's length.

(12) Series of loans or repayments — For the purpose of paragraph (7)(a), a debtor is considered not to have made arrangements to repay an indebtedness within 10 years where the debtor's arrangement to repay can reasonably be considered to be part of a series of loans or other indebtedness and repayments that ends more than 10 years after it begins.

Related Provisions: 248(10) — Series of transactions or events.

(13) Information located outside Canada — For the purpose of this section, where it can reasonably be considered that information relating to indebtedness that relates to a taxpayer's expenditure is available outside Canada and the Minister is not satisfied that the unpaid principal of the indebtedness is not a limited-recourse amount, the unpaid principal of the indebtedness relating to the taxpayer's expenditure is deemed to be a limited-recourse amount relating to the expenditure unless

Proposed Amendment — 143.2(13) opening words

(13) Information located outside Canada — For the purpose of this section, if it can reasonably be considered that information relating to indebtedness that relates to a taxpayer's expenditure, gift or monetary contribution is available outside Canada and the Minister is not satisfied that the unpaid principal of the indebtedness is not a limited-recourse amount, the unpaid principal of the indebtedness relating to the taxpayer's expenditure, gift or monetary contribution is deemed to be a limited-recourse amount relating to the expenditure, gift or monetary contribution unless

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 139(3), will amend the opening words of subsec. 143.2(13) to read as above, applicable in respect of expenditures, gifts and monetary contributions made after February 18, 2003.

Technical Notes: Subsection 143.2(13) applies where information related to an indebtedness in respect of an expenditure is located outside Canada, and the Minister of National Revenue is not satisfied that the indebtedness is not a limited-recourse amount. In such a case, the indebtedness is deemed to be a limited-recourse amount in respect of the expenditure. Subsection 143.2(13) is extended to also apply in respect of an indebtedness that relates to a gift or political contribution made after February 18, 2003.

(a) the information is provided to the Minister; or

(b) the information is located in a country with which the Government of Canada has entered into a tax convention or agreement that has the force of law in Canada and includes a provision under which the Minister can obtain the information.

(14) Information located outside Canada — For the purpose of this section, where it can reasonably be considered that information relating to whether a taxpayer is not dealing at arm's length with another taxpayer is available outside Canada and the Minister is not satisfied that the taxpayer is dealing at arm's length with the other taxpayer, the taxpayer and the other taxpayer are deemed not to be dealing with each other at arm's length unless

(a) the information is provided to the Minister; or

(b) the information is located in a country with which the Government of Canada has entered into a tax convention or agreement that has the force of law in Canada and includes a provision under which the Minister can obtain the information.

(15) Assessments — Notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5), such assessments, determinations and redeterminations may be made as are necessary to give effect to this section.

Proposed Addition — 143.3

Expenditures — Limitations

143.3 [Issuing shares or options is not an expenditure] — (1) Definitions — The following definitions apply in this section.

"expenditure" of a taxpayer means an expense, expenditure or outlay made or incurred by the taxpayer, or a cost or capital cost of property acquired by the taxpayer.

"option" means an option, warrant or similar right, issued or granted by a taxpayer, giving the holder the right to acquire an interest in the taxpayer or in another taxpayer with whom the taxpayer does not, at the time the option, warrant or similar right is issued or granted, deal at arm's length.

Technical Notes: New section 143.3 reduces, if applicable, the amount of a taxpayer's expenditure by certain amounts for the purposes of computing the taxpayer's income, taxable income and tax payable or an amount considered to have been paid on account of the taxpayer's tax payable.

New subsection 143.3(1) provides definitions that apply for the purposes of section 143.3. Those definitions are:

"Expenditure" of a taxpayer, which means an expense, expenditure or outlay made or incurred by the taxpayer, or that is a cost or capital cost of property acquired by the taxpayer.

"Option", which means an option, warrant or similar right, issued or granted by the taxpayer, giving the holder the right to acquire an interest in the taxpayer or in another taxpayer with which the taxpayer does not, at the time the option, warrant or similar right is issued or granted, deal at arm's length.

"Taxpayer", which is defined to include a partnership.

(2) Options — limitation — In computing a taxpayer's income, taxable income or tax payable or an amount considered to have been paid on account of the taxpayer's tax payable, an expenditure of the taxpayer is deemed not to include any portion of the expenditure that would — if this Act were read without reference to this subsection — be included in determining the expenditure because of the taxpayer having granted or issued an option on or after November 17, 2005.

Technical Notes: New subsection 143.3(2) provides that, in computing a taxpayer's income, taxable income or tax payable or an amount considered to have been paid on account of the taxpayer's tax payable, an expenditure of the taxpayer is deemed not to include any portion of the expenditure that would — if the Act were read without reference to subsection 143.3(2) — be included in determining the expenditure because of the taxpayer having granted or issued an option on or after November 17, 2005 [thus overruling Alcatel, [2005] 2 C.T.C. 2001 (TCC) — ed.]. In essence, the value of an option granted by a taxpayer is not considered to be an expenditure for income tax purposes.

Related Provisions: 7(3)(b) — No reduction in employer's income from issuing stock options; 143.3(5) — Exceptions.

(3) Corporate shares — limitation — In computing a corporation's income, taxable income or tax payable or an amount considered to have been paid on account of the corporation's tax payable, an expenditure of the corporation that would — if this Act were read without reference to this subsection — include an amount because of the corporation having issued a share of its capital stock at any particular time on or after November 17, 2005 is reduced by

(a) if the issuance of the share is not a consequence of the exercise of an option, the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the share at the particular time exceeds

(i) if the transaction under which the share is issued is a transaction to which section 85, 85.1 or 138 applies, the amount determined under that section to be the cost to the issuing corporation of the property acquired in consideration for issuing the share, or

(ii) in any other case, the amount of the consideration that is the fair market value of the property transferred to [see also Dec. 10/09 comfort letters below — ed.], or the services provided to, the issuing corporation for issuing the share; and

(b) if the issuance of the share is a consequence of the exercise of an option, the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the share at the particular time exceeds the amount paid, pursuant to the terms of the option, by the holder to the issuing taxpayer for issuing the share.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 10, 2009:

Ms. Sandra Jack, Q.C. and Mr. D. Brett Anderson, Felesky Flynn LLP, Calgary, AB
Dear Ms. Jack and Mr. Anderson:

I am replying to your letter of November 24, 2009 concerning proposed section 143.3 of the Income Tax Act.

In your letter, you note that proposed section 143.3 limits a taxpayer's cost of property in circumstances where the taxpayer issues its own shares as consideration for the acquisition of the property. You are concerned that the proposal would yield inappropriate results in circumstances where a corporation (the "first corporation") issues shares in consideration for another corporation (the "second corporation") issuing shares to it. In these circumstances, and based on a conclusion that the issuance of shares by the second corporation is not a "transfer" of property by that second corporation, you are of the view that the cost of the second corporation's shares acquired by the first corporation would be reduced to zero because there was no property "transferred" by the second corporation to the first corporation.

In view of the above, you recommend that the proposed legislation be clarified to ensure that the issuance of shares by the second corporation in these circumstances would be provided the same treatment as is accorded transfers of other types of property. We agree that, from a tax policy perspective, the text "property transferred to" in proposed subparagraph 143.3(3)(a)(ii) should not apply to exclude shares issued to the first corporation in the circumstances described above.

We are therefore prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that proposed section 143.3 be clarified to expressly address this concern applicable to shares issued on and after November 17, 2005. While I cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with our recommendation, I hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard Lalonde, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

[Essentially identical letters of the same date were written to Bernadette Johnston, VP Taxation of Thomson Reuters, and to Eldorado Gold Corp. — ed.]

Technical Notes: New subsection 143.3(3) provides for two reductions that apply to an expenditure that would — if the Act were read without reference to subsection 143.3(3) — include an amount because of a corporation (or another corporation not dealing at arm's length with the corporation) having issued a share of its capital stock at any particular time on or after November 17, 2005. The reductions apply to the corporation in computing its income, taxable income or tax payable or an amount considered to have been paid on account of the corporation's tax payable.

New paragraph 143.3(a) applies on the issuance of the share (other than on the exercise of an option). Generally, the corporation is to reduce the related expenditure by the amount, if any, by which

(i) the fair market value of the share

exceeds

(ii) if the transaction under which the share is issued is a transaction to which section 85, 85.1 or 138 applies, the amount determined under that section to be the cost to the corporation of the property acquired in consideration for the issuance of the share, or

(iii) in any other case, the amount of consideration that is the fair market value of the property transferred to, or the services provided to, the issuing corporation for issuing the share.

In addition, under new paragraph 143.3(b), if the issuance of the share is a consequence of the exercise of an option, generally the corporation is to reduce the related expenditure by the amount, if any, by which

(i) the fair market value of the share

exceeds

(ii) that portion of the amount paid, pursuant to the terms of the option, by the holder to the issuing corporation for issuing the share.

Example

Facts

In its 2006 taxation year, Corporation X grants an option to Y in return for $1,000 worth of paintings by a little-known Canadian artist. Corporation X does not give cash or any other consideration for the paintings. The option gives Y the right to acquire one share of Corporation X for $10,000 in 2007. (At the time the option is granted one share of Corporation X has a fair market value of $10,000.)

In 2007, Y exercises the option and pays Corporation X $10,000 cash for the share. The share has a fair market value of $15,000 at the time of issue.

Corporation X files its 2007 income tax return on the basis that the cost of the paintings is $5,000, representing the difference between the fair market value of the share when it was issued and the cash paid by Y for the share.

Application of section 143.3

1. On granting the option:

- New subsection 143.3(2) applies to clarify that there is no expenditure by Corporation X resulting from it issuing the option.

2. On the exercise of the option:

When issuing the share on the exercise of the option, new paragraph 143.3(3)(b) ensures that an expenditure, if any, of Corporation X is reduced by $5,000 — being the amount by which

exceeds

$10,000 (the amount paid for the share — see subparagraph (b)(ii)).

However, and as noted in the explanatory note accompanying new subsection 143.3(5), the reductions provided for under subsections 143.3(3) and (4) do not apply to reduce an expenditure if the expenditure itself does not include an amount determined to be excesses described in those subsections.

Related Provisions: 52(3)(a) — Cost of share received as stock dividend excludes amount deductible under 112(1); 143.3(5) — Exceptions.

(4) Non-corporate interests — limitation — In computing a taxpayer's (other than a corporation's) income, taxable income or tax payable or an amount considered to have been paid on account of the taxpayer's tax payable, an expenditure of the taxpayer that would — if this Act were read without reference to this subsection — include an amount because of the taxpayer having issued an interest, or because of an interest being created, in itself at any particular time on or after November 17, 2005 is reduced by

(a) if the issuance or creation of the interest is not a consequence of the exercise of an option, the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the interest at the particular time exceeds

(i) if the transaction under which the interest is issued is a transaction to which paragraph 70(6)(b) or 73(1.01)(c), subsection 97(2) or section 107.4 or 132.2 applies, the amount determined under that provision to be the cost to the taxpayer of the property acquired for the interest; or

(ii) in any other case, the amount of the consideration that is the fair market value of the property transferred to, or the services provided to, the taxpayer for the interest; and

(b) if the issuance or creation of the interest is a consequence of the exercise of an option, the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the interest at the particular time exceeds the amount paid, pursuant to the terms of the option, by the holder to the taxpayer for the interest.

Technical Notes: New subsection 143.3(4) provides for two reductions that apply to a non-corporate taxpayer's expenditure that would — if the Act were read without reference to subsection 143.3(4) — include an amount because the taxpayer (or another taxpayer not dealing at arm's length with the taxpayer) issues or creates an interest in itself at any particular time on or after November 17, 2005. The reductions apply to the taxpayer in computing its income, taxable income or tax payable or an amount considered to have been paid on account of the taxpayer's tax payable.

In general terms, under new paragraph 143.3(4)(a), if the issuance or creation of the interest in a taxpayer is not a consequence of the exercise of an option, the taxpayer is to reduce the expenditure by the amount, if any, by which

(i) the fair market value of the interest

exceeds

(ii) if the transaction under which the interest is issued or created is a transaction to which paragraph 70(6)(b), subsection 97(2), paragraph 73(1.01)(c), subsection 73(1.02), section 107.4 or 132.2 applies, the amount determined under that provision to be the cost to the taxpayer of the property acquired for the interest; or

(iii) in any other case, the amount of the consideration that is the fair market value of the property transferred to, or the services provided to, the taxpayer for the interest.

In addition, under new paragraph 143.3(4)(b), if the issuance or creation of the interest is a consequence of the exercise of an option, the taxpayer is to reduce the expenditure by the amount, if any, by which

exceeds

(ii) the amount paid, pursuant to the terms of the option, by the holder to the taxpayer for the interest.

However, and as noted in the explanatory note accompanying new subsection 143.3(5), the reductions provided for under subsections 143.3(3) and (4) do not apply to reduce an expenditure if the expenditure itself does not include an amount determined to be excesses described in those subsections.

Related Provisions: 143.3(5) — Exceptions.

(5) Clarification — For greater certainty,

(a) subsection (2) does not apply to reduce an expenditure that is a commission, fee or other amount for services rendered by a person as a salesperson, agent or dealer in securities in the course of the issuance of an option;

(b) subsections (3) and (4) do not apply to reduce an expenditure of a taxpayer to the extent that the expenditure does not include an amount determined to be an excess under those subsections;

(c) this section does not apply to determine the cost or capital cost of property determined under subsection 70(6), section 73, 85 or 85.1, subsection 97(2) or section 107.4, 132.2 or 138; and

(d) this section does not apply to determine the amount of a taxpayer's expenditure if the amount of the expenditure as determined under section 69 is less than the amount that would, if this subsection were read without reference to this paragraph, be the amount of the expenditure as determined under this section.

Technical Notes: New subsection 143.3(5) provides four rules for greater certainty.

First, paragraph 143.3(5)(a) clarifies that subsection 143.3(2) does not reduce an expenditure that is a commission, fee or other amount for services rendered by a person as a salesperson, agent or dealer in securities in the course of the issuance of the option.

Second, paragraph 143.3(5)(b) clarifies that subsections 143.3(3) and (4) do not apply to reduce an expenditure to the extent that the expenditure does not include an amount determined to be an excess under those subsections. For example, if a corporation were to issue shares of its capital stock having a fair market value of $100 in consideration for having acquired property or services having a fair market value of $40, no excess exists under paragraph 143.3(3)(a) if the expenditure of the corporation for the property or services claimed by the corporation without reference to section 143.3 is, for income tax purposes, $40. To the extent the corporation seeks to claim an expenditure in excess of that $40, paragraph 143.3(3)(a) would reduce that excess to nil. Paragraph 143.3(5)(b) recognizes that the jurisprudence that would treat an expenditure of the type reduced by subsections 143.3(3) and (4) currently applies only to scientific research and experimental development (SR&ED) tax credits, and is limited to a single decision of the Tax Court of Canada [Alcatel, [2005] 2 C.T.C. 2001 — ed.]. It may very well transpire that future jurisprudence may constrain or eliminate any such expenditure that may be considered to arise in these circumstances.

Third, paragraph 143.3(5)(c) clarifies that section 143.3 does not determine the cost or capital cost of property determined under certain tax-deferral rules. For example, if section 85 deems a transferee corporation that acquires non-depreciable capital property to do so at a cost of $100 in circumstances where the corporation issued a share of its capital stock having a fair market value of $200, this section does not decrease or increase the $100 cost for the property to the corporation, as determined under section 85.

Fourth, paragraph 143.3(5)(d) clarifies that section 143.3 does not determine the amount of a taxpayer's expenditure if the amount of the expenditure as determined under section 69 is less than an amount determined under section 143.3.

Dept. of Finance news release 2005-080, Nov. 17, 2005: Minister of Finance Proposes Amendments Concerning the Income Tax Treatment of Certain Expenditures

Minister of Finance Ralph Goodale today acted to protect the income tax base by ensuring that tax credits and deductions claimed by corporations are appropriate. Specifically, he tabled a Notice of Ways and Means Motion proposing amendments to the Income Tax Act to clarify that the amount of an expenditure allowable to a taxpayer, and upon which a tax credit or deduction may be claimed, is limited to the amount actually disbursed by the taxpayer.

The proposed amendments respond to a recent Tax Court of Canada decision [Alcatel, [2005] 2 C.T.C. 2001 — ed.] involving shares issued under an employee stock option plan. The amount paid by the employees was less than the value of the shares at the time they were issued, and the Court allowed the corporation to treat the difference as a scientific research and experimental development (SR&ED) expenditure qualifying for SR&ED tax credits.

The proposed amendments are designed to ensure that, for income tax purposes, no expenditure will be considered to have been made by a taxpayer except to the extent of an actual outlay or expense incurred by the taxpayer.

A related proposal [220(2.2) — ed.] is meant to ensure that a taxpayer cannot deduct SR&ED expenditures, nor be eligible for investment tax credits, if the taxpayer takes more than the additional 12 months allowed to make a claim under the Income Tax Act.

In general, the proposal related to employee stock options applies to options granted and shares issued on or after today, and the proposal concerning SR&ED and investment tax credit claims applies on and after today.

The attached backgrounder provides additional information about these proposals. References to "Announcement Day" in the proposed legislation and explanatory notes should be read as referring to today's date.

Backgrounder

Canada's income tax system in general provides tax recognition to expenditures incurred to earn income to the extent that a taxpayer disburses, or is obligated to disburse, money or money's worth. However, a recent court decision has brought into question whether there is an expenditure in certain circumstances for which, traditionally, no expenditure had been recognized for income tax purposes. The background to this issue and the Government's proposed response is discussed below.

The Amount of an Expenditure — Disbursement of Money or Money's Worth

The income tax system generally recognizes an expenditure to the extent that a taxpayer has provided consideration in the form of money or money's worth. Examples of non-monetary consideration include the provision of services, the provision of movable or immovable property and the assumption of a liability. The issuance of shares by a corporation, in exchange for the provision of goods or services to it, may also be treated as an expenditure for income tax purposes, but the amount of the expenditure made by the corporation has recently come into question.

The case law has traditionally allowed a corporation in such cases to consolidate two transactions into one: (1) the corporation provides consideration on the acquisition of an asset or service from the other person, and (2) the other person reinvests that consideration in the corporation on the issuance of capital stock of the corporation to the other person. When considered this way, if the other person's obligation to pay the corporation for the issued shares is satisfied with an asset or the provision of services, the corporation is generally considered as having acquired the asset or incurred an expenditure in respect of the asset or services at a cost equal to the amount invested by the other person in the corporation, as reflected in the corporation's share capital.

However, in a February 2005 decision of the Tax Court of Canada [Alcatel, [2005] 2 C.T.C. 2001 — ed.] a corporate taxpayer was allowed to claim an SR&ED tax credit for the amount by which the fair market value of shares issued by the corporation exceeded the exercise price payable to the corporation for its shares under an employee stock option plan. The Tax Court noted that the value of the shares in excess of the exercise price did not increase the share capital. In other words, while the excess was not an amount invested in the corporation within the parameters of the above-mentioned traditional approach to providing cost recognition, the Tax Court found that the excess was an expenditure for SR&ED tax credit purposes.

Such excesses do not represent an outlay of a corporation; rather, they generally represent a dilution of the value of the share equity of the other shareholders of the corporation. Such excesses were not intended to be considered expenditures under the SR&ED tax incentive program.

The rules announced today clarify that such an excess will not be recognized as an expenditure for income tax purposes. Similar clarifying rules are provided for cases involving the issuance of interests in partnerships and trusts. As well, the rules clarify that no expenditure arises solely by virtue of a taxpayer granting an option to acquire an interest in itself.

(ii) was not designated by the trust in respect of any other employee who was a beneficiary under the plan, shall, if so designated by the trust in respect of the particular employee in its return of income for the year under this Part, be deemed to be income of the particular employee for the taxation year from sources in that country; and

(b) an employee who is a beneficiary under an employees profit sharing plan shall be deemed to have paid as non-business-income tax for a taxation year, on the income that the employee is deemed by paragraph (a) to have for the year from sources in a foreign country, to the government of that country an amount equal to that proportion of the non-business-income tax paid by the trust governed by the plan for the year to the government of that country, or to the government of a state, province or other political subdivision of that country (except such portion of that tax as was deductible under subsection 20(11) in computing its income for the year) that

(i) the income that the employee is deemed by paragraph (a) to have for the year from sources in that country

is of

(ii) the income of the trust for the year from sources (other than businesses carried on by it) in that country.

(8.2) [Repealed]

History: Subsec. 144(8.2) repealed by 1994, c. 21, subsec. 68(3), applicable to 1992 et seq., except that a taxpayer may elect that the repeal not apply to the taxpayer's 1992 taxation year by so notifying Revenue Canada in writing before the end of December 1994. That subsec. formerly read:

(8.2) Where interest has been included in computing the income of a trust for a taxation year during which the trust was governed by an employees profit sharing plan, and there has been allocated by the trustee under the plan for the purposes of this subsection an amount for the year to one or more of the employees who are beneficiaries under the plan, which amount or the total of which amounts does not exceed the amount of the interest so included, each of the employees who are beneficiaries under the plan shall be deemed to have received interest equal to the lesser of

(a) the amount, if any, that would be included in computing the employee's income for the year by virtue of this section, if this section were read without reference to paragraph (3)(f), and

(b) the amount, if any, so allocated for the purposes of this subsection to the employee.

(9) Deduction for forfeited amounts — Where a person ceases at any time in a taxation year to be a beneficiary under an employees profit sharing plan and does not become a beneficiary under the plan after that time and in the year, there may be deducted in computing the person's income for the year the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount included in computing the person's income for the year or a preceding taxation year (other than an amount received before that time under the plan or an amount under the plan that the person is entitled at that time to receive) because of an allocation (other than an allocation to which subsection (4) applies) to the person made contingently under the plan before that time;

B is the portion, if any, of the value of A that is included in the value of A because of paragraph 82(1)(b);

C is the total of all taxable dividends deemed to be received by the person because of allocations under subsection (8) in respect of the plan; and

D is the total of all amounts deductible under this subsection in computing the person's income for a preceding taxation year because the person ceased to be a beneficiary under the plan in a preceding taxation year.

Related Provisions: 8(1)(o.1) — Deduction from employment income; 144(3) — Allocation contingent or absolute taxable; 144(10) — Payments out of profits; 152(1) — Assessment; 160.1 — Where excess refunded; 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

History: Subsec. 144(9) substituted by 1994, c. 21, subsec. 68(4), applicable to 1992 et seq., except that a taxpayer may elect that the subsec. not apply to the taxpayer's 1992 taxation year by notifying Revenue Canada in writing before the end of December 1994. That subsec. formerly read:

(9) Refunds — For the purposes of section 164, where an employee who is a beneficiary under an employees profit sharing plan ceases, at any time in a taxation year, to be a beneficiary thereunder, and it is established that

(a) there has been included in computing the income of the employee for that or a previous taxation year an amount by virtue of any allocation made to the employee contingently by the trustee under the plan prior to the time the employee ceased to be a beneficiary thereunder, and

(b) the employee has not at any time received that amount from the trustee under the plan and is not, under the plan, entitled to receive that amount, the employee shall be deemed to have made, at the time the employee ceased to be a beneficiary under the plan, a payment equal to 15% of that amount on account of tax under this Part for the taxation year in which the employee ceased to be a beneficiary under the plan.

(10) Payments out of profits — Where the terms of an arrangement under which an employer makes payments to a trustee specifically provide that the payments shall be made "out of profits", the arrangement shall, if the employer so elects in prescribed manner, be deemed, for the purpose of subsection (1), to be an arrangement under which payments computed by reference to the employer's profits are required.

Related Provisions: 87(2)(r) — Amalgamation — election by predecessor deemed made by new corporation.

History: Subsec. 144(10) substituted by 1994, c. 21, subsec. 68(4), applicable to 1992 et seq. That subsec. formerly read:

(10) Where the terms of an arrangement under which an employer makes payments to a trustee specifically provide that the payments shall be made "out of profits", the arrangement shall, if the employer has so elected in prescribed manner, be deemed, for the purpose of subsection (1), to be an arrangement for payments "computed by reference to an employer's profits from the employer's business".

(11) Taxation year of trust — Where an employees profit sharing plan is accepted for registration by the Minister as a deferred profit sharing plan, the taxation year of the trust governed by the employees profit sharing plan shall be deemed to have ended immediately before the plan is deemed to have become registered as a deferred profit sharing plan pursuant to subsection 147(5).

Proposed Addition — 144.1

144.1 Employee life and health trust — (1) Definitions — The following definitions apply in this section.

"designated employee benefit" means a benefit from a group sickness or accident insurance plan, a group term life insurance policy or a private health services plan.

Technical Notes: Division G of Part I of the Act deals with Deferred and Special Income Arrangements. Division G is amended to introduce a new section, section 144.1, dealing with employee life and health trusts (ELHTs), a new type of taxable inter vivos trust. These amendments apply to trusts established after 2009.

New subsection 144.1(1) provides definitions that apply for the purposes of new section 144.1.

"Designated employee benefits" are a subset of the benefits listed in subparagraph 6(1)(a)(i) and may be described generally as health and insurance benefits. Pursuant to subsection 144.1(2), an ELHT is required to have as its only object (other than on wind-up) the provision of designated employee benefits for employees. For this purpose, the investment and management of funds and administration of arrangements for benefit payments would be considered to be activities performed in furtherance of the object of providing designated employee benefits, provided that the investment, management and administration were reasonably related to the provision of the benefits.

Related Provisions: 6(1)(a)(i) — Benefits non-taxable; 6(1)(g)(iv) — DEB excluded from employee benefit plan benefits; 144.1(2)(a) — Paying DEB must be only object of ELHT.

"employee" means a current or former employee of an employer and includes an individual in respect of whom the employer has assumed responsibility for the provision of designated employee benefits as a result of the acquisition by the employer of a business in which the individual was employed.

Technical Notes: "Employee" is defined to include both current and former employees. The inclusion of former employees is intended to accommodate the provision of benefits to retirees, as well as to past employees (for example, in the context of business divestitures). The definition also includes individuals for whom an employer has assumed the responsibility of providing designated employee benefits as a result of a business acquisition. This could be relevant, for example, if a retired individual's employer has been acquired by a new corporation and the new corporation has assumed responsibility for the payment of designated employee benefits for retirees of the acquired employer.

"key employee", of an employer in respect of a taxation year, means an employee who

(a) was at any time in the taxation year or in a preceding taxation year, a specified employee of the employer; or

(b) was an employee whose employment income from the employer in any two of the five taxation years preceding the year exceeded five times the Year's Maximum Pensionable Earnings (as determined under section 18 of the Canada Pension Plan) for the calendar year in which the employment income was earned.

Technical Notes: "Key employee" means an employee who is either a "specified employee" (as defined in subsection 248(1)) or a high-income employee. For this purpose, a high-income employee is an employee whose earnings for any two of the five preceding years exceeded five times the year's maximum pensionable earnings (YMPE) for Canada Pension Plan purposes. YMPE for 2009 was $46,300 and for 2010 is $47,200.

A trust which includes key employees as beneficiaries must ensure that it satisfies the conditions in paragraphs 144.1(2)(d) and (e) in order to retain its status as an employee life and health trust. For more detail, please refer to the commentary on those paragraphs.

Related Provisions: 144.1(2)(d) — ELHT must not be maintained primarily for key employees; 144.1(2)(e) — Key employees must not have more rights than other members.

(2) Employee life and health trust — A trust that is established for employees of one or more employers (each referred to in this subsection as a "participating employer") is an employee life and health trust for a taxation year if, throughout the taxation year, it meets the following conditions:

(a) the only objects of the trust are

(i) to provide designated employee benefits to, or for the benefit of, employees of a participating employer, and

(ii) to benefit on a pro rata basis any remaining beneficiaries of the trust (excluding key employees) on wind-up;

(b) the trust is resident in Canada, determined without reference to section 94;

(c) each beneficiary of the trust is

(i) an employee of a participating employer,

(ii) an individual who is or was related to an employee of a participating employer, or

(iii) another employee life and health trust;

(d) it cannot reasonably be considered, having regard to all circumstances, that the trust is maintained primarily for the benefit of one or more key employees of a participating employer;

(e) the rights under the trust of each key employee of a participating employer are not more advantageous than the rights of each member of a class of beneficiaries under the trust, where

(i) the members of the class represent at least 25% of all of the beneficiaries of the trust who are employees of the participating employer,

(ii) at least 75% of the members of the class are not key employees of the participating employer, and

(iii) the rights of each member of the class under the trust are identical;

(f) the terms of the trust do not provide any rights to a participating employer or to any person who does not deal at arm's length with a participating employer, as a beneficiary or otherwise, except rights to designated employee benefits;

(g) the trust is administered in accordance with its terms and objects;

(h) the trust has a legal right to enforce payment of contributions to the trust; and

(i) representatives of one or more participating employers do not constitute the majority of the trustees of the trust.

Technical Notes: New subsection 144.1(2) sets out the conditions that must be met throughout a taxation year in order for a trust to qualify as an ELHT. Because these conditions must be met throughout the year, a trust which fails to satisfy one or more of the conditions at any time during the year will lose its employee life and health trust status for that taxation year. This loss of status could have consequences both for the trust itself and for employers who have contributed to the trust.

Paragraph (a) requires that the trust's objects be limited to the provision of designated employee benefits and to dealing with any remaining funds in the trust on wind-up. In this regard, it is intended that all activities that are reasonably related to providing designated employee benefits, such as managing investments, administering payments, and similar supporting activities, be considered to be activities that further the trust's object of providing designated employee benefits.

Paragraph (b) requires that the trust be resident in Canada, under ordinary principles of tax residency for trusts.

Paragraph (c) generally requires that each beneficiary of the trust be an employee, a person related to an employee or another employee life and health trust.

Paragraph (d) requires, in general terms, that the trust be maintained primarily for the benefit of beneficiaries who are not key employees.

Paragraph (e) requires, in general terms, that key employees who are beneficiaries of an ELHT be treated the same way as a significant proportion of the non-key employee beneficiaries under the ELHT, but allows a trust to have different classes of beneficiaries with potentially different entitlements. In particular, key employees of an employer are required to have the same rights as are provided to a class of beneficiaries, which class represents at least 25% of all of the beneficiaries of the ELHT in respect of the employer. In addition, at least 75% of the members of the class must be non-key employees of the employer. As well, the rights of each member of the class are required to be identical.

It is possible to comply with this rule either by including key employees in a broader class that meets the conditions in subparagraphs (e)(i) to (iii), or by establishing a separate class for key employees which has the same (or less advantageous) rights as another class that meets the conditions in subparagraphs (e)(i) to (iii).

Paragraph (f) generally provides that the trust must not provide any rights to an employer (or to a person not dealing at arm's length with the employer). An exception is provided for the provision of designated employee benefits to a person not dealing at arm's length with the employer. For example, this exception would permit the controlling shareholder of an employer who is also an employee of the employer, or her spouse, to receive designated employee benefits under the trust.

Paragraph (g) requires that the trust be administered in accordance with its terms. So, for example, if the trustees of a trust that complied with paragraph (f) described above breached the terms of the trust by making a distribution to the employer (not as a designated employee benefit), the trust would not meet the condition in paragraph (g) and would lose its ELHT status for the year.

Paragraphs (h) and (i) are intended to ensure that the trust operates independently from the employer. Given that employer contributions to the trust are, subject to the provisions of subsections 144.1(3) to (5), deductible by the employer, it is important that the related employer liability be a legally enforceable one, with the trust able to enforce payment of contributions in the event of default. Paragraph (i) requires that employer representatives not form a majority of the trustees of the trust.

Related Provisions: 6(1)(a)(i) — Employer contributions to ELHT are not a taxable benefit; 75(3)(b) — Reversionary trust rules do not apply to ELHT; 104(6)(a.4) — Deduction to trust for designated employee benefits payable; 107.1(a) — Distribution of property by ELHT deemed at FMV; 108(1)“trust”(a) — “Trust” does not include an ELHT for certain purposes; 127.55(f)(iv) — No minimum tax on ELHT; 144.1(9) — Deemed separate trusts where more than one employer; 248(1)“employee benefit plan”(a) — EHLT deemed not to be EBP; 248(1)“retirement compensation arrangement”(f.1) — EHLT deemed not to be RCA; 248(1)“salary deferral arrangement”(e.1) — EHLT deemed not to be SDA; 248(1)“employee life and health trust” — Definition applies to entire Act.

(3) Deductibility of employer contributions — No amount may be deducted in a taxation year by an employer in computing its income for the taxation year in respect of its contributions to an employee life and health trust except to the extent that the amount may reasonably be regarded as having been contributed to fund designated employee benefits payable in the year to, or for the benefit of, its employees.

Technical Notes: New subsection 144.1(3) prohibits an employer from claiming a deduction in respect of its contributions to an ELHT, except to the extent that the contribution relates to designated employee benefits that are payable in the same year as the contribution. In other words, subsection 144.1(3) specifies that employer contributions that relate to liabilities to make employee benefit payments in future years are not deductible in the year the contributions are made.

Related Provisions: 6(1)(a)(i) — Employer contributions to ELHT are not a taxable benefit; 18(1)(o.3) — No deduction to ELHT except as permitted by 144.1(3)–(5); 20(1)(s) — Deduction under 144.1(3) allowed as deduction from employer's business income; 144.1(5) — Maximum deductible; 144.1(6) — Issuance of indebtedness is not contribution until paid.

(4) Deductibility — subsequent years — The portion of any contribution made to an employee life and health trust that would, in the absence of subsection (3) and paragraph 18(9)(a), be deductible in computing an employer's income for a taxation year is deductible in computing the employer's income for the subsequent year in which the related designated employee benefits become payable to, or for the benefit of, its employees.

Technical Notes: New subsection 144.1(4) provides that otherwise-deductible amounts, that are not deductible because of subsection (3) and paragraph 18(9)(a), are deductible in the later year to which they reasonably relate.

Related Provisions: 6(1)(a)(i) — Employer contributions to ELHT are not a taxable benefit; 18(1)(o.3) — No deduction to ELHT except as permitted by 144.1(3)–(5); 20(1)(s) — Deduction under 144.1(3) allowed as deduction from business income.

(5) Maximum deductible — The amount deducted in a taxation year by an employer in computing its income in respect of contributions made to an employee life and health trust shall not exceed the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts contributed by the employer to the trust in the year or in a preceding taxation year, and

B is the total of all amounts deducted by the employer in a preceding taxation year in respect of amounts contributed by the employer to the trust.

Technical Notes: New subsection 144.1(5) generally provides that the total amount deducted by an employer in all taxation years in respect of contributions made to an ELHT may not exceed the total amount contributed by the employer to the ELHT. This rule is intended to prevent an employer from attempting to claim a deduction in the later years of a pre-funded ELHT in respect of amounts related to inflation, income earned by the trust or to higher than anticipated benefit payments which are facilitated by strong investment performance within the trust.

Example:

An employer contributes $50 million to an ELHT. The trust assumes responsibility for health plan benefits payments for all employees who commenced employment before 1990. Actuarial projections indicate that the trust expects to pay out $50 million in benefits within the first 13 years of its operations, although the life of the trust is expected to be at least 35 years. The benefit payments in later years will be possible because the trust will have been earning investment income throughout its life. Even though the trust is still making benefit payments in those later years, no amount is deductible by the employer once its original contribution of $50 million has been claimed over the years.

Related Provisions: 6(1)(a)(i) — Employer contributions to ELHT are not a taxable benefit; 18(1)(o.3) — No deduction to ELHT except as permitted by 144.1(3)–(5); 20(1)(s) — Deduction under 144.1(3) allowed as deduction from employer's business income; 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

(6) Employer promissory note — If an employer issues a promissory note or provides other evidence of its indebtedness to an employee life and health trust in respect of its obligation to the trust,

(a) the issuance of the note or the provision of the evidence of indebtedness to the trust is not a contribution to the trust; and

(b) a payment by the employer to the trust in full or partial satisfaction of its liability under the note or the evidence of indebtedness, whether stated to be of principal or interest or any other amount, is deemed to be an employer contribution to the trust that is subject to this section.

Technical Notes: New subsection 144.1(6) deals with the special situation of an employer who issues promissory notes to an ELHT in relation to the employer's obligation to make contributions to the ELHT. Interest payable by the employer on such notes would not normally be deductible under paragraph 20(1)(c), because the interest is not payable on “borrowed money”.

Moreover, treating the notes as an investment asset of the trust would cause interest payable to be treated as trust income and, depending on the structure of the notes, could cause the trust to be liable for income tax, under the interest accrual rules in section 12, before it had received any payments on the notes.

The new rules in subsection 144.1(6) provide relief from these results by deeming the payments on the notes, whether payments of interest or principal, to be contributions to the trust, the tax treatment of which is governed by section 144.1 (and therefore not by paragraph 20(1)(c) or the interest accrual rules).

Example:

Acme Corporation and the union that represents most of its employees decide to restructure Acme's employee health benefit obligations by establishing an ELHT. The parties calculate that the present value of Acme's health benefit obligations is $10 million. Acme agrees to contribute $3 million in year 1, and to provide the trust with a promissory note bearing 6% simple interest in relation to the remaining

$7 million obligation. Interest will accrue annually but no amount is payable on the note in respect of principal or interest until after the end of year 3. The note matures in year 5. Acme's payment schedule is approximately as follows:

Year	Acme Payment to Trust	Acme Deduction
1	$3 million — first trust contribution	$750,000
2	0	$750,000
3	0	$750,000
4	$3.26 million (representing 3 years' interest plus a $2 million principal repayment in respect of promissory note)	$750,000
5	$5.6 million (retiring the note with the remaining interest and principal outstanding)	$750,000

The parties have also projected that the trust's benefit payments will be approximately $750,000 per year for each of these years. Because of the application of new subsection 144.1(3), Acme's deduction in year 1 is limited to $750,000. Subsection 144.1(4) will apply to allow Acme a $750,000 deduction in each of years 2 and 3, leaving $750,000 of the original $3 million contribution undeducted after the end of year 3. In year 4, Acme deducts another $750,000, leaving $3.26 million in undeducted trust contributions to be deducted in future years. In year 5, again $750,000 is deductible for Acme, with the remaining contributions, plus the undeducted balance from year 4, deductible in later years.

The trust will receive all of the payments as capital contributions to the trust.

(7) Employee contributions — For the purposes of paragraph 6(1)(f), subsection 6(4) and paragraph 118.2(2)(q), employee contributions to an employee life and health trust, to the extent that they are, and are identified by the trust at the time of contribution as, contributions in respect of a particular designated employee benefit, are deemed to be payments by the employee in respect of the particular designated employee benefit.

Technical Notes: New subsection 144.1(7) provides a method of looking through the trust in respect of employee contributions, to the extent that the contributions could receive particular tax treatment (for example, eligibility for the medical expense tax credit) if made directly for a particular benefit rather than through the trust. For this purpose, the trust must identify the contributions as contributions in respect of a particular designated employee benefit at the time they are made. It is anticipated that this will be achieved in most cases by the trust notifying the employer and the employer reporting the contributions on the employee's pay stub.

(8) Income inclusion — If a trust that is, or was, at any time, an employee life and health trust pays an amount as a distribution from the trust to any person in a taxation year, the amount of the distribution shall be included in computing the person's income for the year, except to the extent that the amount is

- (a) a payment of a designated employee benefit; or
- (b) a distribution to another employee life and health trust that is a beneficiary of the employee life and health trust.

Technical Notes: New subsection 144.1(8) requires that any amount received from a trust that is or was an ELHT be included in income, unless the amount was received as the payment of a "designated employee benefit". It is anticipated that this income inclusion would most frequently apply on the wind-up of an ELHT to a distribution of residual surplus, or to a payment to a non-qualifying beneficiary of a former ELHT, such as an employer.

Related Provisions: 6(1)(a)(i) — Benefits, non-taxable; 56(1)(z.2) — Amount under 144.1(8) included in income unless taxed under 70(2); 75(3)(b) — Reversionary trust rules do not apply to ELHT; 107.1(a) — Distribution of property by ELHT deemed at FMV; 111(7.3)–(7.5); 144.1(10) — Non-capital losses of ELHT; 128.1(10) "excluded right or interest" (a)(vi.1) — No deemed disposition of rights on emigration or immigration of beneficiary; 153(1)(s) — Withholding of tax at source; 212(1)(w) — Withholding tax on payment to non-resident.

(9) Deemed separate trusts — Where contributions have been received by an employee life and health trust from more than one employer, the trust is deemed to be a separate trust in respect of the property held for the benefit of beneficiaries described in paragraph (2)(c) in respect of a particular employer, if

- (a) the trustee designates the property to be held in a separate trust for the benefit of those beneficiaries in an election made on or before the filing-due date of the first taxation year of the separate trust described in this subsection; and
- (b) under the terms of the trust, contributions from the employer and the income derived from those contributions accrues solely for the benefit of those beneficiaries.

Technical Notes: New subsection 144.1(9) allows an ELHT that administers employee benefits on behalf of employees of more than one employer to elect to be treated for income tax purposes as two or more separate trusts provided that it satisfies the conditions in paragraphs (a) and (b). Paragraph (a) requires that the trust designate the property being held on behalf of each group of employees in an election filed by its filing-due date for the first taxation year of what will be the deemed separate trust. Paragraph (b) requires that the trust terms stipulate that contributions to the trust from one employer accrue only to the benefit of that employer's employees.

(10) Non-capital losses — No non-capital loss is deductible by an employee life and health trust in computing its taxable income for a taxation year, except as provided by subsections 111(7.3) to (7.5).

Technical Notes: New subsection 144.1(10) provides that non-capital losses of ELHTs are only deductible to the extent provided by new subsections 111(7.3) to (7.5). For more information, see the commentary on those provisions.

Application: The February 26, 2010 draft legislation (ELHTs), s. 13, will add s. 144.1, applicable to trusts established after 2009.

Dept. of Finance news release 2010-016, Feb. 26, 2010: The Honourable Jim Flaherty, Minister of Finance, today announced his intention to propose amendments to the Income Tax Act to accommodate employee life and health trusts.

"These proposed amendments will ensure that a fair and neutral tax regime applies to employee life and health trusts," said Minister Flaherty. "The Government of Canada remains committed to a fair and competitive tax system."

The proposed amendments would:

- Create a new type of taxable trust in the Income Tax Act, an employee life and health trust;
- Provide rules regarding the timing of deductions of any pre-funding of such a trust by an employer;
- Allow the trust to deduct in computing its income all amounts paid from the trust to employees or retirees in respect of benefits, even if employees receive those amounts tax-free;
- Provide rules governing the carryback and carryforward of any losses arising after the deduction of employee benefit payments by the trust;
- Preserve the same tax treatment for employee benefits received from the trust as if they had been received directly from the employer (many types of health and welfare employment benefits are tax-exempt for employees under the existing income tax rules); and
- Provide special rules applicable to employee life and health trusts whose beneficiaries include employee shareholders, highly compensated employees or related persons to ensure that the trusts do not offer unfair advantages to these individuals.

The proposed amendments would apply to trusts established after 2009. A more detailed overview of the proposed amendments can be found in the accompanying background.

Draft legislative amendments to implement these proposals, together with explanatory notes, also accompany this release. Amendments to regulations regarding withholding and reporting in relation to employee benefits paid by employee life and health trusts will be brought forward when the legislation is introduced.

The Government intends to introduce legislation in respect of these proposals at an early opportunity. Consequently, any comments on the attached draft proposals are requested by April 30, 2010. Comments may be submitted to the Tax Legislation Division of the Department of Finance.

For further information, media may contact: Annette Robertson, Press Secretary, Office of the Minister of Finance, 613-996-7861; Jack Aubry, Media Relations, Department of Finance, 613-996-8080.

Background

In general terms, the proposed amendments would allow amounts paid to employees and retirees from an "employee life and health trust" to be deducted in computing the trust's income. At the same time, the benefits would receive the same tax treatment (generally tax-free) in the hands of employees as if they had been paid directly by the employer. If the trust's costs (including payments to employees) exceed its revenue for a particular year, the excess will be treated as a business loss for the trust, subject to a special three-year carryback and carryforward mechanism.

More details are provided below. Other aspects of the proposed tax treatment are in most respects similar to the existing income tax law and policy that currently applies in the area of health and welfare trusts for employees.

Definitions

Under the proposals, an "employee life and health trust" is generally defined in the Income Tax Act (the "Act") as a trust, established by one or more employers, that meets a number of conditions. "Designated employee benefits" are defined to mean any combination of group sickness or accident benefits, private health services plan benefits or group term life insurance benefits for employees or former employees of an employer provided through a plan of insurance (including a self-funded plan of insurance). In general terms, the trust would have to meet the following conditions throughout any taxation year that it wished to benefit from employee life and health trust status:

- Its objects must be limited to the provision of designated employee benefits, and paying out any remaining surplus on wind-up;
- It must be a Canadian resident trust;
- All beneficiaries must be employees or former employees of an employer, dependants of those employees, or another employee life and health trust;
- The trust must be maintained primarily for the benefit of ordinary employees (and not "key employees" — a new defined term under the rules);
- Key employees must generally be treated the same as other employees under the trust;
- Employers generally may not have any rights to distributions from the trust; and
- Employer representatives may not constitute a majority of the trustees of the trust.

Under the proposals, no deduction would be permitted in a taxation year for the portion of an employer contribution to the trust made in the taxation year which related to anything other than designated employee benefits being provided in that year. Instead, the portion of the pre-funding, if any, that relates to designated employee benefit payments in a given future taxation year could be deducted in that future year. As a result of these rules, employer contributions to the trust in excess of the amount that is actuarially determined to be necessary to fund the contemplated benefits being provided over the life of the trust would not be deductible in any year.

To the extent that an obligation to the trust is satisfied with the issuance and contribution to the trust of a promissory note (or similar evidence of indebtedness) of the employer or a related party, payments in respect of any portion of the principal amount evidenced by the promissory note, or interest thereon, shall be deemed to be payments in satisfaction of the employer's liability to the trust, and not payments of principal or interest. From the employer's perspective these payments will, provided they are made in order to fund the payment of designated employee benefits and subject to normal tax rules, generally be deductible in the later of the year to which the portion relates and the year in which the payment to the trust is made.

Employer contributions

Employee contributions would be permitted but not required, and would not be deductible by employees, but could qualify for the medical expense tax credit, to the extent that they are contributions to a private health services plan. Similarly, employee contributions to a wage loss replacement plan that is administered by the employee life and health trust would reduce the taxable portion of any wage loss replacement received from the trust.

Unevenness of trust revenues and expenses

Trust distributions to beneficiaries in a year that exceed the trust's income for that year normally are treated as distributions of trust capital with no other income tax impact. However, an employee life and health trust would be permitted to treat employee benefit payments as expenses. If the trust's expenses exceed its revenue for a particular year, the excess would be treated as a type of loss of the trust, with special rules allowing it to be deductible against income in any of the three preceding or three following taxation years, provided that the trust retained its status as an employee life and health trust for the year.

Treatment of benefits in the hands of employees

Of the "designated employee benefits" described above, some are currently taxable in the hands of employees on receipt (i.e., benefits under a wage loss replacement plan or coverage under a group term life insurance policy), while others are generally tax-exempt when received by employees. Either taxable or tax-exempt benefits, or a combination of the two, could be provided through an employee life and health trust, but their tax treatment in the hands of employees would not change due to the existence of the trust.

For example, private health services benefits would generally be tax-exempt in the hands of the employees, while disability insurance payments would generally be taxable. No benefit would be considered to be received or enjoyed by an employee because of an employer contribution to the trust, except to the extent that the trust provides group term life insurance coverage. The value of group term life insurance coverage is currently a taxable employment benefit during each year of coverage, while life insurance proceeds received on death are generally tax-exempt. This tax treatment would be preserved when similar benefits are provided through the trust.

Payments made on the wind-up of the trust, otherwise than for the provision of designated employee benefits, would be taxable to the recipient.

To the extent that a particular benefit is taxable to the employee, the benefit paid from the trust would be required to be reported as an employment benefit and not as a trust distribution.

Part XIII Tax

Part XIII of the Income Tax Act imposes certain taxes on the income of a non-resident from Canadian sources. Distributions that are payments of designated employee benefits from an employee life and health trust to non-resident employees or former employees will generally not be subject to tax under Part XIII.

(1.1) Restriction — financially dependent — For the purpose of paragraph (b) of the definition “refund of premiums” in subsection (1), clause 60(l)(v)(B.01) and subparagraph 104(27)(e)(i), it is assumed, unless the contrary is established, that an individual’s child or grandchild was not financially dependent on the individual for support immediately before the individual’s death if the income of the child or grandchild for the taxation year preceding the taxation year in which the individual died exceeded the amount determined by the formula

A is the amount used under paragraph (c) of the description of B in subsection 118(1) for that preceding taxation year; and

B is nil, unless the financial dependency was because of mental or physical infirmity, in which case it is $6,180 adjusted for each such preceding taxation year that is after 2002 in the manner set out in section 117.1.

History: Subsec. 146(1.1) added by 2003, c. 15, subsec. 82(3), applicable in respect of deaths that occur after 2002.

(b.4) the plan does not provide for maturity after the end of the year in which the annuitant attains 71 years of age;

(c.2) the plan requires the commutation of each annuity payable thereunder that would otherwise become payable to a person other than an annuitant under the plan;

(c.3) the plan, where it involves a depositary, includes provisions stipulating that

(i) the depositary has no right of offset as regards the property held under the plan in connection with any debt or obligation owing to the depositary; and

(8.1) Deemed receipt of refund of premiums — Where a portion of an amount paid out of or under a registered retirement savings plan of a deceased annuitant to the annuitant's legal representative would have been a refund of premiums if it had been paid under the plan to a beneficiary of the deceased's estate, it is, to the extent it is so designated jointly by the legal representative and the beneficiary in prescribed form filed with the Minister, deemed to be received by the beneficiary (and not by the legal representative) at the time it was so paid as a benefit that is a refund of premiums.

Proposed Amendment — 146(8.1)

(8.1) Deemed receipt of refund of premiums — Where a payment out of or under a registered retirement savings plan of a deceased annuitant to the annuitant's legal representative would have been a refund of premiums if it had been paid under the plan to an individual who is a beneficiary (as defined in subsection 108(1)) under the deceased's estate, the payment is, to the extent it is so designated jointly by the legal representative and the individual in prescribed form filed with the Minister, deemed to be received by the individual (and not by the legal representative) at the time it was so paid as a benefit that is a refund of premiums.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 141(6), will amend subsec. 146(8.1) to read as above, applicable after 1988 except that, before 1999, it is to be read as follows:

(8.1) Such portion of an amount paid in a taxation year out of or under a registered retirement savings plan of a deceased annuitant to the annuitant's legal representative as, had that portion been paid under the plan to an individual who is a beneficiary (as defined in subsection 108(1)) under the deceased's estate, would have been a refund of premiums is, to the extent it is so designated jointly by the legal representative and the individual in prescribed form filed with the Minister, deemed to be received by the individual in the year as a benefit that is a refund of premiums.

Technical Notes: Subsection 146(8.1) deals with situations in which an amount paid from a deceased individual's RRSP to the individual's estate would have been a "refund of premiums" if it had been paid by the RRSP to a beneficiary under the estate. An amount paid out of an RRSP as a consequence of the death of the annuitant is defined, by subsection 146(1), to be a "refund of premiums" if the recipient was, immediately before the death of the RRSP annuitant, a spouse or common-law partner of the annuitant or a financially dependent child or grandchild of the annuitant.

Subsection 146(8.1) allows the legal representative of a deceased RRSP annuitant's estate and a qualifying beneficiary under the estate to elect jointly to have the RRSP proceeds that were paid to the estate treated as a refund of premiums received by the beneficiary from the RRSP. When such an election is made, the beneficiary may include the deemed refund of premiums in income. If a corresponding amount is used to acquire a qualifying annuity or is paid into an RRSP or registered retirement income fund of the beneficiary and certain other conditions are satisfied, the beneficiary will be entitled to an offsetting deduction under paragraph 60(1).

Subsection 146(8.1) is amended to provide that the expression "beneficiary" under a deceased RRSP annuitant's estate has the meaning assigned by subsection 108(1). This has the effect of extending the provisions of subsection 146(8.1) to an individual who is "beneficially interested" in a deceased RRSP annuitant's estate (as defined in subsection 248(25)), but who is not a beneficiary under the estate. This could occur, for example, where an individual has only an indirect interest in the deceased RRSP annuitant's estate by virtue of being a beneficiary under a trust that is a beneficiary under the estate — a structure typically contemplated in the estate planning of parents of mentally infirm children.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, April 20, 2005:

Ms. Lucie Beauchemin, Raymond Chabot Grant Thornton, LLP, Montréal, QC

Dear Ms. Beauchemin:

This is in reply to your letter of January 25, 2005 concerning proposed amendments to paragraph 60(1) of the Income Tax Act, released by the Department of Finance on February 27, 2004. In general terms, the proposed amendments are intended to accommodate a tax-deferred rollover of the proceeds of a deceased individual's RRSP where the proceeds are used to acquire a life annuity under which a qualifying trust for a qualifying infirm individual is the annuitant.

You suggest that additional legislative amendments are needed in order to give effect to the stated intent of the proposed amendments. In this regard, you describe (in your letter and in the Ruling Request to which you make reference) a situation in which the proceeds of a deceased individual's RRSP are transferred to the deceased individual's legal representative. The funds are then used by the deceased's estate to acquire an annuity under which the annuitant is a testamentary trust created under the will of the deceased. A mentally infirm financially dependent child of the deceased is, during the child's lifetime, the sole beneficiary of the testamentary trust. While the child does not have a direct interest in the deceased individual's estate, the child is "beneficially interested" in the estate, within the meaning assigned by subsection 248(25) of the Act, by virtue of being a beneficiary of the testamentary trust, which is, in turn, a beneficiary of the estate.

You are concerned, in particular, with subsection 146(8.1) of the Act. That subsection allows a beneficiary of a deceased individual's estate and the legal representative of the deceased individual to make a joint election to treat proceeds received by the estate from the deceased individual's RRSP as having been received by the beneficiary as a "refund of premiums" (as defined in subsection 146(1) of the Act), to the extent that the proceeds would have been a "refund of premiums" had they been received directly by the beneficiary. When such an election is made, the proceeds are included in the beneficiary's income and, if the proceeds are used as provided for under paragraph 60(1), an offsetting deduction is allowed.

In some situations, the Act extends the normal meaning of beneficiary so that a reference to a beneficiary of a trust or estate includes an individual who is not a direct beneficiary of the trust or estate but who is beneficially interested in the trust or estate. This extended meaning of "beneficiary" does not apply, however, for subsection 146(8.1). Thus, in the situation you describe, no election can be made to treat the RRSP proceeds as having been received by the child as a refund of premiums. Moreover, while the testamentary trust is itself a beneficiary of the estate, no election can be made to treat the testamentary trust as having received a refund of premiums. This is because there is no provision in the Act that would treat proceeds paid directly from the deceased annuitant's RRSP to the testamentary trust as being a refund of premiums received by the trust. As there is no possibility of having the deceased individual's RRSP proceeds treated as a refund of premiums, no rollover under paragraph 60(1) of the Act is available.

I agree that it is not appropriate that a rollover under paragraph 60(l) be denied simply because the child's interest in the deceased annuitant's estate is not a direct interest. I am prepared, therefore, to recommend to the Minister of Finance that subsection 146(8.1) of the Act be amended to extend the meaning of "beneficiary", for the purposes of that subsection, to include persons who are beneficially interested (within the meaning assigned by subsection 248(25) of the Act) in the estate of the deceased individual. This would ensure that, in the situation you describe, an election can be made under subsection 146(8.1) to treat the child of the deceased RRSP annuitant as having received a refund of premiums from the RRSP. I am also prepared to recommend that the Act be amended to clarify that the amount paid to acquire the annuity, whether paid by the estate or by the trust that is the annuitant under the annuity, be treated as having been paid on behalf of the child, thus ensuring that the requirements of paragraph 60(l) in this regard can be met and that the child is not denied the deduction thereunder for the purchase price of the annuity. I will also recommend that these proposed amendments apply as of the effective date of the previously proposed amendments to paragraph 60(l).

You have also asked that consideration be given to amending the Act to allow the trust (rather than the child) that is a direct beneficiary of the estate to include the refund of premiums in its income and to claim the offsetting deduction under paragraph 60(l). Such a measure would go beyond the intended scope of the proposed amendments released in February 2004 and is not something that I could recommend at this time.

While I cannot offer any assurance that the legislative amendments that we intend to recommend will be adopted, I trust that this statement of our position is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(13.2) Maturity after age 69 — For the purpose of subsection (12), where a retirement savings plan accepted for registration before 1997 does not mature by the end of the particular year in which the annuitant under the plan attains 69 years of age,

(a) the plan is deemed to have been amended immediately after the particular year; and

(b) the plan as amended is deemed not to comply with the requirements of this section for its acceptance by the Minister for registration for the purposes of this Act.

Subsec. 146(13.2) added by 1997, c. 25, subsec. 41(4), applicable after 1996, except that

(a) it does not apply to a retirement savings plan where the annuitant under the plan attained 70 years of age before 1997;

(b) in applying the subsec. to a retirement savings plan where the annuitant under the plan attained 69 years of age in 1996, the references in that provisions to "69 years of age" shall be read as "70 years of age";

(c) it does not apply to a retirement savings plan where an annuity contract was issued before March 6, 1996 under, pursuant to or as the plan to provide the retirement income under the plan and, under the terms and conditions of the contract as they read immediately before that day,

(i) the day on which annuity payments are to begin under the plan is fixed and determined and is after the year in which the annuitant attains

(A) 69 years of age, where the annuitant had not attained that age before 1997, or

(B) 70 years of age, where the annuitant attained 69 years of age in 1996, and

(ii) the amount and timing of each annuity payment are fixed and determined; and

(d) it does not apply to a retirement savings plan that is part of a life insurance policy that was issued before March 6, 1996 and that has a life insurance component that is not a retirement savings plan where, under the terms and conditions of the policy as they read immediately before that day,

(i) the amount of each premium, if any, subsequently payable in respect of the life insurance component of the policy, and a date by which each such premium is to be paid, are fixed and determined,

(ii) the amount payable under the policy because of the death of the annuitant (determined without reference to any amount payable as, on account of, in lieu of payment of or in satisfaction of, a policy dividend or related interest) is fixed and determined, and

(iii) insurance on the life of the annuitant is provided under the policy for a period of time after the year in which the annuitant attains

(A) 69 years of age, where the annuitant had not attained that age before 1997, or

(B) 70 years of age, where the annuitant attained 69 years of age in 1996.

Where, because of (d) above, the subsec. does not apply to a retirement savings plan that is part of a life insurance policy, any part of a premium paid under the policy after March 5, 1996 that was not fixed and determined under the terms and conditions of the policy as they read at the end of that day is deemed, for the purposes of subsecs. 146(5), (5.1) and (8.2), not to have been paid under the policy.

under a written separation agreement, relating to a division of property between the transferor and the transferor's spouse or common-law partner or former spouse or common-law partner in settlement of rights arising out of, or on the breakdown of, their marriage or common-law partnership, and, where there has been such a payment or transfer of such property on behalf of the transferor before the maturity of the plan,

(c) the amount of the payment or transfer shall not, solely because of the payment or transfer, be included in computing the income of the transferor or the transferor's spouse or common-law partner or former spouse or common-law partner,

(d) no deduction may be made under subsection (5), (5.1) or (8.2) or section 8 or 60 in respect of the payment or transfer in computing the income of any taxpayer, and
